LONDON, July 11.—Coincident with a declaration of Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Minister, in the House of Commons tonight that it was inconceivable that Great Britain should enter into a naval armament race with the United States, it was learned here tonight that new British proposals involving a partial holiday in navy building until 1931, when the Washington Treaty will come up for revision, have been submitted to the United States and Japanese delegations to the tripartite naval conference at Geneva.

A renewed attitude of hopefulness for success of the conference was evidenced in British official circles tonight.

Although details of the proposals are so technical as to need considerable working out, their effect, roughly, would be that the United States should have an opportunity between now and revision of the Washington Treaty to build that number of 10,000-ton cruisers considered necessary by the Washington Government.

British Would Halt Building.

Great Britain, moreover, would agree to suspend or delay building of such large ships and concentrate her construction within agreed tonnage limits on smaller vessels considered necessary for protection of her trade routes.

With the degree of limitation and with the parity principle recognized till 1931, the nations would at that time meet for revision of their naval building programs, with the scope of the conference involving battleships also. It is by cutting down battleships that Great Britain hopes for her chief economies.

This naval "holiday," seemingly, is more of a holiday for Great Britain than for the United States. It amounts to Great Britain delaying building while the United States catches up, but it is also said to involve cutting down the British program as laid out by the Admiralty for the next few years, leaving the matter of catching up to Great Britain, on the smaller total, optional with the United States.

"The British Government would prefer the United States to build in all classes ship for ship and ton for ton with Great Britain," said a responsible spokesman of the Government today.

"There is no question of rivalry between the navies. But protection of sea routes in times of war against raiders requires large numbers of cruisers. It took twenty-three cruisers to catch the Emden in the last war.

"We had 114 cruisers in 1914 and our paper strength is only 71 now—that is, built, building and projected.

Misrepresentation Alleged.

"Our stand at this conference has been persistently misrepresented. We should prefer America to have a large navy in defensive ships. But 10,000-ton cruisers are not defensive but offensive vessels, chiefly for use with fleets. Parity in battle strength requires parity in these.

"Only one thing stands in the way of this conference at Geneva becoming as great or a greater success than President Harding's conference at Washington. That is recognition of the fact that cruisers are of two different kinds—that one kind, 10,000-tonners armed with 8-inch guns, are essentially for battle, and the other kind, of 7,500 tons or less and with 6-inch guns, are essentially defensive weapons for protection of sea routes.

"We object to being forced to build vessels we do not need to maintain battle parity. On other counts all that the conference needs to justify its calling completely, to make it a meeting of great value to the participating nations, is translation into actual agreements of the practical accords reached in the technical committees on submarines, destroyers and airplane carriers. These alone would be sufficient economy and sufficient limitation of building programs to make the conference a subject of mutual satisfaction."

Total Tonnage a Bar.

He contended, however, that as long as total tonnage limitation was insisted upon by the United States no agreement was possible.

Soviet Woman Is First of Sex To Assume Office as Censor

MOSCOW, July 11.—After creating the first woman Ambassador, Mme. Kollontai, accredited to Norway, then to Mexico, the Soviet has another feminist innovation in the shape of the first woman censor, Anna Borisovna Goldfarb. Miss Goldfarb began her duties Wednesday, and, though only acting temporarily during a month's leave of the regular censor, she has assumed the full responsibilities of the position, for which she is fitted by five years' work for the Soviet Foreign Office, three as personal secretary to Theodor Rothstein Director of the Press Department and the last two as Press Secretary at the London Embassy.

Miss Goldfarb speaks fluent English. French cartoonists have portrayed the censor as an elderly hag, Anastasie, they called her, armed with monstrous scissors. Miss Goldfarb is only 28 years old and is far from haggish in appearance.

GENEVA, July 11.—Today's public plenary session of the tripartite conference, which many here thought was destined to witness the collapse and failure of the whole negotiations for limitation of naval armament, was indefinitely postponed at the last moment out of respect to the memory of Kevin O'Higgins, Vice President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State and Irish member of the British delegation to the conference here, who was assassinated yesterday in a suburb of Dublin.

With the postponement of the public session and the advance of new British proposals offering to limit total cruiser tonnage to 400,000 if the United States agrees to restrict the number of 10,000-ton cruisers to from ten to thirteen the atmosphere in conference circles has become less oppressive, although it is still anything but clear.

Some See Hand of Governments.

But the real reasons for postponement of today's meeting, in the opinion of some here, were pressure from Washington and London resulting from American press dispatches from Geneva, the overnight awakening of British opinion to the belief that the British delegation here was following a path dangerous to Anglo-American friendship and understanding and the fact that W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty and head of the British delegation, and Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, the other British delegate, are making a big downward cut in their cruiser program.

According to this view the tragic death of the Irish Foreign Minister gave Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, as Chairman of the conference, an opportunity to help the British out of an embarrassing predicament.

Yesterday when Mr. Bridgeman communicated with Mr. Gibson both by word and letter asking if it would not be advisable to call off the plenary session the latter, then acting as LONDON, July 11.—"The Benson collection," the most important single private collection of Italian paintings in Europe, has been purchased outright by Sir Joseph Duveen, for $2,500,000. It is reported it will be sent to the United States.

The collection, which was formed during the last forty years by Robert H. Benson, senior partner of the London firm of merchant bankers, aided by his wife and well known students, often has been shown in the Royal Academy and other exhibitions. The Italian paintings alone comprise 114 examples. The collection, in the words of Mr. Benson himself, "succeeds in illustrating the history of six principal Italian schools in a way that would be difficult for a collection beginning today.

Apart from their artistic merits, many of the pictures have documentary interest. There are, for instance, six panels which include portraits of founders or donors who commissioned pictures for their cells or private altars, and there are seven other portraits, Sienese, Florentine, Milanese and Venetian, mostly of the fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries.

Depict Life of Christ.

Four panels represent the life of Christ and are by Duccio di Buoninsegna, sometimes called the father of modern painting. Other pictures notable for their historical and artistic interest include a double portrait of Lorenzo de Medici's banking partner, Francesco Sassetti, and his son, Teodoro, by Domenico Ghirlandaio; a Madonna and Child, by Antonello da Messina, Venetian painter, who was said to have introduced into Italy the Van Dyck method of oil painting; the delightful panel, "St. Jerome Reading," by Giovanni Bellini; "Madonna and Child With St. John," by Andrea del Sarto, and "Hylas and the Nymphs," by Piero de Cosimo Bernardino.

There also is "Christ Taking Leave of His Mother Before the Passion," an early work by Correggio, intensely tragic in feeling.

The huge total for which the collection sold works out about $20,000 per picture, which is a good deal more than Mr. Benson had to pay for most of them. Ghirlandaio's portrait, for instance, was obtained for $2,500, and Bellini's "St. Jerome Reading" for $950.

Mr. Benson, in strong contrast with the late Lord Leverhulme, was careful and discriminating, but a persistent collector. His wife, who was a daughter of the late R. H. Holford, owner of the famous Holford art collection, gave valuable assistance in making the collection.

All to Be Brought Here.

According to an announcement by Duveen Brothers, Fifth Avenue, last night, the Benson collection of Italian paintings bought by Sir Joseph Duveen, would be brought here as a whole. It was intimated that the price paid was $3,000,000.

It was also yesterday that none of the paintings had been purchased on order, and that all would go for the time being into the Duveen collection, to be disposed of as the occasion may offer.

The pictures are especially well known in England, where the public has viewed them frequently in loan exhibits, to which Mr. Benson was a generous contributor. All the paintings have been shown in turn at the Royal Academy Winter Exhibitions, from 1875 to 1910; at the Burlington Fine Arts Exhibitions from 1893 to 1914; at the New Gallery Exhibitions, 1883 to 1895, and at the Grat-

Many Killed and Hurt in Palestine Quake; Holy Sepulchre Church Seriously Damaged

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JERUSALEM, July 11.—Twenty-six persons were killed and thirty were injured in the Jerusalem district alone as a result of an earthquake in Palestine today.

At 3:04 o'clock this afternoon a violent earth tremor was felt in many parts of Palestine and Transjordania. The shocks lasted about seven seconds. The damage to property was comparatively slight, but the casualities were heavy owing to the character of the native buildings.

It is reported that thirty persons were killed at Nablus, the Biblical Shechem. Serious damage was caused to the Katholicon, the Church of the Crusaders or Greek Cathedral, in the Holy Sepulchre.

Many houses were damaged in the Old City where one persons was killed and twelve were injured. Houses collapsed on the Mount of Olives, where four were killed, and in a hotel at Jericho three Indian women visitors were killed.

The shock seems to have been severest in the Ramallah district, where ninety houses were destroyed in the Abu Dis Village. Lydda suffered, but the ports of Jaffa and Haifa was unscathed.

This was the worst earthquake in Palestine since 1837, when Safad was destroyed and 4,000 were killed.

JERUSALEM, July 11 (AP).—An earthquake of widespread and severe character has occurred in Palestine and Transjordania, official reports indicate.

Many houses in Jerusalem were damaged, including the Postoffice, the Zionist Executive Building and the Church Missionary Society's school.

The interior of Government House, the official residence of the High Commissioner, Lord Plumer, was seriously damaged and a Russian servant employed by the Commissioner was killed. The building is declared now to be unsafe.

The Hebrew University was considerably damaged, the walls being cracked. Part of the roof collapsed.

Falling houses killed four children on the Mount of Olives and five women at Ain Karim, the birthplace of John the Baptist, according to tradition.

Nablus is an Arab city of 25,000 people. There are very few Jews or Christians in the population, although a remnant of the ancient Samaritans occupy a territory only a few miles from the city.

The Biblical name of Nablus is Shechem. The twelfth chapter of Genesis tells of Jehovah's giving the land to Abraham. Shechem, according to the Book of Joshua, was constituted a sanctuary in which a slayer could take refuge until called before the congregation. The bones of Joseph were buried there. Abimelech and Rehoboam were crowned kings there.

In the first century A. D., the name of the city was changed to Neapolis, of which Nablus is a modern corruption. The principal industry is the manufacture of olive oil and soap.

CONFER ON BRACING DRY ENFORCEMENT

VITAL CHANGES FORESEEN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Important changes in the Andrews regulations governing the enforcement of the dry laws may grow out of the conference of prohibition administrators called to order here today by Seymour W. Lowman, former Lieutenant Governor of New York, who is about to become Assistant Secretary of the Treasury as the successor of Brig. Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, and by Dr. James M. Doran, Commissioner of Prohibition.

The purpose of the round-up is to devise ways and means of bringing about "tighter enforcement." This conference also will give Mr. Lowman and Commissioner Doran an opportunity to size up the field administrators and determine whether they are the right men for the jobs.

Commissioner to Be Responsible.

It already is apparent that under the new order of things the Commissioner of Prohibition instead of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury is to have the lion's share of responsibility in enforcing the Volstead law.

Whether General Andrews's policy of decentralization is to be continued will be considered in the course of the week. General Andrews gave his field administrators plenary powers in their respective districts and appeals to Washington generally were without effect. Complaint has been made by representatives of the alcohol-using industries that the plan of decentralization insofar as it applied to the permissive features of the law, had fallen down. They have asked that the Andrews regulations be modified so as to permit appeals to Washington from rulings of administrators in the matter of basic, as well as renewal permits, to purchase and move alcohol, whisky or wine. Representatives of the alcohol-using trades will be heard by the administrators on Wednesday.

Larger Field Forces Recommended.

In today's conference, it was said, administrators generally recommended increases in the field forces as a means of landing the elusive bootlegger. Acquiescence in these proposals would mean a substantial increase in appropriations, and the Treasury authorities, it was suggested, were not yet ready to ask for an increased budget for prohibition enforcement at a time when other branches of the Administration are trying to keep down expenses.

Reports made relative to enforcement conditions varied widely. Some administrators reported progress, while others made it plain that they were making little or no progress. Exchanges of confidence among administrators made it clear that observance or enforcement lags in such big centres as New York and Chicago and that under-cover methods in such centres had not markedly reduced the output and sale of illicit liquor.

Administrators along the Canadian border reported that smuggling operations were declining, except possibly in the Detroit area, and that liquor now offered for sale throughout the country is generally of the "moonshine" variety.

Among the problems that vex the administrators is the slowness of prosecutions in the courts, due largely to clogged dockets. Complaint is also made that local police are not extending to Federal agents

NINE MEN ARRESTED IN O'HIGGINS MURDER

DUBLIN, July 11.—Nine young men have been arrested by the Civic Guards in their search for the assassins of Vice President Kevin O'Higgins and will be charged tomorrow with conspiracy and membership in an illegal organization.

The names of seven of them are: Kerlin M. Fitzpatrick, George Plunkett Brendan, Kevin O'Carroll, Henry Hunt, Aubrey Hunt, Owen Donnelly and Joseph Donelly.

Meanwhile the body of the murdered Minister lies in state in Mansion House, where it was taken today from his home. It will be transferred tomorrow to the Catholic church at Westland Row, whence it will be taken to Glasnevin Cemetery, with a state funeral on Wednesday.

Large crowds of Dublin citizens passed today through the Mansion House to view the body, which is clothed in the habit of a religious order and holds a crucifix in its clasped hands. The face is in repose, bearing n sign of the attack, and gives the impression of absolute calm.

Story of Death Told at Inquest.

At the inquest this afternoon Dr. Brennan, Coroner, and the South County Dublin jury found that Mr. O'Higgins was wilfully murdered by three unknown men. They condemned in the strongest manner "the cruel outrage," and expressed the hope that the perpetrators would be brought to justice.

The principal witness was Professor John McNeill, former Minister of Education, who told how he saw three men shoot down Mr. O'Higgins and then drive off in the stolen automobile, which was afterward found abandoned in a Dublin suburb.

"When I stooped over him," said Mr. McNeill. "I thought Mr. O'Higgins was on the point of death and I repeated some customary prayers for the dying. He then began to speak to me, and the first thing he said was: 'I forgive my murderers.' He gave me directions as regards taking charge of his papers and told me to give a message to his wife, to tell her that he loved her eternally."

The doctors who attended Mr. O'Higgins after his removal to his home said that, though he lived for nearly five hours after the shooting, death was inevitable, for he had eight wounds in the head and body, any one of which would prove mortal.

Among the messages received by the Governor General of the Irish Free State was the following from King George:

"I have learned with horror of the death under such tragic circumstances of Kevin O'Higgins. Please convey to Mrs. O'Higgins the very deep sympathy of the Queen and myself on the cruel loss she and her children have suffered."

Another message was from the Governor General of Ulster.

De Valera Condemns Slaying.

Eamon De Valera today added his personal denunciation of the crime to the repudiation of it yesterday by the Adjutant General of the Irish Republican Army.

"The assassination of Kevin O'Higgins," said Mr. De Valera, "is murder and inexcusable from any standpoint. I am confident no Republican organization is responsible for it, or would give it countenance. It is the duty of every citizen to set his face sternly against anything of the kind. It is a crime that cuts to

SUSPECTED SLAYER OF 2 WOMEN RESISTS DAY OF QUESTIONING

TWO MORE BUNDLES FOUND

Carving Knife Is Seized as Clue In Murders—Doubt Missing Girl Was Third Victim.

Ludwig Lee, accused of the savage murder of two women, was unshaken yesterday in his denial of the crime. Hour after hour he met the accusing questions and at the end of his inquisition he smiled at his examiners and there was a twinkle in his bulging brown eyes.

Confronted with a circumstantial case, which was made stronger by additional finds during the day, the prisoner stoutly denied that he had killed Miss Sarah Elizabeth Brownell, 70 years old, and Mrs. Alfred Bennett, whose dismembered bodies were found Sunday morning in the rooming-house which the unmarried woman conducted at 28 Prospect Place, Brooklyn.

All of the verbal ingenuity at the command of the police and District Attorney Charles J. Dodd failed to bring a damaging admission from Lee. He answered every question they put, leaning forward at times as he struggled with imperfect English, but there was no alteration of the story he told on Sunday when he was arrested as the slayer. He went through the ordeal as calmly as a man playing chess, and as slowly.

Agreed to Wed One Victim.

He disclosed, as though it were but a bit of gossip unrelated to the case, that Miss Brownell and he had agreed to marry and settle in his native city of Oslo, Norway. The elderly woman, he said, had proposed and he had accepted. She had financed him in an unsuccessful restaurant venture, he said. When he was told that a witness had reported that he and the woman had quarreled frequently he brushed the quarrels aside as mere disputes.

Early in the morning, after a short halt in the all-night examination, the detectives returned to the task of hammering away at the suspect. They related vividly the scene in the cellar as they pictured the murders. They pressed for more light on his movements on the night of the Fourth of July, when they allege he killed Miss Brownell for revenge or money. Passing from that crime they came to the death of Mrs. Bennett, who was slain on Saturday night when she threatened exposure of the crime which she had discovered when she went to the cellar to see about a leaky water pipe.

The suspect said that he had seen Mrs. Bennett but denied that he had harmed her. He reiterated his statement that he had not seen Miss Brownell, who employed him as handy man, since July 4. Then the detectives told Lee that the crime in the cellar had been linked to the parts of a woman's limbs found on Saturday at Battery Park. He listened unmoved when they told him that his friend, Christian Jensen, a grocery clerk, had identified wrappings found in the park as paper he had given to Lee.

Asked About Missing Girl.

A volley of questions was put to the accused man concerning the possible fate of Miss Evelyn De Martino, an 18-year-old Brooklyn girl who disappeared on June 30. The girl lived at 16 Lincoln Place, the same address as Mrs. Bennett. Mrs. Mary De Martino, her mother, said that Evelyn might have visited the Prospect Place house in search of Mrs. Bennett. Lee said that he knew nothing of the girl. Later the police eliminated the missing young woman as a possible third victim. They said they were convinced that she had merely run away from home, after a family spat, although they admitted that she had not been found.

The final phase of Lee's questioning dealt with the finding of two additional bundles containing parts of the two victims. Up to date six bundles have been found, and only the feet and part of a limb of one of the dead women are missing. The calm, collected man who had looked upon the bodies without visible emotion was unmoved by the recital of

FARM LEADERS URGE OVERRIDING COOLIDGE

PLAN FIGHT IN CONGRESS

By The Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 11.—Demands for satisfactory farm aid legislation at the next session of Congress or an overthrow of the Administration in 1928 marked addresses before the Northwestern Agricultural Conference here today.

In every case, speakers endorsed the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill, vetoed last Winter by President Coolidge, and one called on the farmers to carry on the fight until "some President" signs a bill embodying those principles.

While formal resolutions will not come before the conference until its closing session tomorrow, delegates representing farm organizations in fourteen States applauded frequently the references to the McNary-Haugen bill.

In an address tonight, Representative Charles Brand of Ohio, himself a Republican, warned his party that failure to pass satisfactory legislation might enable "the opposition to avail itself of this great opportunity."

United States Senator-elect Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky said any legislation would fail "unless it brings the power of the Government to control its surplus so that it might be fed to the markets as the need of consumption requires."

Caraway Notes Tariff Rises.

"The President," said Senator T. H. Caraway of Arkansas, "says to enable the farmer to get a fair price for pigs would be class legislation; therefore he vetoes the bill designed to aid them, and with the same pen signs a declaration that raises the tariff 50 per cent. on pig iron."

Representatives L. J. Dickinson and Gilbert N. Haugen of Iowa, the latter co-author of the McNary-Haugen bill, stressed the condition of the farmer and urged the principles of the vetoed bill as the only satisfactory solution offered.

Representative Dickinson declared that if satisfactory farm relief legislation was not passed by the Seventieth Congress next Winter, "farm relief will become the major issue of the 1928 campaign."

Representative Gilbert N. Haugen of Iowa, his associate on the measure, insisted that the major political parties, through platform promises, were in duty bound to pass legislation looking to relief of the agricultural situation.

The conference was called by the American Council of Agriculture, organized here two years ago, and which now includes representatives of forty-nine farm organizations principally in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Montana.

"The deflation of agriculture," said Representative Dickinson, "has not been given the economic or political consideration to which it is entitled.

"Industry should not be encouraged and protected to the discrimination of our farmers. Party pledges without performance and without any real effort to perform is unpardonable. No political party can endure with such a record.

"Forty million farmers are watch-

EX-MAYOR UNRULY ON STAND

THE LIE IS PASSED TO HIM

He Shows Little Knowledge of the Transit Situation or Financial Affairs.

WOULD REMOVE DEBT LIMIT

Admits He Does Not Know How Many Miles of Subways Were Built in His Regime.

Testifying under subpoena at the readjustment plan hearing of the Transit Commission, former Mayor John F. Hylan declared yesterday that he did not trust Samuel Untermyer, special counsel of the commission, and that he suspected that the investigation conducted by Mr. Untermyer was for the purpose of laying a foundation for an increased car fare. Mr. Hylan asserted that what the people of the city wanted were not investigations but better service, and that they could get it, even during the rush hours, if the commission would order the transit companies to run more trains and cars.

Mr. Hylan proved difficult for Mr. Untermyer to handle. He attacked Mr. Untermyer repeatedly, and charged the law firm of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, with which Mr. Untermyer was connected, with having prevented the city from putting buses on the streets during the Hylan Administration. He referred to the Admiral Realty Company case and made the unfounded charge that Mr. Untermyer had received a fee in this case, which was to test the validity of the dual subway contracts, from the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, a defendant in the action, while acting for the plaintiff.

Mr. Hylan also waxed at various stages of the hearing a photostatic copy of several pages of the Congressional Record, which, he said, contained charges against Mr. Untermyer which would have prevented his employment by the commission if the Commissioners had known about them. This photostatic copy never got into the record of the hearing, although Chairman John F. Gilchrist finally permitted Mr. Hylan to hand it to him, saying that the commission would not receive it as evidence. Mr. Hylan said after the hearing that it contained charges by a member of Congress against Mr. Untermyer in connection with some New Jersey litigation. It was learned later that the case in question was litigated thirty-seven years ago and finally settled and that the charge against Mr. Untermyer referred to by Mr. Hylan was made at the time Mr. Untermyer was appointed counsel to the Pujo Congressional Committee in the so-called "money trust" investigation.

Witness Vague on Transit.

Under questioning by Mr. Untermyer Mr. Hylan showed little or no exact knowledge of the transit situation. Mr. Hylan said that he not only advocated the proposed constitutional amendment permitting the city to borrow $300,000,000 for subway construction outside the constitutional 10 per cent. debt limit but favored removal of the debt limit entirely to permit the city to build all the subways necessary to give a seat to every passenger, even during rush hours. He dismissed the question of interest and amortization of bonds that might be issued by the city with a limitless borrowing capacity by saying that the city could "cross that bridge when it came to it."

The interest and amortization, he admitted, would have to be provided for in each year's budget and paid out of taxes. He asserted that the city could reimburse itself out of profits of municipal subway operation and insisted that, despite the rising cost of subway construction, the city could operate these subways with profit at a 5-cent fare.

On most of the questions dealing with details of the subway problem Mr. Hylan either said that he did not know or did not remember. He did not know how many miles of subway were built during his eight years as Mayor. He knew nothing about the financial affairs of the Interborough or the B. M. T. He did not know anything about the New York Rapid Transit Corporation, the B. M. T. subsidiary which has the contract with the city for the operation of the subways of the B. M. T. system, and described it as a holding company without being able to say what other companies he thought it held.

Mr. Hylan twisted out of every attempt made by Mr. Untermyer to have him sponsor the report of the Board of Transportation that it would require a fare of 10 and 8 cents to make the new city subways self-supporting, although the man-

PARIS, July 11.—Nineteen million francs in securities today went up in smoke on the altar of the recovering franc.

Solemn ceremonies accompanied the burning of these obligations, which took place in the great blast furnace in the Government Mint, officials of the State in formal dress officiating. The securities thus destroyed were those turned over to the Government by the holders as a voluntary contribution to aid the recovery of the franc which opened a year ago when the financial crisis was at its worst.

Many people brought to the Government bonds and State securities they owned, voluntarily surrendering the benefits of these holdings to aid the franc on the exchange market. These obligations have been duly canceled from those subscribing to the international debt and it remained only to destroy the documents.

Characteristically, the French Government officials made this into a ceremony and the cremating of these papers was conducted with the greatest solemnity.

At the Mint were Senator Le Brun, head of the National Sinking Fund; Major Desmazes, the representative of Marshal Joffre, who was the chief sponsor of the voluntary contributions; M. Dally, the Director of the Mint, and many bankers, Government and financial officials. In high hats and Prince Albert coats, they watched the flames quickly consume the certificates, whose total value was just over 19,000,000 francs.

Three Fall Out of Plane 1,000 Feet in Air; Canadian Surveyors Die in Strange Accident

WINNIPEG, Canada, July 11 (AP).—Three members of a Manitoba aerial photographic survey party were killed near Fairford, Manitoba, this afternoon when in some unexplained manner they fell from their machine a distance of about 1,000 feet.

The dead are Flight Officer W. C. Weaver of Melfort, Sask., pilot in charge; A. T. Hardley, photographic mechanic, of Lorne, Man.; F. H. Wrong, Surveyor of the Topographical Survey Branch, Ottawa.

Eyewitnesses say the plane entered a cloudbank. Lost to view for several minutes, it later was observed following an erratic course through the clouds. The watchers were suddenly startled to see three men come hurtling through the air and the machine follow in a nose dive to earth.

The body of Flight Officer Weaver was recovered in a badly mangled condition near the shore of Lake Manitoba, at Hilbers. The body of one of the others was also recovered.

bers of the board were his own appointees and he approved the report. After he had expressed confidence in John H. Delaney, Chairman of the Board, and was asked if Mr. Delaney and his associates had not thought that it would take a ten-cent fare, Mr. Hylan said:

"Oh, they may have thought that, just as you thought you were going to get a half-million-dollar fee in the Stokes case and only got $200,000."

Disregards the Chairman.

Mr. Untermyer found it virtually impossible to proceed with his examination of Mr. Hylan in an orderly manner, as the latter, despite repeated warnings by Chairman Gilchrist, insisted on saying much more in reply to Mr. Untermyer's questions than adherence to the usual legal procedure would require. This resulted in much of his testimony being stricken from the record, so that the transcript contained large gaps and the pages resembled the front pages of a Paris newspaper during the World War.

Once started on a statement, nothing seemed able to stop Mr. Hylan. Mr. Untermyer's remonstrances and objections, though effective in keeping the witness's remarks off the official record, failed to stem his flow of words, and only the banging of Chairman Gilchrist's gavel at times became loud enough to silence by mere preponderance of noise the former Mayor.

Mr. Hylan, whose resentment toward Mr. Untermyer is believed to date from the removal of his first Police Commissioner, Frederick H. Bugher, whom Mr. Untermyer suggested, after three weeks in office, seemed to be very well satisfied with his conduct on the witness stand. He smiled with apparent satisfaction each time he attacked Mr. Untermyer.

"You're not going to pull any of that Hettrick stuff on me this time," he told Mr. Untermyer early in his examination, referring to John T. Hettrick, concerning whose relations with him he was examined by Mr. Untermyer, as counsel for the Lockwood legislative investigating committee, several years ago.

Hearing Room Is Full.

In anticipation of the appearance of Mr. Hylan, the commission's hearing room at 270 Madison Avenue was filled with interested auditors, most of who regarded Mr. Hylan's examination as in the nature of a show and manifested their amusement by frequent bursts of laughter. Among the most elated of the spectators were representatives of the B. M. T., which has been under attack by Mr. Untermyer during most of the investigation. Former Governor Nathan L. Miller, special counsel of the B. M. T., turned his chair sideways to prevent his frequent smiles of amusement from being seen by Mr. Untermyer. Travis H. Whitney, Vice President of the company, regarded Mr. Hylan with a gaze compounded of amusement and amazement.

To borrow a simile from the prize ring, Mr. Hylan on taking the witness chair wasted no time in sparring, but rushed from his corner at the sound of the gong.

"You have expressed a desire to be heard in this hearing, have you not?" Mr. Untermyer inquired.

"I have expressed no desire to be heard," replied Mr. Hylan. "I said that if I was subpoenaed I would be here. You can't put words in my mouth, Mr. Untermyer. You might as well start right in the beginning."

"We will start all right," said Mr. Untermyer.

"You won't ask me any tricky questions and get away with it!" shouted Mr. Hylan.

Warned of Contempt.

"The witness might as well be notified that there is such a thing as contempt of this commission," said Mr. Untermyer, addressing Chairman Gilchrist.

"All right," retorted Mr. Hylan. "Go right ahead and proceed to place me in contempt if you want to. You're not going to bulldoze or frighten me."

Mr. Untermyer asked Mr. Hylan if he had been correctly quoted in a newspaper article, in which he was reported as having said that he would be "glad of an opportunity to take the stand."

"I said I would come if I were subpoenaed," replied Mr. Hylan. "I haven't any confidence in the counsel of the commission."

"The commission has confidence in him," said Chairman Gilchrist.

Mr. Untermyer appealed to Chairman Gilchrist to make the witness answer the questions categorically, and Mr. Gilchrist directed Mr. Hylan to give responsive answers.

"That's the only answer I can make," Mr. Hylan retorted. "It's the only answer I am going to give."

"I think we ought to explain to you——" Mr. Untermyer began.

"You need not explain anything to me, Untermyer," interrupted Mr. Hylan. "Go right ahead and ask your questions."

Mr. Untermyer, who was attempting to explain to Mr. Hylan that the rules of the commission required him to give direct answers to questions and permitted him to make explanations or statements later, made another try. "I think I should explain to the witness——" he began.

"I don't care for your explanation," Mr. Hylan again interrupted. "I don't need it."

"The witness will listen to the explanation," shouted Chairman Gilchrist, vainly trying to check Mr. Hylan by pounding with his gavel.

"I don't want it," Mr. Hylan shouted. "I did not come here to have him explain anything to me."

Ignores the Chairman.

Chairman Gilchrist tried to explain that Mr. Untermyer wished to explain the rules to the witness and that this explanation was desired for the record.

"I've got a record," Mr. Hylan shouted, waving several photostatic sheets at Mr. Untermyer. "I'm going to be heard on the Congressional Record and what they had to say about you."

Mr. Untermyer continued to give his explanation of the rules of the Commission, as Mr. Hylan lolled back in his chair with an affectation of great weariness.

"Don't tire yourself, Mr. Untermyer," he said. "I'm not listening. I don't want to hear it."

"The commission requires that the witness shall answer each question as it is put and answer it categorically," Mr. Untermyer continued.

"I am not going to answer your tricky questions your way," said Mr. Hylan. "Now keep that in mind."

"We will see," said Mr. Untermyer.

"You are not going to pull any of the Hettrick stuff on me this time," said Mr. Hylan.

"Your friend Hettrick—" Mr. Untermyer started to say.

"Your friend Hettrick," rejoined Mr. Hylan. "You went up to prison and spoke to somebody and tried to get——"

Chairman Gilchrist banged vigorously with his gavel without any effect on Mr. Hylan except to get him to grin.

"I don't think the gavel is of much use," said Mr. Untermyer. "This, of course, is all off the record."

"I have a public stenographer here, so the record, so far as I am concerned, will be correct," said Mr. Hylan.

"I ask to strike out that statement," said Mr. Untermyer.

"My stenographer will take it down so that it will be in the record," said Mr. Hylan.

Asks About Civic League.

Mr. Untermyer informed Mr. Hylan that he had been called as head of the People's Civic League and asked about that organization.

Mr. Hylan said that this was a reorganization of the old Five-Cent Fare League, formed for his unsuccessful primary campaign for renomination in 1926.

"When was it reorganized?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"Several months ago, when they found that they were going to have an investigation and you were in it, we concluded that we ought to reorganize the Five-Cent Fare League and watch you," Mr. Hylan replied.

"I ask to strike out the answer," said Mr. Untermyer.

"I want my stenographer to take it down," said Mr. Hylan. "That is what we are doing, watching you."

Mr. Untermyer finally brought out that the People's Civic League was in process of organization and that it had no members of its own, except those on the lists of the old Five-Cent Fare League.

During this phase of the examination, Mr. Hylan virtually made the charge that Mr. Untermyer had received a fee from the Interborough, while representing a plaintiff in a suit to test the validity of the dual subway contracts and that this payment was eventually charged to the city.

This was a reference to the Admiral Realty Company case, in which Louis Marshall, Mr. Untermyer's former law partner, was retained by the attorneys for the Admiral Company to argue the case before the Court of Appeals. Mr. Hylan declared that Mr. Untermyer's name appeared in a printed brief of the case, and shouted:

"What I want to know is how much did you get out of it?"

"I move that this be stricken from the record," said Mr. Untermyer.

"That's why I brought my stenographer," said Mr. Hylan.

Mr. Hylan's remark was greeted with laughter. This led Mr. Untermyer to say that he saw nothing funny in it and to ask Chairman Gilchrist a moment later what was the reason for the claque that appeared to be in the hearing room.

"I am trying to be polite," Mr. Untermyer continued, in an effort to get Mr. Hylan to answer his questions.

"I don't want any of your politeness," retorted Mr. Hylan. "You've got a knife in every polite word you say."

Rebukes the Witness.

Mr. Hylan's answers brought a rebuke from Commissioner Charles C. Lockwood. "The commission expects common courtesy from you, even though you do not like its counsel," Mr. Lockwood said.

"If the commission is working for the people it ought to have a counsel who has the respect of the people. He has been kidding the people enough. Let's have it out."

Mr. Hylan again attempted to read from his photostatic copies of The Congressional Record and it required several minutes steady pounding with his gavel by Chairman Gilchrist to check him.

"Were you concerned with the passage of the unification law of 1921?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"I was concerned with a good many things," Mr. Hylan replied. "Unification is a bunk word to hoodwink the people so that they won't demand better service. Unification might be all right if you weren't in it."

"Don't you know that it is mandatory upon the commission to prepare a readjustment plan?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"It isn't mandatory to put you in it," replied Mr. Hylan. "Do you know what I think, Mr. Untermyer? I think you are trying to get your son nominated for Supreme Court Judge."

"I presume likely it is," said Mr. Hylan. "They are making a bad start with you."

Questioned on Transit Report.

Mr. Untermyer questioned Mr. Hylan at length concerning the report of the Board of Transportation, which was approved by the Board of Estimate and which put forward the new city subway system now under construction. Mr. Hylan said he appointed Mr. Delaney and the other members of the board and had confidence in them. Mr. Hylan agreed that construction costs had increased, and Mr. Untermyer then read from the report that Mr. Delaney and his associates estimated that it would require an increased fare to make the new lines self-supporting.

"You knew then, did you not, when you voted for this new city subway that it would take the first year a ten-cent fare to support it?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"I knew nothing of the kind," said Mr. Hylan angrily. "That is just what you have been trying to lead up to. You are not going to put those words into my mouth."

"Does that mean a ten-cent fare the first year and an eight-cent fare the second year?" Mr. Untermyer continued.

"You're trying to steal a little five-cent fare glory," replied Mr. Hylan. "You're welcome to it if you will maintain the five-cent fare. That's what the people want."

"Suppose there were a deficit in operation; how would you finance it?" Mr. Untermyer inquired.

"I'm not going to answer questions on suppositions," Mr. Hylan retorted. "Suppose the world came to an end tomorrow, what would happen to you?"

There was loud laughter, and Mr. Untermyer rejoined:

"I hope to go to a different place than you."

Mr. Untermyer continued his efforts to try to find out how Mr. Hylan expected to pay for the operation of the new subways and asked if he did not realize that it was necessary to make a supposition since the lines are not yet completed.

"I realize that it was your law firm that obtained an injunction and stopped the Board of Estimate from appropriating money to buy buses and stopped municipal operation of buses," Mr. Hylan replied. "The people ought to know it whether it is on the record or not. My stenographer will take it."

Vague on Financing.

Mr. Hylan's examination follows:

Q.—Do you know how much the city is now paying annually to maintain a 5-cent fare on the existing roads? A.—I don't know. I know there is a little something—a few million dollars—in the budget to pay interest on the bonds, of course, and the sinking fund; I know that.

Q.—How much is the city now paying annually in the budget to maintain a 5-cent fare? A.—Probably about $10,000,000.

Q.—It is about $14,000,000 a year, is it not? A.—I do know.

Q.—I want to ask you about the dual contracts. You agree with me, do you not, that the dual contracts were a great outrage?

Q.—Don't you know that the Admiral Realty Company attacked the constitutionality of the dual contracts, and that Mr. Clarence Shearn was associated with the counsel for the Admiral Realty Company and that the Court of Appeals divided four to three on the constitutionality of the law? A.—I know, but everybody believes it was a collusive suit.

The Lie is Passed.

Mr. Untermyer gave Mr. Hylan the lie direct during the latter's attempt to make it appear that Mr. Untermyer had done something discreditable in the Admiral Realty Company case and had taken a fee from the Interborough, one of the defendants.

"That is a lie," Mr. Untermyer said.

"You can deny things, Untermyer," Mr. Hylan retorted, "but you can't get away with it all of the time. You know what Abraham Lincoln said."

"You're not taking this down, Mr. Stenographer," said Mr. Untermyer.

"I don't know but that a lawyer for the plaintiff who took money from the defendant would be disbarred if action was brought against him," Mr. Hylan continued. "Everybody believes it was a collusive suit. You always pretend to be doing something for nothing, but you're the fellow who always gets something someway pretty big."

Q.—As I understand you, then, you cannot or will not shed any light on the question of how the city should deal with the question of deficits arising from the construction of the new subway, if there are any? A.—If there are any. Well, when we get to that, we will answer that question.

Q.—In the meantime, you know, do you not, that the city is putting out this money? A.—I have got a suggestion to make that if this commission will see that trains are added and cars are added to give the people service now and that if the Governor will call a special session of the Legislature and override that injunction that is now against the city authorities from putting buses on the street, giving the people buses in every part of the city, municipal buses, we will get some service, if that is what you want.

Q.—How will that pay the interest on the bonds for the new subway? A.—I know, but that will be in the future. That is not now.

Q.—When they buy the bonds now, they want to know how the interest is going to be paid. A.—The people will take care of that. Don't worry about that.

Q.—You mean the people who own the bonds? A.—The people of the city will take care of that. What they want is service.

Forgets Recapturable Lines.

Mr. Hylan said he could not remember the B. M. T. and Interborough lines which the city was entitled to recapture or the amounts it would have to pay for them. He also took a fling at Mr. Untermyer's activity in getting at the ownership of transit stocks.

"If you'd worry half as much about service as you do about stock holdings we'd get somewhere," he said. "So far about all you've shown is that Jerry Dahl's wife owns some stock. What you are doing in this investigation is trying to drive down the B. M. T. stock, just as you did in Bethlehem Steel."

When told by Mr. Untermyer that his frequent criticisms of service constituted an attack on the commission, Mr. Hylan retorted that he was not attacking the commission, but Mr. Untermyer.

"I meant to ask you why you did not put Oscar Waters on the stand," Mr. Hylan continued. "You subpoenaed him. Why didn't you call him?"

Mr. Waters, a negro, was formerly attendant at the office of Gerhard M. Dahl, Chairman of the B. M. T. Board of Directors. He supported Mr. Hylan in the 1925 primary campaign after he had left Mr. Dahl's employ and is understood to be the witness upon whose information Mr. Hylan based the charge that Tammany's decision to deny him renomination was the result of a traction conspiracy.

Mr. Hylan did not know the amount of the city's investment in the B. M. T. or Interborough subways. He explained that he did not try to remember such details. He said he did not believe that the Nassau Street subway ever should be built and that he was not in favor of including the surface lines in any combination.

"We are agreed about that," said Mr. Untermyer.

Would Lift Ban on Debt.

When questioned about the possibility of recapturing the B. M. T. subways and asked where the city would get the $228,000,000 required in addition to at least $600,000,000 necessary for new subways, Mr. Hylan said:

"Extend the $300,000,000 limitation the same as they did with the water bonds. Get another constitutional amendment the same as they did with the water bonds; no constitutional limitation there. Water is a necessity to the people of the city. So is decent rapid transit service."

During one of Mr. Hylan's statements concerning the five-cent fare, Mr. Untermyer asked him if he did not know that some persons were paying two and sometimes three fares to get to and from work on surface and rapid transit lines.

"Yes, and if the Transit Commission doesn't get busy, they'll be paying more," he replied.

This remark was stricken from the record. Mr. Hylan said:

"Real truth! When it hits the nail on the head, you don't want it in the record."

Counsel Shows Resentment.

A little later, the question having no relation to anything that preceded it, Mr. Hylan asked Mr. Untermyer:

"Have you any stock or bonds in the B. M. T. or I. R. T.?"

Mr. Untermyer's objection indicated resentment at the question. Mr. Hylan chuckled and said:

"You don't like that, do you?"

At Mr. Untermyer's insistence that this be stricken from the record, Mr. Hylan said:

"You like to have your own way all the time and bamboozle the people, but you can't bamboozle me."

Mr. Hylan showed little knowledge when he attempted to support his contention that the commission could order the companies to run more subway trains during the rush hours. When informed by Commissioner Lockwood that the commission's engineers had reported that the companies were giving all the rush-hour service possible with safety through the Times Square, Grand Central and De Kalb Avenue stations, considered the three key points on the two systems, Mr. Hylan replied that this might be true of two or three points, but that more trains could be run elsewhere in the subways.

Questioned as to a long list of specific improvements in service brought about by the commission, Mr. Hylan expressed ignorance of all of them.

"Fine, a good thing," Mr. Hylan replied to such questions. "I want to compliment the commission."

When these replies were stricken out Mr. Hylan said:

"You're always looking for good things; you don't want the commission to have any."

Mr. Hylan grew a little weary of this line of questioning. "You've got everything there but sweeping the dust off the sidewalks," he said.

This was expunged from the record by order of Chairman Gilchrist, who rapped angrily for order.

"Don't be angry," said Mr. Hylan, addressing the Chairman. "Try to be a gentleman, even though you are a commissioner."

At the conclusion of his testimony, Mr. Hylan was informed that he might make a statement, provided he did not indulge in personalities. He attempted to introduce his photostatic copies of the Congressional Record. The three commissioners looked them over and shook their heads.

Calls Statement Not Pertinent.

"This is no more pertinent than your statement about the litigation over the bikes," said Commissioner Lockwood. "The Court of Appeals stopped them, not Mr. Untermyer nor Guggenheimer nor Mr. Marshall, and we people of this State are under a government of laws. The Court of Appeals stopped them, and this is a good-enough commission to respect the decision of the courts, and I am sure you, as an ex-Mayor and ex-Judge, on reflection would do the same. This is in no way pertinent."

"If you won't accept it for the record, I think you ought to have the information," said Mr. Hylan, as he left the copies on Chairman Gilchrist's desk.

Mr. Hylan then said he had a statement. "I would like to read it," he said. "I am going to give out copies of it, anyhow, whether it is accepted or not."

"I want you to know that it is not privileged," said Mr. Untermyer. "If it is published and there are any libels in it, there will be an accounting."

"Oh, I will be around town," said Mr. Hylan, nonchalantly. "I'll take the responsibility for anything I put out. Your name is mentioned only a couple of times, Untermyer."

Mr. Untermyer suggested that the commission receive the statement and look it over before deciding whether or not to include it in the record. The hearing was then adjourned to Monday.

CALLS HYLAN IGNORANT.

Untermyer Says Ex-Mayor Has No Knowledge of Transit.

Samuel Untermyer, special counsel of the Transit Commission, issued the following statement last night in reply to a question as to whether he wished to say anything concerning former Mayor Hylan's attacks on him at the transit hearing:

"A reply to the flood of false and scurrilous abuse by a man of the Hylan type would serve only to dignify it and to deflect from the significant testimony that was literally forced from him. That disgraceful self-revelation could not have taken place in a court where the power exists to punish for contempts committed in its presence. The culprit would have found himself securely lodged in jail before he had been five minutes on the witness stand.

"It has been my rule not to discuss for publication proceedings in which I am concerned as counsel except in the court room. I shall adhere to that rule, except to say that the scene was manifestly staged by Hylan in the hope of camouflaging his incredible ignorance of everything pertaining to transit. But I am satisfied that it will not have that effect. He was infuriated beyond control by the exposure that his much advertised People's Civic League of 200,000 was demonstrated to be a myth, and tried hard by his old-time stunt of invective to cover his tracks, but it did not work this time."

HYLAN ASSAILS SMITH FOR OPPOSING TUNNEL

Asserts the Governor Wronged Staten Islanders—Statement Rejected by Commission.

Criticism of Governor Smith for signing a bill that prevented the construction of the Staten Island tunnel under the Narrows and prevented the consummation of the plan to connect Staten Island with the city's rapid transit system by way of this tunnel was expressed yesterday by former Mayor Hylan in the statement submitted to the Transit Commission but not accepted by that body. Mr. Hylan declared that in signing this bill the Governor not only wronged the people of Staten Island but checked the development of Flushing and Jamaica bays. His statement said:

"If Untermyer and the State Transit Commission want to give the people service on the transit lines they should:

"First, order more trains and cars on the existing subway, elevated and surface lines.

"Second, ask Governor Smith to call a special session of the Legislature and give the Board of Estimate the power to purchase and operate municipal buses, instead of giving to some favored corporation the valuable bus franchises worth $150,000,000.

"Third, continue the subway construction as planned as rapidly as possible and plan and build more and more subways, but let the municipality operate them so the people may get service.

"Fourth, if the operating companies do not comply with the law and the dual subway contracts and give the people service, the State Transit Commission should aid the city in recapture of these subways at the earliest possible day.

"The present investigation has brought out nothing new that was not brought out several years ago."

NEW STRIKE THREAT AGAINST THE I. R. T.

Union Organizers Object to Working Agreement Drawn Up by Company.

A threat of another strike being called by the union of Interborough Rapid Transit employes affiliated with the American Federation of Labor was made last night in a statement given out by J. H. Coleman, union organizer, following a meeting in the Continental Hotel.

"We see clearly that this company will not deal honorably with our members, and that we will have to give them what they are inviting—a fight," Mr. Coleman said. "We sincerely hope that some means may be found to bring this company to realization that it is dealing with human beings without necessity for inconvenience to the general public, but that hope we concede now is a forlorn one."

Mr. Coleman objected vigorously to a new working contract that the road is offering to its employes, in which the employes agree not to join any union affiliated with the American Federation.

"This contract business is a high-handed bit of bull-dozing," he said. "The company has ignored even its puppet, the P. R. T. Brotherhood. This contract was not authorized by the Brotherhood locals, as the constitution of this 'company union' provides. There has been no meeting of minds on this thing. It is simply a company coup."

P. J. Shea, general executive board member of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, took a gloomy view of possibilities for a peaceful settlement with the company.

"There is nothing left for us but to fight," said Mr. Shea. "We have attempted to open negotiations with the company in friendly spirit, but this move is a stab in the back."

SUSPECTED SLAYER RESISTS QUESTIONS

the latest discoveries. One bundle, found in a yard of the B. M. T., contained the head of Miss Brownell, and the second held another part of the former seamstress's body.

After Lee had emerged unscathed from the questioning he was locked in a cell at Brooklyn Police Headquarters. District Attorney Charles J. Dodd said that he expected to put the case against Lee before the Grand Jury today or tomorrow. Jensen and the second friend of the accused man, Otto Neilson, both of whom are held as material witnesses, will be witnesses for the State if an indictment is found. Detectives under Inspector John J. Sullivan planned to question Lee intermittently through last night and to resume the examination this morning.

Lee, an erstwhile carpenter and cabinetmaker, was in the line-up at headquarters before 100 detectives. After he had been viewed, breakfast was placed before him. It consisted of coffee, meat and potatoes. He drank the coffee but pushed the remainder of the meal to one side. He was asked if he cared to talk to newspaper men who were in the corridors of headquarters. Lee said that he "didn't care" and was forthwith ushered into a room for an interview.

Walks With Limp.

Lee's build can best be described as "squat." He came in running a hand throught his tousled black hair and it was noticed that he had acquired a limp. He shot his eyes around the circle and dropped into a chair. He wore a badly wrinkled blue suit and the collar of a white shirt was open to expose his broad neck. He made no overtures toward speech.

Several questions were put to him. He looked down at the hands resting on his knees.

"I know Miss Brownell for several year. I saw her, the last time, on the Fourth of July. We were eating supper in her kitchen. We always are together. After supper she gave me $15."

"Wasn't it $1,500?"

"She used to give me a few dollars," he continued. "It was every now and then. Then she went to bed and I went to my bed. Before she went to bed she said to me that she was going to go to her brother up in the country the next day. I didn't see her after that until I saw her body in the cellar."

He paused and glanced out of the window. He was asked when he had seen Mrs. Bennett.

"Seven o'clock Saturday night," he said promptly. "She met me on the street and she asked me to fix the leak in the cellar and I said, 'All right, I'll fix it.' I went down into the cellar and she went down with me. I took off my shoes and my socks and I walked through the water over to the drain pipe and I tried to clear it, but I couldn't reach very far into it. So I took an axe and I tried to break into it, but I couldn't.

"When she saw I couldn't fix it she left and she said to me, 'Well, good-bye, remember me to the old lady.'"

Tells of Quarrel.

Lee halted here and was asked if he had ever had a disagreement with Miss Brownell, either in the Prospect Place house or at 153 Sterling Place, where he had been employed by Miss Brownell for eighteen months as caretaker.

"Yes, I did," he said. "I did once after I first moved into this place, but it was nothing. It was over nothing, over nothing at all. She got mad and threw my clothing on the floor and stamped on them and then she got a scissors and said she was going to take my eyes out. I fought her away."

District Attorney Dodd said later that a witness had come forward who told of a quarrel between Miss Brownell and Lee on the night of the Fourth.

Lee said that he knew that his employer had two or three bank accounts, totaling between $4,000 and $5,000.

"Did you kill her?"

"No! No! No!" he said. "I did not kill her."

"Who did kill her?"

"I don't know," he said, becoming stolid again. "Why should I know who killed her?"

Once Stormed Doors of Home.

District Attorney Dodd said that Lee had volunteered the information about the alleged marriage plans. He added:

"We are continuing our examination and have interrogated quite a number of witnesses. One witness, a policeman named Payntar, attached to Brooklyn headquarters said that on July 2 at 7 P. M. he went to 28 Prospect Place, following a complaint by Miss Brownell that Lee was breaking down the doors of her home and was trying to get into her apartment.

"The basement door was barricaded with Miss Brownell's trunk when the policeman arrived at the house. He found Lee there and ordered him out of the house. He told the policeman that the woman had given him $1,800 to start a restaurant in Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn. This was to be a joint enterprise between them, and after the failure of the business Lee said that Miss Brownell demanded the payment of $700 from him.

"The man refused to leave the house unless she paid him $300 for his moving expenses and his support until he could find work. He told Payntar that he and Miss Brownell had agreed to marry when she moved to 28 Prospect Place and were to go to Norway soon afterward."

Head Found in Bundle.

It was while Lee was talking to the reporters that another reminder of the crime was found. Gus Yankewitz of 300 Twenty-eighth Street, Brooklyn, a workman in the B. M. T. yards at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street, was the finder. He notified the police and Detectives Enright and Gorman found a human head, evidently that of Miss Brownell, in the bundle, which they believed had been tossed from Fifth Avenue and over a fence. The spot where the head was found is approximately two miles from the Prospect Place address.

Detectives said that the manila paper was similar to that found in the other packages discovered on the lawn of St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church and at the rear of the Carlton Theatre in Brooklyn, and at Battery Park in Manhattan. An old knapsack was found near by, but the detectives were uncertain whether it was related to the parcel. A cap was also picked up near by. Into it had been stuffed an undershirt, a pair of brown socks and an outershirt. All were blood stained. The cap bore the initials "E. J. C." and the clothes had the laundry mark of A-27. The laundry mark on Lee's clothing was B-134.

The second bundle was found at 5:30 P. M. lying under a bush on a slope of Prospect Park at the west side of Grand Army Plaza. It was wrapped in the same brown paper and contained part of a thigh. In the bundle as wrapping were a pink nightgown, a yellow undergarment and a kitchen towel. A tag was attached to the wrapping paper and it bore the address of "E. E. Brownell, 153 Sterling Place." It showed a purchase, apparently some months ago, at a Brooklyn department store.

Mother of Girl Agitated.

The fact that Miss De Martino was missing was reported to the police by her mother, who said that she thought her daughter might have gone to visit one of the murdered women. The mother was very agitated and seemed much impressed by the horrors of the crime in Prospect Place.

Detectives at first believed that the girl might have been a third victim, but changed their views when they talked to the missing girl's sister, Emily. She told them that on the night that Evelyn disappeared she had words with her mother. The sister said that Evelyn had worked in Manhattan and had been telling her mother that she had been paid fortnightly. Mrs. De Martino, somewhat suspicious, threatened on the eve of the girl's disappearance to accompany her the next morning to Evelyn's place of employment to verify the fortnightly payments.

Jerry De Martino, father of the missing girl, scouted the theory that Evelyn might have been involved in the murders.

No Legal Identification Yet.

Although the police have accepted the identification of one of the bodies as that of Miss Brownell, legal identification has not yet been made. Leroy Brownell, her brother, and Guy Baldwin, a cousin, went to the Kings County Morgue yesterday to make the identification but were told to return today or tomorrow. They reached New York early yesterday from their home in Gloversville, N. Y.

Alfred Bennett, the husband, and Carl Bennett, the son of the dead woman, identified her body yesterday.

The definite link between the limbs found at the Battery and the double murder in Brooklyn was announced last night by the District Attorney.

"There is no doubt that the limbs found in Manhattan are part of the one crime," said Mr. Dodd. "We are able to say this because of a statement made today by Jensen during questioning. We showed him the wrapping paper found around the limbs in Battery Park, and you'll recall that it had nine figures on it, with the total of $2,04, suggesting that it had been a computation of purchases made at a grocery store.

"Jensen is a clerk for the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, and when we showed him the paper he remembered it. He said that he had gone into the Prospect Place house either last Thursday or Friday evening. He roomed there with Lee. Jensen said that he was carrying a lamp in a pasteboard box, about which he had wrapped the brown paper with the figures on it.

"He was on his way upstairs when Lee saw him and asked what was in the box. Jensen said that he told him it was a lamp and that Lee had asked him to let him have the paper. That puts the Manhattan wrapping paper directly in the hands of Lee."

PRINCE SINGHI HERE FOR POLO MATCHES

Indian Ruler Comes With His Minister of State and Aides and Orderlies.

Wearing a yellow and orange turban with the gold embroidered silken ends flowing loosely down his back and large diamonds in the lobes of his ears, Colonel Sir Sajjan Singhi, K. C. S. I., K. C. V. O., his Highness Maharajah of Rutlam, arrived yesterday on the Atlantic Transport liner Minnetonka to witness the international polo matches at Meadowbrook in September.

The Indian Prince was accompanied by his Minister of State, Ras Bahadur Zutshi, and his aide-de-camp, M. Shivji, two orderlies and five Indian grooms, to look after his six polo ponies which he will ride during the season of tournaments at Meadowbrook.

His Highness is the only Indian ever to have been appointed as a steward of the Indian Polo Association. The Maharajah is in his forty-eighth year. He said he had been playing polo since he was a boy. In addition to the diamonds in his ears, the Eastern potentate wore a diamond locket around his neck and several diamond, ruby and emerald rings of great value and Indian workmanship. The Minister and the aide also wore diamond earrings, but removed them before going ashore.

This is the Prince's first visit to the United States. While he will not play in the international matches, he comes as advisory steward of the Indian Polo Association, and is a member of the Selective Committee. The State of Rutlam is 603 square miles in extent and has a population of 85,000.

ATHEISTS LEASE HALL IN SHADOW OF CALVARY

Association Picks Studio Three Doors From Straton Church for Its Weekly Meetings.

The New York branch of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, with headquarters at 49 Vesey Street, has leased the Studio Guild Hall, 113 West Fifty-seventh Street, for weekly Sunday meetings of the Ingersoll Forum all next Winter, it was learned yesterday. The meeting place of the atheists is only three doors from Calvary Baptist Church, whose pastor, the Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, caused the arrest recently of the head of the atheists, Charles A. Smith, for persisting in mailing to him atheist literature.

Mr. Smith denied that proximity to Calvary Church had been a consideration in signing the lease for the Studio Guild Hall. Speaking of the arrangements, he said:

"We had hoped to keep it a secret until we held our first forum in the middle of October." Then he added: "If Straton doesn't like it, I suppose he can move."

Mr. Smith said he had received a telegram yesterday from Oklahoma City, Okla., announcing the organization of the newest branch of the atheists' association. It has been christened "Sons of Satan Branch."

DIRE NEED BESETS FLOODED AVOYELLES

DEBRIS SEEN ON ALL SIDES

SMALL CHANCE FOR CROPS

People Look to Government for Aid, but Are Doubtful of Washington's Attitude.

By L. C. SPEERS,
Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

MARKSVILLE, La., July 11.—Only two months ago every newspaper in America was printing the story of the heroic battle the farmers of Avoyelles were fighting in their effort to hold back the flood torrents, then pounding with ever-increasing fury and force against the levees of the Bayou des Glaises from the Tensas Basin. But the flood won.

THE TIMES correspondent today journeyed into the water-logged wreck of Avoyelles, a parish in a great many respects a twin sister of historic St. Martin, where the people of the countryside speak French more often than English, and where, until the coming of the flood, were thousands of happy homes and fields of growing cotton, corn, and sugarcane. Every front yard before the disaster was a picture of roses, gladiolas and violets, every garden fairly choked with beans, tomatoes, peas and other vegetables.

Prosperous Before Flood.

Ninety per cent. of the farmers of the parish, say the bankers of Avoyelles, had money in the banks when the flood came, and practically all of them had harvests in sight, the proceeds of which would have met every obligation and left something over.

Today it is a different story, a story of destitution, of shells of homes or no homes at all, of vanished crops, of want, of a people without money or credit, at home or anywhere else. Gullies, ruts, poison ivy, weeds and wild grasses have replaced the fertile fields.

The road from flood-overwhelmed Melville, on the St. Landry side of the Atchafalaya, runs almost due north into the Parish of Avoyelles. It is a journey of wide contrasts. Leaving Melville, one proceeds by motor launch to within two miles of Palmetto, a little farm town on the Texas & Pacific about ten miles northwest of Melville. Near Palmetto the Jefferson Highway emerges from the flood waters, and the journey thereafter for the next ten or fifteen miles is through a country from which the water is rapidly receding, in parts of it the recession being practically complete.

From Melville to Palmetto, however, the land is still covered by a continuous murky lake with fast-flowing currents and not a house above water. So far as this year is concerned, a crop of any kind is impossible.

Crops Flourish in High Lands.

Beyond Palmetto and for the rest of the way to Bunkie in the southwestern corner of Avoyelles the farmers who have gone back to what is left of their homes are trying to force a crop of some kind out of the flood-soaked earth. They are gambling with fate and have planted cotton, corn and soy beans. In many places the cotton is a few inches high and the corn is just high enough above the ground to establish its identity out of the wilderness of grasses in which it is battling for life.

In high places the outlook is much better. The cotton is further advanced and the corn has reached two or three feet in height. There may be crops worth harvesting in some of these more fortunately situated places.

From Bunkie to Marksville, all of which is high ground and above flood levels, one sees crops worthy of The Evangeline—splendid acres of waist-high cotton in bloom or with bolls forming, corn six or more feet high, sugar cane rushing to maturity. It is well to note these healthy crops in the highlands so as to realize fully the extent of the disaster in the flood lands, richer in soil and in production under normal conditions than any of the acres of the uplands.

From Marksville the road into the flood zones is southeast to Moreauville and Bordelonville and due south into that of Plaucheville. Over a fine gravel road, with splendid growing fields on either side, the machine speeds on its way to the Moreauville sector, the first of the disaster spots in the Bayou des Glaises country.

From Plenty to Destitution.

With a suddenness that is startling the flood zone comes into view. The machine slows down and creeps over tortuous ruts and deep gulches. Standing out with startling distinction is the wreck of a two-story mansion. On "Crevasse Day" morning it was the home of Dr. Andrew Fox, and was the most imposing structure for miles around. Today the kitchen is where the living room was and the cupola is tilted to an angle of 45 degrees.

In front of the mansion is the first of the crevasses, revealing the force of the water that poured through the gap. For acres the ground is toothed and ripped open, in places the erosions being ten and fifteen feet deep. A hundred yards further on is another big house even more of a wreck then the Fox house, while the wreckage of small farmhouses that collapsed is everywhere to be seen.

The road leads on to Bordelonville. The country is so jagged and so torn as a result of the erosions that the machine detours at snail speed over fields from and back to what is left of the once excellent gravel highway. The fields appear to be very green and for a moment there is an illusion of grass. A closer inspection shows the growth to be largely poison ivy, weeds and grasses.

Debris on All Sides.

In the fields one see parts of chimneys, doors and window sashes. Débris is on all sides and one is told that most of it was left by homes or farm outbuildings that not only went down but had disappeared in the flood. A big house at Bordelonville, which cracked in two when the flood hit it has entirely disappeared.

In Bordelonville and Plaucheville, the picture is of the same wrecked homes, big piles of débris and barren fields. There are no crops in sight in the Bayou Des Glaises zones. Now and then a farmer is seen breaking his ground in the hope that in some way he can beat the seasons and get some kind of a crop. He has a 50-to-1 chance to grow something, but it won't be cotton, sugar cane or corn and those are the money crops, the crops that are the basis of his credit.

The desolation is not so startling as at Melville, but it is almost as complete. Sometimes the land is sanded, from inches to feet deep, and this means that its productivity, so long as the sand blanket lasts, is gone. One can travel mile after mile without seeing a blade of corn or a stalk of cotton. On the levee, horses and cows are nibbling at the grass. On the porches of what remains of the farm homes are men and women gazing out over the devastation.

Refugees Are Returning.

Every little while a wagon lumbers up. In it is a farmer, his wife and his children. There is a mattress, a blanket or two, a bale of hay and a three weeks' supply of rations, all of it supplied by the Red Cross with funds drawn from its fast diminishing flood reserve. They are refugees returning home from the Red Cross camps, now being rapidly evacuated in all parts of the flood country.

In Marksville, J. M. Barham, President of the Bank and Trust Company of Avoyelles, head of one of the principal mercantile establishments of Marksville and the dominating figure in the relief activities of the parish, was named as the man best informed on the situation.

"I will try to answer your questions," he said when asked to state his views, "and I can say at the start that no matter what I say, I won't be exaggerating. You have seen the wrecks at Moreauville, Bordelonville and Plaucheville, that is of the country of which those places are the trading centres. In those zones it is a conservative estimate when you say that 90 per cent. of the people who had their homes there when the flood came are today absolutely destitute. All they have left is their wrecked homes, the clothes on their backs and such supplies, for a limited period, as the Red Cross has been able to give them.

Banks Drained to Limit.

"The banks would like to help but they cannot for they are already drained to the limit. They are all loaded down with farm paper and in a situation like this you can imagine what that means. It is a fearful predicament for these unhappy people. They have their taxes coming due this Fall and unless some kind of provision is made they will have a default. It is physically impossible for them to pay as they have no money and it is physically impossible for the banks to advance the money. In the end it may be that the State will assume the burden.

"Personally, I think it is the duty of the Government to do something to help these unfortunate people in the lower Mississippi Valley. The Government permitted this thing to happen and now it should do something to put the victims back on their feet. These people are not trash. They are the best type of American farmers and they are worth saving to agriculture and that means to the citizenship of our country. Don't you think it rather childish, to put it mildly, to expect the Red Cross with a fund of $15,000,000 to handle a problem, the damage bill alone of which will exceed $500,000,000 when the final audit is made?

Doubts Government Aid.

"You ask me what these people are going to do this Winter? I don't know. However, unless something is done they will be face to face with starvation. I want to say that I know Mr. Hoover has done and is doing all he can, but he is a lone eagle so far as the Government in Washington is concerned. Personally, I am doubtful as to whether the Government will do anything to help these people. I am not talking of flood control, for I think we will have enough friends in Congress to force that even though Mr. Tilson, after leaving Mr. Coolidge, said flood control was secondary in importance to tax reduction.

"I don't know whether Mr. Coolidge is interested in these flood victims or not. I don't recall reading where he has said a word about them since he went to Rapid City, although I have read about his conferences on taxes, the Philippines and Mexico.

"This thing is too big for any State or parish Government to handle. In this parish alone there are 25,000 people facing destitution and that is more than half of our population. Last year we made 40,000 bales of cotton. This year we will be lucky if we make more than 5,000. The farm credit organizations are not functioning and no help can be expected from that source under the plan as now in force.

"What I say as to Avoyelles is just as true of St. Martin, St. Landry, Concordia and a large part of Catahoula. I have been told the Red Cross funds are running low and that all relief will be shortly withdrawn from all persons who own any property. If that be so, God help these unfortunate people who hold title to a wrecked farmhouse and a barren field."

Mr. Barham said his information as to the curtailment of Red Cross activities came from a flood relief official of the organization. Mr. Barham made it plain that he had no criticism to make of the Red Cross, which, he added, had done everything humanly possible with the limited means at its disposal.

The Evangeline country, he declared, would never forget Mr. Hoover. No matter what happened, the name of the Secretary of Commerce would live always in the flood country.

FAMOUS ITALIAN PAINTINGS COMING TO AMERICA.

114 OLD PAINTINGS BOUGHT BY DUVEEN

ton Gallery Exhibitions, from 1909 to 1911. During the present season they were exhibited at Manchester.

"No private European or American gallery," according to the announcement here, "occupies a higher place in the opinion of art critics and historians, and no collection has ever been established which was so highly expressive of its owner's esthetic taste."

Many Venetian Works.

Mr. Benson's predilections in the making of the collection, it was said, were entirely in favor of the Italian schools of the fourteenth to sixteenth century, the Venetian school and its branches being especially favored. The collection gains another distinction from the fact that Mr. Benson's desire was that his pictures should, to a great extent, be removed from the convention of the canons of religious art.

Notwithstanding this, and because any Italian collection, due to the traditions of every painter of whatever school, it was said the collection contains eleven pictures of the Madonna with her child and ten of the Madonna attended by saints or angels. Episodes in the life of Christ supply the subjects of eighteen of the pictures, and angels, saints and legends ten more. In six instances panels include portraits of the founders or donors who commissioned the pictures for either their cells or private altars.

Six of the principal Italian schools are represented. The painters of Sienna start with examples of the Trecento art from one of the elders of painting, Duccio de Buoninsegna. He is followed chronologically in the collection by Lippo Memmi, Brena and others under the influence of Simone de Martino. The Florentines begin with the scholars of Giotto and proceed through Ghirlandaio, Botticelli and others up to Andrea del Sarto.

The Milanese school is represented by Luini. The Ferrarese start with a scholar of Niccolo da Foligno and proceed through Romano and scholars of Florenzo di Lorenzo up to Signorelli. The Venetians start, historically, with the work of a nameless artist of about 1400 and comprise works of Carlo Crivelli, 1472; Antonello, Giovanni Bellini, Giorgione, Titian, Palma, Lotto, Sebastian del Piombo, Bonifazio and Paolo Veronese.

Panels Executed in 1255.

Special stress is laid on the inclusion in the collection of four Sienese panels by Duccio di Buoninsegna (1255-1319), representing scenes from the life of Christ. "The Temptation," "Christ and the Woman of Samaria," "The Raising of Lazarus" and "The Calling of Peter and Andrew." These panels formed a part of Duccio's masterpiece, the double altar, or "Majestas," which he executed at the beginning of the fourteenth century, from 1308 to 1311, for the Cathedral of his native city of Sienna. The panels come from the Colle Alto in the Val d'Elsa; each is seventeen inches square and painted brilliantly on a burnished gold ground. Two similar panels by the same artist, "The Curing of the Man Born Blind" and the "Transfiguration," are in the London National Gallery.

An "Annunciation" by Giovanni di Paolo and "A Portrait of a Lady," by Girolamo di Benvenuto, are other outstanding works in the collection. The former is a panel fifteen by eighteen inches. The history of the latter is known since the beginning of the nineteenth century, when it was the property of Antonio Piccolomini Belanti of Sienna. It afterward passed into the possession of the late George Salting, who bequeathed the greater part of his collection to the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

Rare Works in Collection.

The Ghirlandajo portrait of de Medici's banking partner and son was at one time in the Graham collection, and a companion picture by the same artist, also a double portrait, is in the Louvre. It measures thirty by twenty-one inches and shows Sassetti in his bank at Lyons, wearing a purple skull cap and a red, furlined gown fastened at the waist with a black cord from which hangs a pouch. The son is shown as a lad of 8 or 10 years.

One of the gems of the Florentine representation in the collection is the large canvas of Piero di Cosimo, formerly in the Graham collection. It depicts how the water nymphs found Hylas, favorite of Hercules, in a flowery meadow. This canvas has been exhibited several times. It measures sixty-two by sixty-nine inches.

A Titian Madonna and Child shows the Madonna on a stone bench, the Infant Christ in her lap. Her auburn hair is relieved against a dark green curtain; her cloak is of pale cobalt blue and her robe of pale rose, unobstrusive white showing where the sleeves join the bodice and in the veil. The painting is one of Titian's earlier works, and the canvas measures eighteen by twenty-two inches.

It is not known just when the paintings will be brought to this country, and it was not possible last night to get even the approximate value of the individual paintings.

CLEMENCEAU ILL WITH COLD

Former Premier Becomes Overtired, but Family Sees No Danger.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 11.—Former Premier Georges Clemenceau is ill.

Some days ago he caught a feverish cold which has tired him severely. Today his weakness increased and Drs. Laubry and Florent were called in to examine the veteran statesman.

Clemenceau's vitality is such, however, that, dispite his nearly 86 years, members of his family feel that he will have no difficulty in overcoming his indisposition.

Usually at this time of year, it has been Clemenceau's custom, since he retired from public life, to go to his seaside cottage on the West Coast. The last month, however, he devoted to arranging an exhibition of the pictures of his great friend, Claude Monet. His activity and energy of mind and body were like those of a young man, but he apparently overtired himself.

PRAGUE, July 11.—President Masaryk has announced awarding the Order of the White Lion to Mrs. Edith Terry Bremer, head of the emigration division of the National Council of the Y. W. C. A. in New York, and to Mrs. Ludmilla Kucharova Foxlee, the representative of the Y. W. C. A. at Ellis Island.

Mrs. Edith Terry Bremer, who has been decorated by the President of Czechoslovakia, was the organizer and still is the head of the elaborate work undertaken by Y. W. C. A. in this country for foreign-born women and girls, it was said yesterday at the offices of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, 600 Lexington Avenue. Fifteen years ago she started what has since become the Department of Immigration and Foreign Communities with three workers. Now the department has fifty-one centres in as many cities throughout the United States.

Mrs. Bremer is known internationally as an authority on the problems of the immigrant woman, her associates said yesterday, and has attended many conferences both here and abroad. She is a member of a sub-group of the League of Nations studying immigration. She is a daughter of Dr. Benjamin S. Terry, Emeritus Professor of History at the University of Chicago, and lives at Port Washington, L. I.

Mrs. Ludmilla Kucharova Foxlee is a Czechoslovakian by birth and for several years has represented the Y. W. C. A. on Ellis Island. She has acquainted herself with the laws affecting immigrants and her work has included the protection of young women entering the country, the arranging of marriages, the reuniting of separated families and other services. She lives at Spring Valley, N. Y.

VOTE INCREASE OF SIZE FOR FRENCH CHAMBER

Deputies, After Wrangle All Day and Far Into the Morning, Accept the Measure.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Tuesday, July 12—An exhausting night session of the Chamber of Deputies which is still in progress has produced, after much battling with amendments and counter amendents, a vote favorable to the bill of the electoral commission, calling for an increase of the number of Deputies from 583 to 611. The Government on a show of hands finally obtained a majority of about 100 on the proposition.

Earlier in the session the bill had a narrow escape when the Deputies voted on an amendment to keep the Chamber at its present size.

This amendment was voted down by 236 to 197. After the rejection of this amendment the Government had clearer sailing.

All day yesterday the Chamber argued whether or not the number of Deputies should be increased.

"Why not a thousand?" one Deputy demanded and added, "Yet it is noticeable that the best work is always done during the morning sessions when there are not more than fifty present."

TURKISH AUTHORESS TRIED.

Woman Novelist Is the First Tried for Attack on Religion.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 11 (AP).—Nation-wide interest has been aroused by the first trial in Turkish history of a person accused of attacking religion, which began in the Stamboul court yesterday. The defendant is Suad Hanem, one of Turkey's most beautiful women and a well-known author.

Utterances of the heroine in her latest novel that religion is more harmful than opium and that all prophets are charlatans brought the novelist into court under the new penal code, modeled after the Italian, which replaced the Koranic Precepts in 1926. One section of the code provides for a penalty of from two to six months' imprisonment for ridiculing or reviling any religion.

Turks of the old school are eager to see the woman imprisoned as a lesson to "backsliding" young Turks. On the other hand, free-thinkers argue that condemnation would be inconsistent with new Turkey's separation of Church and State and the proclamation of freedom of religious beliefs.

THUNDER, RAIN, HAIL HIT LONDON AT ONCE

HEAVY DOWNPOUR IN BERLIN.

Outlying Sections Are Put Under Water by Cloudbursts.

LONDON, July 11 (AP).—Eclipselike darkness descended on London this afternoon when two converging thunderstorms, one from the southeast and the other from the southwest, jointly burst over the city, accompanied by a terrific downpour like a cloudburst. Low-lying parts of the city were flooded with alarming suddenness.

The swirling waters overturned two motor buses in Northwest London, and both subway and surface traffic were seriously hampered for hours. The only casualty thus far reported is an 18-month-old baby girl who was drowned in four feet of water in a flooded basement at Fulham, but two men were stunned by lightning and several promenaders had narrow escapes when lightning struck trees in parks.

The storm from the southwest raised havoc in the Thames Valley, where severe hailstorms smashed windows and greatly damaged the fruit crops. Reading, Kingston, Shapparton and Richmond were hit successively as the storm traveled eastward.

Braving the thunder crashes and the flashes of lightning, Fraulein Thea Rasche, the German aviatrix, ascended at Croydon with Mrs. Elliott Lynn, the British flier, in the former's diminutive plane for Southampton, where Miss Rasche is to embark on the Leviathan for the United States tomorrow. The two women successfully outrode the storm and reached Southampton safely.

After the storm a dense fog settled over the Channel.

Great damage by violent rain and hailstorms is reported over a wide area, extending from Bristol in the west across Wiltshire and Staffordshire. Railway embankments in several places have been washed away and services are suspended. Some churches and farmhouses were struck by lightning, but no casualties are reported thus far.

PARIS, July 11.—A severe electrical storm swept the city this afternoon, the rain inundating the boulevards and disorganizing traffic.

During the downpour the streets became deserted and the chauffeurs had to abandon their cars along the curbs, the magnetos being under water.

In some sections the streets and squares became like lakes, and wherever excavation was going on, there were collapses of embankments and scaffolding. Six telephone centrals were put out of business.

AMERICA TO INSIST ON CRUISER PARITY

Officials Say We Shall Demand It if Britain Urges Limit on Number of 10,000-Ton Craft.

SHE HAS MARGIN OF 7 NOW

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Any proposal from Great Britain at the Geneva Naval Conference for the number of 10,000-ton cruisers to be limited to ten or any other figure will find the United States insisting upon parity in that class with Great Britain, according to authoritative assertions today.

No formal comment was made, as it was said at the State Department that no report had been received from Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, chief American delegate at Geneva, confirming press reports to the effect that Great Britain might agree to the 400,000-ton limit in cruisers proposed by the United States if the maximum number of 10,000-ton craft could be set at some such figure as ten.

It was declared that Great Britain had fifteen cruisers of the 10,000-ton class built, building or authorized, compared with eight for the United States, and it was assumed that if Great Britain did formally suggest a limitation to ten, this would require some scrapping on her part.

What the precise American attitude toward any definite figure for 10,000-ton cruisers would be, officials left for the future to determine, pending a more exact statement of the British position.

It was merely recalled that so far the United States had made clear its willingness to have the number of craft of this size limited "proportionately" in connection with any total tonnage decided upon without definitely setting a figure. Reports that American proposals had been made for twenty-five cruisers of the 10,000-ton class were declared to be erroneous.

In general, a more hopeful view of the conference situation was taken in official circles, not only because of the reports of the willingness of Great Britain to accept the 400,000-ton gross figure for cruisers, subject to conditions on the number of 10,000-ton vessels, but on account of the postponement of the plenary session set for today.

Although no dispatches that threw any light on the conference were received today from Mr. Gibson, opportunity was taken by Secretary Kellogg and his technical assistants to confer at the Navy Department with Secretary Wilbur and members of the Navy General Board on the issues at Geneva.

No disposition was apparent among officials to raise in any way questions of whether Great Britain had applied strictly to her capital ships the tonnages laid down in the Washington naval treaty.

At the State Department it was said that President Coolidge, Secretary Kellogg and Secretary Wilbur had let it be known several times that there were no objections by the United States on this matter.

Fully equipped the carillon will represent an expenditure of close to $1,000,000 and will form an accompaniment to Mr. Bok's famous bird sanctuary in the grounds of his Florida home. In the development of the estate up to now he has stocked it with nightingales and other songbirds of rare types.

REPORTS ON CANCER TEST.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 11.—The belief was expressed today at the annual meeting of the British Empire Cancer Campaign that the discovery of the cause of cancer would not be long delayed. The results were told of new hopeful experiments dealing with the production of immunity against cancer.

Dr. Thomas Lumsden, a research worker in the Lister Institute, has discovered that when a tumor of one animal such as a rat is inoculated into an animal of a different species such as a rabbit, the serum from this second animal becomes highly poisonous to the rat tumor cells, so that, if the rat has two tumors, one of these can under special conditions be cured by injecting the rabbit's serum into it. After this, the untreated tumor always disappears. A rat so cured becomes immune in every part of its body against the attacks of the tumor cells.

The cured rat was quite unharmed by the inoculations of the rabbit tumor cells, yet no trace could be found of the means by which the rat's tumor cells were destroyed. Dr. Lumsden, however, has by patient work convinced himself of the cause of this apparent anomaly and it is hoped that the discovery, which if confirmed is expected to be of outstanding importance, will be of great help in elucidating the manner in which immunity is produced.

Who Will Live Longest and Best?

If one man out of a group of five adds ten years to his life it can be stated, truthfully, that on an average each of the five has added two years to his life. But this does not offer any great degree of comfort to the other four. The fact that they are part of the average will not give them an extra lease of life.

Eighteen years have been added to the life-span of the average person in the United States since 1855. At that time the average length of life was 40 years. Today it is 58 years.

Government figures, insurance company figures and Life Extension Institute figures all tell the same cheerful story. Certain groups of persons are in better health and are living, on the average, longer than the general public.

Vaccination, inoculation, purer water, better milk and better sanitation have all helped to lengthen the average life-span. But the story of longer life does not stop with these improvements in hygienic living. It begins here. The people of this country are beginning to understand health-protection and health-building.

What is a Thorough Health Examination?

While the spread of health education is going on steadily, perhaps not one person in twenty-five has any idea of what a thorough health examination means. About half a million persons have been examined by the Life Extension Institute. When you apply for examination you will be asked to fill out a blank which carries more than 100 Questions about your personal history which only you can answer. That done, the examining physicians selected by the Institute take up the work and search for any defects, either in your physical condition or living habits, the correction of which will help to protect you from illness and prolong your life.

No medical treatment is given by the Institute and no individual agencies for treatment are named. The Institute will tell you how modern science is equipped to serve you and protect you against unscrupulous quacks and pseudo-scientific cults.

The examination headquarters of the Institute in New York City are situated in the National Association Building at 25 West 43rd Street. The Institute has assembled here in its standard examination rooms, to assist physicians selected to examine its members, the most modern examination equipment and every scientific facility necessary to the making of these critical and highly standardized physical examinations. There are special departments for women and children with both men and women examining physicians in attendance.

To those who are not thoroughly familiar with the work of the Institute, a cordial invitation is extended to come in and see one of the most complete health examining institutions in the world. To those interested and unable to call will be mailed free booklets telling about the work, booklets built solely for the purpose of extending the lives and bettering the health of the American people.

NO BUILDING RACE, CHAMBERLAIN SAYS

made concerning the proposals which W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty and head of the British delegation, has made at Geneva, but it is understood that they involve lowering the general tonnage hitherto demanded.

It is increasingly evident that a large body of public opinion in Great Britain believes that the Admiralty's figures of its necessities are probably too high and hopes that the United States and Japanese views clashing with Great Britain's will force the British admiralty down somewhat.

But all shades of opinion are agreed on the justice of the British wish to consider large and small cruisers as in two different categories.

Sir Austen Chamberlain re-echoed the Government's view in the House of Commons tonight when the Government's policy at Geneva was challenged by Arthur Ponsonby, Laborite. Mr. Ponsonby presented a gloomy picture of the Geneva doings, charging that they had been carried on in an atmosphere of distrust because statesmen of the participating powers expected war and were not as seriously striving as they might to prevent it.

"The lack of success at Geneva has not surprised me any," he said.

"I hope and believe that through the Coolidge conference will yet come agreements marking a real step forward in delimitation of naval armaments," Sir Austen replied.

"War between this country and the United States is already outlawed in the heart and soul of every citizen of this country. I hope it is equally so in the great Republic of the United States of America."

The House cheered the Foreign Minister's declaration.

Wishes Briand Proposal Well.

Sir Austen said that the suggested conversations between France and the United States for the outlawry war between those two countries were "likely to take place," and he declared that he wished them well. This was the first official British pronouncement on Aristide Briand's proposal.

Mr. Ponsonby had asserted that M. Briand's statement had received much less attention in England than it deserved and suggested that Sir Austen might make a gesture similar to M. Briand's. In his reply Sir Austen admitted that the French Foreign Minister's proposal was striking.

"I believe such conversations are likely to take place," he added. "I need hardly say that I unfeignedly wish them well, but it would be an impertinence, or worse, if I were to indicate my opinion as to the lines on which those conversations should proceed."

Godfrey Locker-Lampson, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, referred to the Briand proposal later in the debate. He thought that until the question of limitation of naval armament was out of the way, matters should not be complicated by trying to deal with another problem.

Denies Secret War Compacts.

Sir Austen was at pains to try to remove the suspicion expressed by Mr. Ponsonby that the British Government was deserting the policy of open agreements openly arrived at.

He added apropos of Mr. Ponsonby's questionings regarding recent meetings between Sir Austen and Premier Mussolini the declaration that no binding agreement, with war as a possibility, had been made between the British and other Governments or would any such be made without Parliament being consulted.

Sir Austen recalled Germany's pre-war "obsession" that any improvement in the relations of other countries was a blow at Germany, and he added:

"It is a tragedy to see that obsession, driven out of Germany, now taking root in another great and neighboring country."

It was evident in the dispatches of the Geneva correspondents in the London papers tonight that hope had been renewed of an ultimate agreement at the conference because the plenary session called for today had been adjourned for a few days.

Chamberlain Answers Ponsonby.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, July 11.—The raising of the question of alleged secrecy and sectional agreements in foreign affairs by Arthur Ponsonby, Laborite, in behalf of the Opposition in the House of Commons today gave Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, an opportunity to discuss the whole field of foreign policy and to touch rather generally on the Geneva Conference.

Declaring it unthinkable that England should enter into a naval armament race with the United States, as the idea of war between the United States and Great Britain was outlawed in the very soul of every British citizen, Sir Austin said:

"I hope and believe that from the Coolidge conference may come proposals which will mark a real step forward in the limitation of naval competition, and that, encouraged by that example, a new stimulus may be given to the larger international conference, which is proposed, to consider not merely naval but land and air armaments."

It was obvious, he said, that he could not enter into a detailed argument or exposition of the British case under consideration at Geneva, but he added:

"I can say that the British delegation went there with a carefully thought out plan for the further limitation of naval armaments, and the extent of the proposals our delegation was prepared to submit may be measured, perhaps, by this single fact, that for years to come they would mean a reduction, if adopted by the others, of naval expenditure, which we should otherwise have to incur, of a sum nearer £50,000,000 than £40,000,000."

The Foreign Secretary's speech was largely devoted to rebutting suspicions of the foreign policy suggested by Mr. Ponsonby and in defending the valuable work of the League of Nations Council.

With reference to the naval conference at Geneva he said:

"As to the question of total tonnage, which is looming large in the press, to my mind and that of the Government the question of total tonnage is by itself insignificant. A decision on total tonnage, and that alone, will by itself be ineffective to check armaments or secure further limitation unless some other limitations are put on the number of ships which have the most aggressive character and which are proper accompaniments and parts of a great fleet.

World Peace Declared Aim.

"Mere total limitations of types will not lead to reduction of naval competition but will involve the parties concerned in still further extension and still further expenditure.

"When it is possible to put the Government's proposals fairly, there will be no doubt as to their reasonable character, or the Government's sincerity in seeking to derive the greatest possible relief for our own people and those associated with us in the conference.

"We can only move with the other parties. We are seeking only to secure special protection which is vital to an empire so peculiarly situated as ours, on the lowest scale we can arrange with the other naval powers, so that their burdens and ours may be lightened and that the menace of war, if there is a menace of war, will be automatically reduced."

In conclusion Sir Austen said:

"We are seeking to avoid quarrels for ourselves. We are seeking where we can do so properly and usefully, to smooth the path of others, to reconcile their feuds or differences, or help them to reconcile them.

"We base our policy on supporting the League and on an appeal to the League in the last resort, with the single purpose to secure peace not only for ourselves but for the world."

BRIDGEMAN OFFERS A NAVAL 'HOLIDAY'

By WYTHE WILLIAMS.

chief American delegate, refused to have anything to do with the suggestion, explaining that as the British had asked for the public meeting any question of postponing it was entirely up to themselves.

Gibson Suggests Postponement.

Until 2 o'clock this morning Mr. Bridgeman, apparently, was hunting for Lord Cecil, upon whom the responsibility for demanding the plenary session is now placed. When Lord Cecil did not respond to the telephone calls to his villa the British Chairman finally gave out a statement saying that he must first consult the Dominion delegates before taking the responsibility of postponing the meeting.

This morning Mr. Gibson read in the newspapers of Mr. O'Higgins's death and at once telephoned to Mr. Bridgeman, thus, it is said, supplying the necessary explanation for making the indefinite postponement. Since then the British have been relieved at their escape from the tight position in which they had placed themselves, it is declared.

Mr. Bridgeman summoned the British press representatives this afternoon and verbally berated American correspondents for sending dispatches which the First Lord described as "outrageous" in that he considered that they had provoked suspicions instead of allaying them.

Despite the British statements that their change in front is not due to orders from London all quarters are now convinced that the home Government began to take active notice of developments here as early as Saturday, following reports in the American press of an interview which Mr. Bridgeman gave out on Friday. At any rate, it was Saturday that the British began to suggest that "something must be done about this unfortunate cruiser business."

British Reduce Cruiser Figure.

Throughout today's informal discussions of the new British plan, which is called their "building program" proposal, it became fairly clear that they are now willing to talk in terms of cruiser units that will not run over a total of 400,000 tons, which represents the outside compromise suggested by the United States.

But even more important, to many observers, is the apparent abandonment by the British of the position that, vis-a-vis the United States, they must build ship for ship. Otherwise, in many important phases, the technical viewpoints of the two powers seem as irreconcilable as ever.

In brief, what the British now propose is that Great Britain and the United States maintain a 5-5 parity, compared to Japan's 3, on 10,000-ton cruisers—which was the proposal they made the first day of the conference.

Now, however, Great Britain agrees not to build more craft of that size, to cease operations on those now projected and to hold the total of such vessels down to a figure somewhere between ten and thirteen.

Then for smaller cruisers the three powers would keep the same 5-5-3 ratio within what remains of the 400,000-ton maximum, and each nation would be permitted to build any size it chose. Thus building at 5,000 tons Great Britain could add enough ships to her larger category to make up the seventeen cruisers that she considers necessary, while the United States could go ahead with cruisers of 7,500 tons.

Three Obstacles in the Way.

But three great difficulties still stand in the way of an agreement. First, Great Britain wants 6-inch guns on all cruisers of less than 10,000 tons. The American Navy representatives stand firm for 8-inch guns, so as not to permit Great Britain to arm her huge merchant marine.

The second difficulty is that the Americans assert that ten to thirteen cruisers of 10,000 tons would not be sufficient for their needs and insist on a program of at least twenty-two ships of this category. American Admirals contend that in case of trouble in the Far East the United States would be unable to protect convoys across the Pacific with a lesser number.

The third great obstacle is that Japan still stands firm for an even greater reduction in total cruiser tonnage, figuring as the maximum for both Great Britain and the United States not more than 250,000 tons. Faint signs have appeared that the Japanese will come up slightly, but not near the British minimum.

On this point the Americans are silent so far, as, naturally, they would be glad to get Great Britain down to lower figures if the Japanese are able to manage it. Japan sides with Great Britain in the matter of reducing the number of larger cruisers, but is with the United States on the question of 8-inch guns.

Bridgeman Explains Proposal.

GENEVA, July 11 (AP).—Due to postponement of the plenary session called for today, the delegates to the naval conference had a day of private consideration of the intricate problems confronting them.

Thus the time for final determination of the most important problem confronting the delegates, that relating to cruisers, has been extended.

Mr. Bridgeman made it clear to The Associated Press correspondent tonight that any agreement, to succeed, must, in his opinion, be based primarily upon an accord to limit drastically the number of 10,000-ton cruisers.

He explained that if the United States and Great Britain, as between themselves, could agree on the number, and Great Britain had already exceeded that number, then the British Admiralty would cease building, in order to permit the American Navy to catch up.

Although Great Britain is willing now to talk in figures of 400,000-ton maximum, the British proposal may encounter serious objections, first because that plan would be operative, it is said, only until 1931, and, second, because, although the Americans might accept this figure in a spirit of compromise, there is no certainty that the Japanese would do so.

Indeed, the Japanese are persistently demanding that the total tonnage of cruisers shall be kept far under that level.

American Objections Foreseen.

If the British insist upon limiting the number of 10,000-ton cruisers to ten, as they gave indications today of desiring to do, it is conceivable that the American delegation may find it difficult to agree to such a proposition, because, it is contended from the American side, the long distances to be covered, both on the Atlantic and the Pacific, without naval bases, make it imperative that the United States shall possess the right to build considerably more than ten of this type.

England has four large-sized cruisers of the Hawkins class (about 10,000 tons) now in commission, eleven others are under construction, and she is expected to lay down two others this year.

The change in the British attitude, which was revealed this afternoon when it was announced that if Great Britain and the United States could agree to limit the number of 10,000-tonners Great Britain would be prepared to accept the American maximum tonnage figure of 400,000, was regarded as significant. Mr. Bridgeman conferred with Mr. Gibson at American headquarters this afternoon concerning all aspects of the situation.

On leaving, the First Lord was asked whether he could make any statement. He answered jocularly:

"I cannot speak in the Americans' hotel. It is outside my territory."

The tragic death of Kevin O'Higgins yesterday, many think, served indirectly to prevent any immediate collapse of the conference, when out of respect to his memory the plenary public session, requested by the British, was postponed.

Mr. Bridgeman had asked for the meeting in order to give the British delegation an opportunity to restate its position on the cruiser problem, to clear up what he called misunderstandings and to ask a series of questions of the American delegation.

Today's projected session had been considered potentially filled with danger. The American delegation did not desire it because it believed that little good could be achieved by a public debate of this nature.

The Americans had prepared, however, to answer any of the questions which the British might have propounded and might even have asked a few questions themselves.

It is understood that the Japanese, like the Americans, looked with some apprehension upon the session because of the risk that things would be said which might provoke the "blow-up" of the conference.

VER-SUR-MER, France, July 11.—Commander Byrd, accompanied by Lieutenant Bert Balchen, came to Ver-sur-Mer today to say good-bye to the simple fisher folk who had shown to the crew of the America so much kindness and hospitality on the morning the America landed in the sea two hundred yards from the shore of their village.

On arriving at the village Commander Byrd and Lieutenant Balchen immediately went to the farmhouse of "Mama" Josephine Coiffier, who had housed, fed and mothered the fliers after their nerve-racking experience.

With "Mama" Coiffier and her five children, ranging from 7 to 18 years of age, and her old mother, aged 80, the Commander and Lieutenant Balchen spent the greater part of the afternoon. The villagers, for all that the aviators had tried to come to Ver-sur-Mer unannounced, had got wind of their being in the little farmhouse and soon there was a crowd outside the door.

Infants Presented for Kisses.

Among them was a group of mothers, holding their babies in their arms, one of them with twins. Their pleading glances brought Commander Byrd to a window, his arm around "Mama" Coiffier's youngest child, Marie Therese, 7 years old, who has the wall beside her bed covered with photographs of the aviator, who is her own hero.

It was not enough that the Commander present himself at the window. The mothers, holding their babies up to him, lured him out and upon the brow of each infant he planted a memorable kiss.

"Mama" Coffier prepared tea and cakes for her guests. They preferred the tea to the champagne which she had put on the table because there had joined the party Mayor Bonnot, the Assistant Mayor and other local officials, who considered that champagne was a ceremonial necessity.

Commander Byrd told them he could not think of departing for America without returning to Ver-sur-Mer, where every one had been his friend.

Views Preserved Mementos.

He wanted to see the room he had slept in. "Mama" Coiffier and her children led him up a little flight of stairs, and to his amazement he found, on entering the room, that all the trifles, such as a matchbox, a handkerchief, cigarettes and chewing gum, which he had forgotten, had been carefully preserved and lay just where he had left them. The room, he learned, was that of Marie, aged 18, a girl of very tidy habits, but her tidiness will never go so far as to remove the articles which Commander Byrd left behind him.

Deeply touched, before leaving the room he cast a last glance about the walls, and told "Mama" Coiffier and Marie that the picture of that room would ever remain in his memory as a symbol of love and friendship.

When they parted, the Commander kissed each one of the family, from the seven-year-old granddaughter to the eighty-year-old grandmother. As he and Lieutenant Balchen passed out the door, the whole family followed them with their blessings.

Embrace Lighthouse Keeper.

Shaking hands with the villagers who had gathered outside the house and kissing all the babies again, Commander Byrd and his companion regained their automobile. They sped off to the lighthouse, where they embraced Lescaut, the keeper, and lived over again the incidents of that first weird morning at Ver-sur-Mer.

The lighthouse keeper had them sign their names in his "Golden Book." After leaving the lighthouse the fliers were accompanied by the village officials to the spot on the beach where they had first come ashore.

Monument to Mark Landing Spot.

Mayor Bonnot told them a flagpole would be erected immediately in the water at the spot where the plane had dropped, and that later it would be replaced by a monument which, rising out of the surf, would always mark the place where the America had completed its memorable voyage. He said the aeronautic branch of the Ministry of Marine had notified the municipality of Ver-sur-Mer that it would share in the erection of this monument.

Commander Byrd also learned from the Mayor that the log which had been taken from the America was in the possession of the Prefect of Caen and would be turned over to him before he boarded the train at Caen tomorrow for Cherbourg. He was delighted over the recovery of his precious log, because it contained a great deal of data which he had gathered on the trip over the ocean.

As they were about to leave the beach the village mechanic approached the group and offered to return a little clock which had been among the articles taken from the plane. He did not wish to keep it as a souvenir, he said, except with Commander Byrd's consent. The Commander shook his hand appreciatively and made the mechanic very happy by telling him he could keep the clock.

The aviators then bid their escort good-bye and boarding their automobile returned to Cabourg to the villa of Commander Howard, where Commander Byrd had passed the night.

Puts Damper on Gibbons.

Before leaving Cabourg to make his farewell visit to Ver-sur-Mer, Commander Byrd had an interview with Dr. Herbert Adams Gibbons, who has been acting as the official guardian of the fliers. He made Dr. Gibbons understand he wanted no more processions and no more functions. Dr. Gibbons arrived at Cabourg late last night after the disappointing experience of having been abandoned not only by Commander Byrd but also by the other fliers.

Last night, after Commander Byrd fled to Cabourg, Dr. Gibbons piled the rest of the crew into a machine and started off in pursuit of the Commander. Lieutenant Balchen, Bert Acosta and Lieutenant Noville realized that the Commander did not want to be pursued. At Rouen they bolted and said they wanted to eat. Dr. Gibbons thereupon tried to make of their eating an official function and elected to awaken the municipality to the fact that the famous aviators were there. Balchen, Acosta and Noville found refuge in a little hotel where they put up for the night, losing Dr. Gibbons entirely.

He went on to Cabourg, thinking he would find them there. When he arrived he learned they had not been there. He spent a restless night, telephoning in all directions for the truants, but failed to locate them.

Commander Byrd in the meanwhile slept the clock around and woke up rather late but greatly refreshed and a 100 per cent. better man. It was the first real night's rest he had had since leaving New York. He was at breakfast when Dr. Gibbons hustled up the porch and in great dismay informed the Commander that his flying mates had disappeared.

"Oh, don't worry, doctor, they've probably had a good night's rest," said Commander Byrd.

Calls Off Cherbourg Reception.

Dr. Gibbons immediately laid before the Commander a vast program of receptions which he had arranged with the Mayor of Cherbourg and the Perfect for tomorrow before the departure of the Leviathan. Commander Byrd listened patiently and then firmly made Dr. Gibbons understand that he had another plan, much more simple and much more sensible.

"I will slip into Cherbourg as quietly as a mouse," he said, "and I will get right on board the ship before any one knows I am there."

Dr. Gibbons tried to argue the subject, but Commander Byrd insisted and Dr. Gibbons finally agreed to call off all arrangements for Cherbourg.

As the plan now stands, Commander Byrd will leave Cabourg tomorrow after lunch, motoring to Caen, where he will take a train for Cherbourg and go aboard the Leviathan as soon as he arrives. Lieutenant Balchen, Bert Acosta and Lieutenant Noville will meet him at Cherbourg.

Winchester to Adopt Balchen.

Lieutenant Balchen is a happy man tonight because he may soon become an adopted son of Commander Byrd's own birthplace, Winchester, Va. The Norse pilot is not yet an American citizen. He arrived in the United States in May of last year and got his first papers on June of this year. He has been complaining to Commander Byrd of the time it would take for him to become a full-fledged American citizen on paper when at heart he already felt himself one.

It would require a special act of Congress to exempt him from waiting for five years for his second papers, and Commander Byrd, who is devoted to his companion, cut the Gordian knot by sending to Winchester the proposal that Lieutenant Balchen be adopted and made a citizen of that town. There is not the slightest doubt that Winchester will accept the proposal and make the flier one of its favored sons.

PLANNING BYRD RECEPTION.

Will Include Flying Escort and City Hall Ceremony.

A reception for Commander Byrd and his flying mates, Bert Acosta, Lieutenant Balchen and Lieutenant Noville, is being planned and Grover Whalen, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome, has already drawn up tentative plans and will discuss them with the Mayor and other officials in a day or two.

While the committee has not been informed definitely whether Clarence D. Chamberlin will also be on the Leviathan with the crew of the America, Mr. Whalen will be ready for him if he comes.

"The welcome we are planning will certainly include Chamberlin if he is on the ship," Mr. Whalen said yesterday. The Leviathan is due next Monday morning and when the time of its arrival has been made more definite the plans for the reception will be announced.

Among other ceremonies will be a greeting at the City Hall. Squadrons of planes will fly over the big ship as she enters the bay and starts up through the Narrows.

DAVISON ON RADIO ASKS HELP FOR AVIATION

Recent feats of American airmen in flying over the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans have been a source of inspiration to every one, and America must carry out the task these men have begun in bringing this country to first rank in aeronautics, F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War, said last night in a speech broadcast from Station WJZ and thirteen other stations. His speech was part of an American Legion program given by Roxy and his Gang.

"The American Legion has rendered a great service to the nation in its short existence," Mr. Davison said. "Much remains to be done, and it is for us to put our shoulders to the wheel and help to do what remains to be done."

He said that even a peace loving nation needed a well trained body of men to form a nucleus for the citizen's army in time of war and then declared that consideration of the 'military scheme' of things was impossible without consideration of the aircraft.

"When all is said and done," he said, "the battles against aircraft must be fought in the air. The art of flying was born in this country and we have a great tradition to uphold."

Supreme Court Justice Philip McCook said, "Were I to state in a single phrase what the Legion is for I should say that it is to carry on the organized ideals of the veterans who were our predecessors, the soldiers of 1861 and '98."

LINDBERGH STARTS AIR TOUR NEXT WEEK

Will Visit 75 Cities and All States in the Spirit of St. Louis.

TO APPEAL FOR AIRPORTS

Colonel Expects to Be Gone Three Months—Will Speak Here at Conclusion of Trip.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, flying his Spirit of St. Louis, will leave New York a week from tomorrow on the first leg of a national air tour that will carry him to seventy-five cities and into every State. The tour, which is to be carried out in the interests of aviation under the auspices of the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, will take him to Hartford, Conn., the first day, where he will speak on his pet subject—airports and commercial flying.

He will be accompanied by Donald E. Keyhoe of the Information Section of the Aeronautics Bureau of the Department of Commerce, who will be a passenger in a Department of Commerce plane flown by Philip R. Love, a friend of Colonel Lindbergh, who served with him at the Army Training School at Brooks Field.

Following a conference yesterday between representatives of the Guggenheim Fund and Mr. Keyhoe, the plans were submitted to Harry F. Guggenheim, President of the fund, and Colonel Lindbergh. They were approved. The tour will last three months and, according to present plans, will end with a meeting in New York at which the Colonel will arrive on or about Oct. 23.

Since he arrived in New York from Ottawa more than a week ago Colonel Lindbergh has kept in seclusion and has devoted his time to the writing of his book "We." The other half of the partnership has also been in seclusion at the Wright hangar at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

Wright Motor Overhauled.

The Wright Whirlwind motor which carried the gray monoplane across the country and then across the Atlantic has been completely overhauled at the Wright factory in Paterson and is ready. The Pioneer Instrument Company engineers have checked and tested the instruments. Tomorrow or the next day they will "swing the compass" and the ship will be ready for its tour.

In a statement issued following the conference yesterday in behalf of Mr. Guggenheim the purposes of the tour and the problems confronting aviation today were outlined.

"The Guggenheim Fund," the statement says, "considers itself very fortunate in being able to arrange for Colonel Charles Lindbergh to visit each of the States in the interests of aviation.

"Recalling that the 7,000-mile tour made last year by the Fokker monoplane in which Commander Byrd flew to the Pole resulted in the establishment of many air ports, the backers of the flight expect even greater developments from the Lindbergh tour, inasmuch as he will visit every State in the Union and will show his plane and speak to millions.

Chief Purpose of the Tour.

"Colonel Lindbergh's tour is undertaken primarily to stimulate interest in the use of air transportation. He will also encourage the use of present aerial transportation facilities for mail, freight and express and passengers and other services now performed by aircraft.

"In fostering this interest in actual transportation, his tour will encourage the development of municipal airports and other aerial transportation facilities such as communications systems and lighting of airways.

"On account of the limited time and the necessity for visiting each State, Colonel Lindbergh will not be able to visit all of the cities which have requested his presence. Effort has been made to select cities which will give an opportunity for the largest number of people to see Colonel Lindbergh and the Spirit of St. Louis.

"Arrangements for reception at each of the cities concerned have been made with the respective Mayors. It is planned to have Colonel Lindbergh speak to a large representative audience with the intention of building up support of air mail, establishment of airports and increasing general interest in aviation.

"Cities to be visited are as follows:

Between July 20 and July 31—Hartford, Providence, Boston; Portland, Me.; Concord, N. H.; Springfield, Vt.; Albany, Buffalo and Syracuse.

Between Aug. 1 and Aug. 15—Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Dayton, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Chicago and St. Louis.

Between Aug. 16 and 31—The Tri-Cities Moline, Davenport and Rock Island; Milwaukee, Madison; Twin Cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis; Little Falls, Fargo, Sioux City, Des Moines, Omaha and Denver.

Between Sept. 1 and 15—Cheyenne, Salt Lake City, Boise, Butte, Spokane, Seattle and Portland.

Between Sept. 16 and 30—San Fracisco-Oakland, Sacramento, Reno, Los Angeles, San Diego, Tuscon, El Paso, Fort Worth, Dallas, Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

Between Oct. 1 and 15—Little Rock, Memphis, Nashville, Birmingham, Jackson, New Orleans, Jacksonville, Atlanta, Spartanburg, Winston-Salem and Richmond.

Between Oct. 16 and 30—Baltimore, Atlantic City, Washington, Wilmington, Philadelphia and New York City.

"Short stops will be made at Schenectady, Erie, Springfield, Ill.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Lordsburg, N. M., and Abilene, Texas."

FLIERS AT HAMMOND, IND.

Stinson Holds Lead in Reliability Tour, With Mummert Second.

HAMMOND, Ind., July 11 (AP).—Headed for home in the 4,000-mile national reliability tour, the thirteen airplanes in the contest arrived here tonight from Moline, Ill., making the 160-mile hop in a little more than an hour, without mishap.

The planes landed at the Ford airport at Lansing, Ill., near here, after circling over Hammond in an ineffectual attempt to "bomb" the city. The pilots, using rubber balls, attempted to drop them from a height of 1,000 feet on a target in a pond in Harrison Park in Hammond.

Eddie Stinson, famous war-time flying instructor, held his lead in the field of twelve qualified contestants with his Stinson Detroiter monoplane and a total of 9,040.5 points. Harney Mummert is second with 7,150.7 points.

The planes will hop off at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning for Grand Rapids, Mich. The tour started June 27 from Detroit.

KOENNECKE PLANS FOR SEPTEMBER HOP

German War Ace Says He Will Make San Francisco His Destination.

BACKER AS PASSENGER

Count Solms Laubach Will Be Radio Operator — Selects a Single-Motor Biplane.

BERLIN, July 11 (AP).—Otto Koennecke, the 35-year-old war ace who bagged forty-six enemy planes, caused a sensation today when he announced that he would be ready to take off from Tempelhof Airdrome on Sept. 1 for San Francisco in a single motor biplane constructed at the Caspar Airplane Works at Travemune. He gave the public a further surprise when he stated that he would be accompanied by Count George Frederick Solms Laubach, the 28-year-old German sportsman who is Herr Koennecke's financial backer.

After the German press had announced his plans prematurely, Herr Koennecke so completely faded from the picture that nobody in flying circles any longer counted on him to make the flight. Discussing his project, the Airman said:

"For years I have had a flight to America in mind. With this in view I examined every type of machine reaching Tempelhof Field but failed to discover a machine I considered equal to the task. One day last Spring a big Caspar biplane, a freight hauler, dropped in on us. I said to myself: 'That's my bird.' It is a double-decker which, for a transatlantic flight, I consider very important, since for hauling a large quantity of gasoline one should have the largest portability and sustaining power possible.

"I went to Travemunde and flew the machine repeatedly. I found it perfect. Its fifteen cylinder Junkers water-cooled motor exactly meets my wishes as crystallized after many years of flying in fog and other difficult weather.

"Naturally the financial question was a big one as money in Germany is tight and the Federal and State Governments won't lend financial support, but through a third party I made the acquaintance of Count Solms Laubach, whose home is in the southern Province of Reese.

"My wife, my boy, aged 7, and my girl of 5 often have flown with me," said Herr Koennecke, "but my 18-month-old baby boy has not yet been up. If we had no children my wife would be my fellow-passenger.

"Count Solms Laubach, who for the past weeks, like myself, has been r...ing about the country buying instruments and other necessary supplies for the trip, is now taking a course in wireless. We expect to carry a radio with a 630-mile radius, which under favorable conditions, may be increased to 1,000 miles, but we won't announce, as Commander Byrd did, what our wave length will be, so our apparatus won't be killed by amateurs calling us as happened to the Americans.

"Only those radio stations with which we wish to communicate will know our wave length, and we shall even ask them not to molest us but to leave it to us to call them."

FRENCH POTASH CO. CLOSES OFFICE HERE

But Arguments Are Heard in Federal Action to Enjoin Sales in This Country.

CLAUDEL DOES NOT APPEAR

His Government Said to Own Most of Defendant Organization—Kellogg Denies Immunity.

Argument concerning the right of this country to enjoin the Société Commerciale des Potasses d'Alsace from proceeding with plans for the sale of potash in this country in alleged violation of the Sherman law, because the French Government owns a controlling interest in the mines, closed yesterday before Federal Judge Bondy, who reserved decision. The argument was on a motion to dismiss made by Gilbert H. Montague and associate counsel representing the defendants. At a recent hearing Alexander B. Royce, special assistant to the Attorney General, objected to the interruption in the proceedings on the ground that if the mines of the French company were owned by the French Government the proper person to make protest was the French Ambassador, Paul Claudel.

The adjournment to yesterday was for the purpose of permitting Mr. Claudel to appear and to declare just what interest the French Government had in the mines and to what extent it controlled the activities of the defendant company. The Ambassador did not appear, but Mr. Montague explained that he had been authorized to represent him. It was said that the French Government owns eleven-fifteenths of the capital stock of the company.

Plan Abandoned.

Whatever plan the company had to flood this market with potash shipped here to its own agents and sold by them appears to have been abandoned. A statement in the printed papers of Mr. Montague was to the effect that the office which the company had maintained here had been disposed of, that it carries on no business here except for the liquidation of its affairs in this country and that this liquidation would be completed within a few weeks. It also said that the company had entered into other arrangements for the sale of the product of the Alsatian mines and that these sales would be handled by other parties. It said that the company several weeks ago, through its director general, who was then in this country, and through its counsel, gave the Department of Justice assurances of the change in its affairs.

Notwithstanding this declaration the suit is to go on. William J. Donovan, Assistant to the Attorney General, explained that it was the first suit of the kind, and that a court decision in the records would help in similar litigation. The argument ranged over the wide territory of a nation's right to immunity from an action by another Government. This question appeared to have been disposed of by a letter written by Secretary of State Kellogg under date of July 7 to the Attorney General. Its concluding paragraph reads:

Kellogg's Opinion Read.

"I have to inform you that it has long been the view of the Department of State that agencies of foreign Governments engaged in commercial transactions in the United States enjoy no privileges or immunities not appertaining to other foreign corporations, agencies and individuals doing business here and should conform to the laws of this country governing such transactions."

Mr. Montague went over the arguments made at the last hearing, to the effect that the French Government was immune from attacks of this character. Mr. Royce said in reply:

"The immunity, if any, extended by law to the French Government does not extend to the applicant corporation or to the individual applicants, who are all officers of the corporation. Sovereign immunity cannot be successfully claimed even by a corporation owned or controlled by the domestic sovereign. The applicants are entitled to no immunity because the immunity allowed to a foreign sovereign is not to be extended to acts done by the agents of that sovereign, or even by the sovereign itself, in the course of a purely commercial enterprise within the United States."

The individual defendants were Jean Le Cornec, Pierre Gide and Walter B. Howe. A German syndicate, the Deutsche Kalisyndikat Gesellschaft, which was also named as a defendant in the Government's complaint, did not appear in the proceedings.

CHANG TSO-LIN NAVY STAYS LOYAL TO HIM

HOLD ON SHANTUNG VITAL

More Japanese Troops Are Reaching Tsing-Tao, Making 5,000 in That Area.

TSING-TAO, July 10. — Ordinary train traffic was resumed today between Tsing-tao and Sai-nan-fu.

General Chen having personally disappeared, according to information from the best possible source, his troops have reverted to Sun Chuan-fang.

Three armored trains with Russians from the Tientsin Pukow line were sent to Kiao-chau, but the rebels realigned themselves without fighting.

The Haichi, largest of the northern warships, and regarded as thoroughly loyal to Chang Tso-lin, arrived here a few days ago with an airplane, which has been circling the harbor daily and it is now said the remainder of the navy, which is based here, will continue their allegiance with the north.

While determined efforts of the northern coalition are being made to obtain peace with Nanking, the coalition is likewise making desperate efforts to retain Shantung.

Retention of the Province is likewise important to the white Russian families who may fare badly if the Red-advised south gets control of the white soldiers, although numbering a few beyond 2,000 are the bulwark of Chang Tsun-chang's defense.

No Americans were landed at Tsing-tao except a score of unarmed men for messenger service in case of necessity between the Consulate and warships.

Two thousand Japanese soldiers will arrive here tomorrow from Dairen, making a total of nearly 5,000 Japanese along the Tsing-tao-Tsi-nan-fu Railway, including sailors ashore from the four Japanese warships in the harbor.

TOKIO, July 11 (AP).—A company of railway telegraph troops departed from Tokio today for Tsing-tao in the Chinese Province of Shantung. They will arrive July 15. The Government stated that it was not planning to send further reinforcements to China at present.

CANTON, July 11 (AP).—The anti-Japanese boycott and the anti-British ship strike have caused a most serious upset of trade. The Japanese are threatening reprisals in the way of cutting off the Canton Government's vital coal supplies from Japan unless the strike is called off.

SHANGHAI, July 11 (AP).—The Salt Inspectorate has notified the banks and the public that the contemplated flotation of Treasury notes to the value of $60,000,000 by the Nanking Government, on the security of the salt revenue of the Provinces of Kiangsu and Chekiang, cannot be recognised as a valid obligation.

The Inspectorate states that the projected flotation constitutes a flagrant violation of the reorganisation loan agreement of 1913.

SAXONY FLOOD DEATHS NOW FIGURED AS 200

Property Loss Estimated as 70,000,000 Marks—Government Gives Big Sum for Relief.

DRESDEN, Saxony, July 11 (AP).—The total number of dead and missing in the cloudburst last week was placed today at 200.

The German Minister of Finance has placed 2,000,000 marks at the disposal of the Minister of the Interior for temporary relief in the flooded area. The damage is roughly estimated at more than 70,000,000 marks, and the loss to the Federated Railways alone is placed at 10,000,000 marks, apart from the probable inability to reopen the railway service for six months.

The Dresden bankers have opened a subscription, which will be country-wide, contributing 100,000,000 marks. The Saxon Premier has appointed a State Commissioner to superintend reconstruction and relief, and all street cars and Government automobiles, together with the equipment of the Bureau of Public Roads, will cooperate in maintaining communications in the devastated area.

PIRNA, Saxony, July 11.—Saxon Communists demand that the State donate 5,000,000 and the Reich 10,000,000 marks to start a fund for the relief of the victims of Saturday's flood.

There is severe criticism heard of the Mayor of Glashuette for providing special guides to take sightseers on tours through that ruined town for 12 cents a head. The Mayor contends, however, that the municipality needs the money to help care for the flood victims.

Amid the ruins of Berggiesshuebel and other devastated centres the police have their hands full preventing wholesale robbery. Many ghouls have been arrested, and it is rumored that several have been shot down by Reichswehr patrols. This, however, is unconfirmable as yet.

Criticism of the Saxon and Federal Governments for their niggardliness in failing to vote the few million marks required for dams designed to regulate the flow of the mountain streams and thus avert flood disasters is rife in the local press. Plans for defensive structures in the Gottleuba Valley were prepared long ago, it is declared, but Government appropriations were not forthcoming.

WASHINGTON, July 11 (AP).—The American Red Cross today offered to aid victims of the flood in Saxony. A cablegram to the German Red Cross expressed "deepest sympathy" and asked if the American organization could "be of assistance."

CHAMBERLIN FLIES TO SHIP.

Goes by Plane From Bristol to Cherbourg to Board the Leviathan.

LONDON, July 11.—Clarence D. Chamberlin, who crossed the Atlantic in the monoplane Columbia with Charles A. Levine, today flew from Bristol to Cherbourg, where he boarded the Leviathan for New York. He went to Bristol to visit an airplane factory and flew to Cherbourg in a plane placed at his service there.

Mrs. Chamberlin tonight went to Southampton on the boat train to rejoin her husband aboard the Leviathan. She was accompanied by Mrs. Jessie Chamberlin, the flier's mother, who has been visiting her sister here.

Mr. Levine went to Southampton and embarked on the Leviathan for Cherbourg, whence he went to Paris. He intends to return to London with his new pilot, Drouhin, on Thursday in the Columbia. On the Leviathan Mr. Chamberlin will be with Commander Byrd's party of transoceanic fliers.

THINKS MILLSPAUGH WILL STAY IN PERSIA

GIVES SHAH CREDIT FOR AID

Director of Internal Revenue, Home for Visit, Tells of Mission's Work.

Colonel Daniel W. MacCormack, formerly of Boston but for five years a member of the American mission in Persia, of which Dr. Arthur C. Millspaugh is head, is of the opinion that the Persian Government will make a new contract with Dr. Millspaugh and his associates, who have been instrumental in restoring that country financially and economically. Dispatches from Teheran last month said there was a hitch over the new contract, Dr. Millspaugh holding that certain clauses curtailing his powers were unacceptable.

Colonel MacCormack is at the Hotel Pennsylvania after five years' absence from the United States. He has been in Persia as Director of Internal Revenue at Teheran, except for two visits to Europe to represent Persia before the League of Nations. He expects to remain here several weeks, but eventually to return to Persia.

Colonel MacCormack reported Persia in a flourishing condition compared with that which prevailed for some time after the war, and gave credit, first, to the new Shah, Reza Khan Pahlevi, and, second, to the Millspaugh mission.

While giving full credit to the work of the mission of which he is a member, Colonel MacCormack insisted that without the cooperation and ability of the Shah, the restoration of Persia hardly would have been possible. "He is," said the Colonel, "the great factor in our success." He said, too, that the Shah was an extraordinarily interesting individual, more than six feet tall, with gleaming eyes and a remarkable brain. He rises about 5 o'clock every morning and by 6 can often be seen, unaccompanied, perhaps at an army camp, perhaps in the bazaars inspecting a bakery.

One of the chief causes of the sounder situation, Colonel MacCormack said, was the establishment of a Government monopoly in sugar and tea which brings in about $6,000,000 a year, all of which is to be devoted to the building of railroads, the laying out of which is now in the hands of W. V. Poland, another American, who took over relief work in Belgium after Herbert Hoover left that country. It is proposed to build more than 750 miles of road. In addition, the consolidation of innumerable small taxes produced an annual income of $1,500,000, which is to be devoted to road building, which work is in the hands of another American, Colonel A. F. Morris, who built the roads in Panama. Still a third American, E. A. Haskell, formerly in the Department of Agriculture in this country, is directing the agricultural work for the Persian Government.

The debt of the country, Colonel MacCormack said, has been reduced to less than $1 per capita, and the tax rate, including all imposts, even customs, is only $2.75 per capita.

Colonel MacCormack was not disposed to talk much about the opium question, which was one of the important subjects upon which he spoke for Persia at the League of Nations Council in March, accepting, on behalf of Persia, but with some qualifications, the Delano plan for the progressive reduction of opium production. He explained that Persia depends for between 8 and 9 per cent. of her revenue upon opium, which constitutes about 20 per cent. of her exports. The agreement to suppress production for other than medical purposes, he said, was a very real sacrifice, and the countries which profited from the manufacture of the derivatives of opium should be called upon to make sacrifices on a par with those made by Persia.

DR. CADMAN DENOUNCES LEWIS IN LONDON TALK

Copyright, 1927, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

LONDON, July 11.—Characterizing Sinclair Lewis's attack on the American clergy in his famous novel, "Elmer Gantry," as "barnyard piffle and garage gossip," Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, today opened a series of five midday talks at St. Martin's Church in Trafalgar Square.

"The book represents a huge ocean of mud, in which the author himself is immersed," scathingly declared the clergyman, answering a question which was submitted in the public question box following the regular talk.

Dr. Cadman denounced Mr. Lewis, as well as other writers of his ilk, as "novelists with reporters' genius."

Other questions asked by the curious Britishers ranged from cremation to Rotarianism. Regarding the latter, the speaker declared he had often attended Rotary gatherings.

"They are not intellectual triumphs," he said. "They are daily lunches."

He added, however, that the organization has done a vast amount of good, bringing the human element into business.

The clergyman declared in his preliminary remarks that a majority of Americans are healthy minded people, despite occasional indications to the contrary. Ninety per cent. of the readers of newspapers, he declared, are firm believers spiritually, adding that the American press is more sympathetic in religious questoins than any other.

"The evolution flurry has done great good in America," declared Dr. Cadman, "since it has shown the Darwin theory to be harmless and useless. We know spiritual certitudes are due to intuition and not learning. As for Fundamentalism, I read the Bible like I eat fish—leave the bones and eat the flesh."

The speaker closed by declaring that divorce is even a greater evil than prohibition in America, since it is tearing at the very foundation of the family.

VON HINDENBURG VISITS ZOO

"So I Feel," He Replies, as Handshaker Says "I'm From America."

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 11.—President von Hindenburg went to the Zoo today to view the two zebras recently sent to him by the Regent of Abyssinia, but the President, who is a confirmed hunter, was much more interested in the large herd of deer than in the zebras.

Admiring the agility of these graceful animals and petting some of them, he remarked that it would be great sport to stalk them, but that only an excellent shot could hope to bag one in the woods.

The President also showed great interest in the African exhibitions, at which he spent more than an hour. The presence of the chief of the republic attracted a large crowd, which cheered him lustily.

As the President was about to leave the zoo a man stepped up to him and seizing his hand and shaking it vigorously said:

"I am glad to see you. I come from America."

"I can feel that," Herr von Hindenburg replied, looking ruefully at his hand.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 11.—Major Sidney Cotton, the airman who for the past month has been searching here for traces of Nungesser and Coli, is returning to New York as the result of troubles with his assistants. McPhail, his mechanic, left ten days ago. Captain Caldwell, his associate, resigned last week. McPhail, after returning to St. John's, complained that Cotton was making photographs of the country, thus disclosing its forest wealth, and Caldwell has now been talking in the same strain.

FLIERS VISIT DEAUVILLE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DEAUVILLE, France, July 11.—Three of the America's now famous crew—Lieutenants Noville, Acosta and Balchen—unexpectedly walked into the Casino at Deauville tonight and for about a quarter of an hour distracted attention from the gaming tables.

There were not many people present, but the fliers were glad of it.

They told M. André, director of the Casino, that at one moment during their flight along the coast of France they believed they were flying directly over Deauville at an altitude of about 500 feet, though the fog hid the resort from their view. At that moment they decided if they ever landed safely they would come back to Deauville to see what they had missed.

POINCARE IS DEFEATED IN FINANCE COMMITTEE

Faces Struggle in Chamber on Wednesday Over Increased Civil List.

PARIS, July 11 (AP).—The Poincaré Government, with two defeats in the Finance Committee of the Chamber today on the question of increased pay for Government employes, faces a bitter struggle in the open Chamber on Wednesday.

The Government had accepted a proposal for the expenditure of 600,000,000 francs to meet an increase in the wages of Government employes, but the Finance Committee, in the face of the Premier's emphatic opposition, voted an amendment, 14 to 8, increasing the amount to 900,000,000 francs, and adding that the surplus of the 1928 budget should be applied to this account.

M. Poincaré steadfastly opposed this, but was again overruled.

"If my friends continue this attitude in the open discussion on Wednesday, I will leave to others the responsibility of destroying the budget equilibrium," he warned the committee.

TWO ARE CONVICTED OF BORKIN MURDER

Vishnitzer and Ecker Will Get Death Sentence for Killing Detective.

VERDICT IN FIFTY MINUTES

Gang Also Murdered Another Detective in Attempting to Hold Up East Side Cabaret.

A verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was returned yesterday by a jury in General Sessions against Harry Vishnitzer, 20 years old, of 78 Eldridge Street, and Philip Ecker, 20, of 99 Forsyth Street, for killing Detective Morris Borkin in the frustrated hold-up of a cabaret at 152 Forsyth Street early on May 17 last. Detective Benjamin Cantor, Borkin's partner, was fatally wounded in the hold-up, while one of the three gunmen, Anthony Congolino, 17 years old, was shot by Detective Borkin, and died subsequently in Bellevue.

Mansfield F. Doty, foreman of the jury, reported the verdict at 3:55 P. M., fifty minutes after the case had been turned over to them. Judge Nott committed the convicted men to the Tombs without bail. He will impose the death sentence next Monday. Judge Nott had denied the motions of George Z. Medalie and Representative F. H. LaGuardia, counsel for the convicted youths, to set aside the verdict.

Testimony established that while Ecker, a chauffeur, did not participate in the actual killing of the two detectives, he played the leading part the day before in the formation of the plot to hold up the cabaret, the property of Mrs. Lizzie Gold.

Detectives and two Assistant District Attorneys testified that Ecker made three confessions in which he admitted that he had hired an automobile for the use of the gunmen in the hold-up. Ecker had turned the car over to Vishnitzer, Dominick De Luca, who is a fugitive, and Congolino a few minutes before the trio entered the cabaret while the orchestra was playing and ordered the patrons and attaches to throw up their hands.

Borkin, a veteran of the World War and an expert pistol shot, was seated with Cantor and a group of friends, including Mrs. Gold, as the robbers fired seven or eight shots, five of which entered Borkin's body, and shot young Congolino before he fell dead across the table. Cantor was shot through the back before he could get his pistol out, and died several days later in St. Mark's Hospital, where he had identified Vishnitzer as one of the gunmen.

Vishnitzer was captured in a Bath Beach hotel about a week after the hold-up. Ecker refused to take the witness stand in his defense. Vishnitzer admitted to the jury that he took part in the hold-up with De Luca and Congolino, who was found dying in the robbers' automobile less than half an hour after the hold-up, but denied that he did any shooting.

GIRL BANDIT GOES ON TRIAL.

Former Texas Student Faces Court Today for Bank Robbery.

SAN MARCOS, Texas, July 11 (AP).—Rebecca Bradley Rogers, former University of Texas student charged with the robbery of the Farmers' National Bank of Buda, Texas, last Winter, must go to trial here tomorrow the District Court ruled today in denying her second plea for a continuance.

Mrs. Rogers was arrested in Austin soon after a young woman had held up the bank at the point of a pistol and escaped with approximately $1,000.

After the girl's arrest Otis Rogers, young Amarillo attorney, announced that he was her husband and rushed to her defense, revealing a secret marriage while the two were students at the University of Texas.

His trip from Amarillo was made on a cold day and he contracted pneumonia and later went to New Mexico to recover from an affection of the lungs. His absence furnished cause for the first postponement of his wife's trial two months ago.

Today Mrs. Rogers's attorneys sought to obtain another continuance on the ground that a witness whose testimony was expected to support her plea of temporary insanity is in Europe. This plea was overruled today by Judge M. C. Jeffers.

Selection of a jury will start in the morning.

FLYING OFFICER KILLED.

Plane Crashes After Grazing Another In Practice at Kelly Field.

SAN ANTONIO, July 11 (AP).—Second Lieutenant William L. Howarth of Harvey, Ill., student in the pursuit section of the advanced flying school, Kelly Field, was killed when his plane crashed on Duncan Field this morning.

Howarth was flying at 2,000 feet in a three-ship formation when the landing gear of the ship above him grazed his upper wing as the formation executed a cross-over turn. A large piece of the wing was torn away and the plane went into a tail spin with the motor wide open.

Observers said apparently Howarth made no effort to shut off the engine, right the plane or jump with his parachute. They assumed he must have been struck and rendered unconscious by a piece of the broken wing.

Howarth was flying an HE-4 army pursuit plane. The crash was witnessed by other student fliers on the ground and in the air and by many tourists on a near-by highway. Lieutenant Howarth was graduated from West Point in 1920.

MEDAL WINNER FAILS TO SAVE SHOCK VICTIM

Uses His Same Methods Which Revived Another Hit by Live Wire, but Without Success.

On Feb. 6 last year Charles Geissler of 642 West 172d Street, a splicer for an electric company, infused consciousness into a man who had been shocked by contact with a live wire by using the "prone" method of resuscitation on him for an hour and forty-five minutes. The man was Frank G. Mason. The accident occurred while he was working on the subway at 106th Street and Central Park West. For his efforts, Geissler, with William Marra, his helper, received the Insull Medal.

Yesterday morning Geissler had another chance to save a man who had been pronounced dead. Eugene Barberi, 32 years old, of 67 Grand Street, Brooklyn, an employe of the Rossoff Construction Company of 461 Eighth Avenue, who was working in the subway excavation at Thirty-fifth Street and Eighth Avenue, came in contact with a wire used for lighting purposes. Dr. Reynolds of New York Hospital hurried to the scene, but Barberi seemed lifeless.

While waiting for the morgue wagon, Drs. Woodman and Jackson of the New York Edison Company thought they detected the flutter of Barberi's pulse. With the help of twenty-five fellow-workers and several patrolmen, working in relays, they began trying to revive Barberi. Then Geissler arrived.

When he had heard of Geissler's success with Mason, the head of the construction company offered a reward of $1,000 to Geissler if he saved Barberi. Geissler worked for four and a half hours, using grease on his hands. From time to time he was aided by others. A large crowd watched the operation on the sidewalk, and a photographer from the Rockefeller Institute took pictures for use in research work.

At length Geissler had to give up, and Barberi was pronounced dead. His brother, Joseph, accompanied the body to the Morgue, where there will be an autopsy this morning. The wire which killed Barberi was carrying 230 volts.

On City Island, at City Island Avenue and Beach Street, just before noon, Anthony Moran, 25 years old, of 35 Lincoln Street, New Rochelle, a wireman employed by the Westchester Lighting Company, was killed when his head came in contact with a wire carrying 4,400 volts.

'14 POINTS' WIFE LOSES.

Court Bars Taking Son to Sound Beach—Advises Neutral Ground.

Mrs. Virginia M. Whitney, who wrote a letter to her husband specifying fourteen points for marital happiness and obtained a separation when her husband refused to sign the agreement, was forbidden to take her three-year-old son to Sound Beach, Conn., yesterday by Justice Scudder in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Whitney obtained custody of the child in her separation decree last May, but was not permitted to take him out of the State. Mr. Whitney opposed her application to take the boy to Sound Beach for a vacation on the ground that Sound Beach was the scene of their domestic unhappiness. He said he would be ridiculed by his wife's friends and relatives if he attempted to visit his son there. Justice Scudder, in ruling against her application, said the couple should remain on neutral ground to avoid conflict.

'BOSTON BILLY' CASE PUT TO GRAND JURY

BARRY ALSO ON THE STAND

Convicted Burglar Brought From Sing Sing—Seven Indictments to Be Sought in Nassau.

District Attorney Edwards of Nassau County began yesterday putting evidence before the Grand Jury against "Boston Billy" Monaghan. He is seeking seven indictments for robberies committed on Long Island.

The witnesses yesterday included Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Livermore, who were held up and robbed in their house at King Point, L. I.; Mrs. Adelaide Couchman and her two sons, Carl and William, held up in their house at Plandome; Mrs. John C. Greenleaf, whose home at Hewlett Bay Park was robbed, the thieves carrying away a safe with jewelry worth $12,000; Mrs. H. C. Talbot, former occupant of the Pulitzer residence at Manhasset, and Captain of Police J. J. King.

Arthur Barry, who is serving a twenty-five year term in Sing Sing for his part in the Livermore robbery, was taken from Mineola to Sing Sing yesterday under court order. He signed a waiver of immunity and testified. Anna Blake, who was placed under arrest when jewels stolen from the Livermore residence were found in her possession also signed a waiver of immunity and testified.

The Grand Jury will hear further testimony and is expected to return indictments today. District Attorney Edwards said yesterday that he would seek a trial within two weeks. "Boston Billy" will probably be tried on the charge of robbing the Couchman residence, as the evidence against him in that case is the strongest. Both Mrs. Couchman and her two sons have identified him as the man who held them at bay with a pistol while he made his retreat from their house, which he entered by ladder.

District Attorney Edwards said that after the trial of the prisoner in Nassau county, he would be willing to turn him over to other District Attorneys who want him. It is possible that "Boston Billy" may be indicted in Westchester County for the murder of a Police Sergeant. The prisoner is accused of the crime by his former partner, Barry, and sufficient corroboration for an indictment is now being sought. Two charges of attacks on women, one on a 15-year-old girl, have been made against "Boston Billy," it was learned yesterday.

Sheriff William R. Stohson received a request yesterday from Worcester, Mass., that Monoghan be turned over to the authorities there, where he is wanted for escaping on Jan. 24, 1921, while being taken to prison, according to the Mineola authorities. He had been sentenced to a term of eight to ten years as the result of the theft of an automobile from a garage, it was said.

Monoghan has been telling the prisoners on his tier in the jail that "it doesn't pay to try to beat the law."

SIMIAN IN TREE ELUDES POLICE NET AN HOUR

Bozo, Pet Monkey, Keeps 200 Shrieking in Glee—Appetite Brings Him to Earth.

Two of Far Rockaway's policemen displayed yesterday what was considered an extraordinary example of the savoir faire of the New York Police Department in most trying circumstances resultant to a monkey's climbing a tree.

The Far Rockaway Precinct was notified by Mrs. Betty Hoffman, who lives at Franklin and Cornaga Avenues, Far Rockaway, that her pet, Bozo, had fled from her home and was then irretrievably, to her, ensconced in a clump of near-by trees.

Patrolmen Edward Winters and Vincent Picarilla, experienced men, were sent to locate and bring back Bozo. They deduced immediately and correctly that they had arrived at Bozo's tree when they saw 200 persons, most of them small boys, looking upward and yelling with delight.

One glance told Patrolmen Winters and Picarilla, who like most New York policemen are anthropologists, that they had to deal with a simian of the lowest order of anthropoids. Accordingly Patrolman Winters sent a small boy for a crab net.

While the small boys yelled what might have been encouragement and admiration, Patrolman Winters, with the crab net under one arm, ascended Bozo's tree with as much dignity as the occasion demanded. He got near Bozo, who stared blankly, and brought down the crab net.

The small boys yelled prodigiously. Patrolman Winter's crab net was empty. Bozo was in another tree.

Again Patrolman Winters, advised by Patrolman Picarilla, climbed with the crab net. Again the small boys yelled, hugging each other with excitement, and again Bozo was in another tree.

This went on for an hour. Indeed, it began to be whispered by the small boys that Bozo was making a monkey of the Police Department; but this was not true. Patrolman Winters came to the ground. After all he was a patrolman. So was Patrolman Picarilla. They began pacing under the trees, patiently, and presently, as they had foreseen, Bozo got hungry and came down. No arrests were made, even of small boys.

Paralysis of Diaphragm Kills Boy.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 11.—Paralysis of the diaphragm, that strange malady which makes it impossible for its victims to breathe, claimed its first victim here yesterday when Harry Remer, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Remer, succumbed at the City Hospital.

KIRCHWEY ASSAILS THE BAUMES LAWS

"Hit-and-Miss Remedies" Fail in Curbing Crime, Says Former Sing Sing Warden.

PRAISES SOCIAL WORKERS

Their Efforts to Restore Convict to Society Real Solution to Problem, He Adds.

The Baumes laws were condemned as "hit-and-miss remedies, exerting no influence on the vast majority of young criminals," by Dr. George W. Kirchwey, former Warden of Sing Sing Prison and one-time Dean of the Columbia Law School, who spoke yesterday to a group of visiting social workers at the Charity Organization Society, 105 East Twenty-second Street.

The importance of home training in the early years of a child's life was emphasized in another lecture to the social workers by Dr. Marion E. Kenworthy of the New York School of Social Work, who criticised parents for their neglect and failure to impart to the child knowledge important to the child's normal growth and development.

The treatment of crime by the Government, Dr. Kirchwey said, had resulted in the development of an attitude in which the individual was disregarded and only the nature of the offense considered. He commended the point of view of the social worker which considers first the individual and attempts to prevent crime by correcting misconduct in youth.

"The objective in dealing with crime," he said, "should be the maximum protection of society. That can be secured only through the methods of the social worker. The only trustworthy method in approaching the crime problem is individualism. The individual must be understood, and in order to understand him he must be studied, and only after studying and understanding him can we know best how to protect society."

"That," Dr. Kirchwey declared, "is the great objection to the Baumes laws and other similar automatic methods of dealing with criminals. We don't know anything very useful about a criminal if we know nothing more than that he had three previous convictions. In the long run, society is best served not by supporting a prisoner for life at public expense but by turning him back into the community as a self-supporting member of the community."

"A large majority of the men in Sing Sing, most of them already, at the average age of 25, old offenders, had first got into trouble in childhood and had served sentences in penal and correctional institutions almost continually down to the time I knew them," he went on. "Certainly, very many of these might have been turned into safe and useful ways of living if they had been taken in hand early in life by the social worker."

GET THIEF SUSPECT QUICKLY

Police Arrest Salesman Eight Hours After $10,000 Jewelry Robbery.

Within eight hours after the jewelry store of Theodore Jospe in Glen Cove, L. I., had been robbed of diamond rings worth $10,000 yesterday afternoon, the New York police, cooperating with Glen Cove detectives, arrested a suspect last night. Ten of the rings were recovered, the police said.

The suspect, Joseph Jacobs, 30 years old, a salesman, of 267 West Eighty-ninth Street, was arrested as he stepped out of a rented automobile of the Drive-It-Ur-Self Company at Seventieth Street and Broadway. He was charged with grand larceny. The police said he had confessed.

While Jospe's son, Leon, was alone in the jewelry store a confederate of the thief called him to the adjoining drug store for an urgent telephone call, saying that the Jospe telephone was out of order. Meanwhile the thief entered the jewelry store and selected the most valuable rings in the shop. Theodore Jospe returned before the thief left, but his suspicions were allayed when he was told that his son was in the rear of the store. Mr. Croft, proprietor of the drug store, noted the license number of the thief's car as he rode away. The police learned it was a rented car and waited for it to be returned to the automobile company.

TUMULT AT MEETING OF CLEANERS' UNION

Blows were struck during a discussion of the fitness of the new Business Manager of the Cleaners, Dyers and Pressers' Union, at a special meeting last night at Clinton Hall, 151 Clinton Street. For five minutes 300 men milled in the aisles, some with chairs in their hands, some seeking to reach men of enemy factions and others trying to quiet their combative fellow-members.

The fight developed when a member interrupted a speaker and a friend of the speaker resented the remarks. Some of the crowd shouted to others to call the police, but no one left the hall, and the fight was ended without police aid. The meeting was called because of an objection that developed following the election of I. Lebow, as General Manager, over Samuel Weintraub, former President of the union.

Weintraub was supported by Jacob Effrat, Business Manager of the Cleaning and Dye House Drivers' Union, formerly associated with the cleaners', dyers' and pressers' organization. Effrat charged that Lebow had worked in a shop during a strike and demanded that Lebow submit himself to questioning by a committee of twelve men. Effrat further said he would refuse any aid to Lebow if he were retained as Business Manager.

Supporters of Lebow jumped to their feet shouting that they worked with him and that Effrat's charge was false. Lebow denied Effrat's charge. After hours of discussion the meeting was ended with Lebow's offering to appear before the committee to deny charges.

Lamps small but impressive, torcheres tall and stately, lamps varied amazingly. Distinctive designs that make instant appeal to decorators.

FARM-AID POLITICS ENCIRCLES COOLIDGE

From a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 11.—The politics involved in the farm relief issue that has divided the Republican Party in the West into two factions seems to be coming to a focus in the first month of President Coolidge's vacation in the Western extremity of the corn and wheat belt States.

The gathering in St. Paul of advocates of the McNary-Haugen plan, with the announcement that the conference will reaffirm its support of the bill vetoed by the President, brings out in the open the radical wing expected to support ex-Governor Lowden or Vice President Dawes for the Republican nomination. It seemed to make certain that the radicals, basing their campaign on disaffection of the farmers, will not permit President Coolidge to capture the nomination without a contest.

Some of the leaders have sent word here that if the prospective good crops do not dampen the ardor for revolt among the farmers they will carry their battle beyond the 1928 nomination and form a third party or join with the Democracy on the issue of a reduced tariff and Government subsidy for the wheat growers.

There is a growing impression here that some of the less radical farmers believe that the Administration will seek to remove the issue from the primary campaign by forcing through the next Congress a compromise bill that will satisfy the conservative farmers and the banking interests of the West.

Coolidge Recognizes Problem.

President Coolidge has recognized since coming here that the farm relief question is a live one. He has told some advisers that he finds the animosity against the Administration less pronounced since the weather has favored a bumper crop this season.

Nevertheless, he is disposed to recommend to Congress the consideration of a farm bill which some of the farm associations and the committees working with the Government favor. This compromise bill, which will appear in the next Congress sponsored by the farm associations, is likely to receive President Coolidge's support, it is said.

While the radical wing of the party is preparing for a fight in the next Congress for enactment of a bill on the lines of the McNary-Haugen measure, and also fostering sentiment by the St. Paul conference for a campaign in opposition to President Coolidge for another term, the President is studying the farm problem. He has a committee headed by Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce under President Taft, at work, and Secretary Jardine is working on a compromise bill.

President Coolidge does not intend to surrender to the radicals. He will reassert his position positively against the McNary bill as he did in his veto, it is stated, but will recommend a bill extending the cooperative system and providing longer and more flexible credits to the farmers.

The attitude of the Administration will be, it is asserted, a consistent extension of the policy, previously advocated by President Coolidge to aid the farmers.

According to reports President Coolidge has found since coming here that the West is fairly evenly divided on the merits of the McNary-Haugen bill, with its advocates more assertive and apparently in the majority. The middle-of-the-road farmer who only understands that the price situation is working against him seems ready to accept sound farm legislation that will help him to help himself. He is the man who controls the balance of political power.

The policy of the conservative wing of the Republican Party will be to enact legislation that will aid the farmer who has not increased his holdings at inflated prices, and if this can be done it is declared here by those advising President Coolidge that the farm issue will not figure predominantly in the 1928 primaries or the election.

Visitors today told him that another of the wheat States favored him for another term, despite division of the McNary-Haugen bill.

A delegation from North Dakota, headed by Judge R. C. McFarland of Jamestown and including twenty farmers, among them M. M. Coan of Stutsman County, in paying their respects to the President not only reported on crop conditions but gave their views on the political situation as affected by the St. Paul meeting.

Judge McFarland said that North Dakota apparently was going to have its best crop year in the last seven years, provided favorable weather continued for the next fifteen days.

"This situation has made the farmer forget his troubles and his interest in national legislation has been lessened," he said upon leaving the President. "There is no unfriendly feeling against the President because of his veto of the McNary-Haugen bill. Only half of the farmers favor that bill, and some of them are not now certain that its enactment into law would have helped them permanently.

"The farmers, however, think that the Government ought to do something for them to make the farmer dollar approach the purchasing value of the industrial dollar. The farmer needs longer credit, cheaper rates and Government aid in the marketing of his product.

"I believe that the next Congress will pass such laws, and if so, the political disaffection now existing in the fourteen States designated as the wheat and corn belt will evaporate. There will be no political issue founded on the farm problem in the next primary if Congress acts in a way that will satisfy the conservative farmer now suffering under seven years of low prices and reduced crops."

"President Coolidge will get the delegates from North Dakota over Lowden or any one behind the radical Farm bill," he added.

Says Democrats Favor "Jim" Reed.

Discussing politics further, he said that the Democrats in his State seemed to favor Senator James A. Reed for the Democratic nomination for President.

Mr. Coane, who is the Superintendent of the Mary Grey Lee Farms of 15,000 acres, agrees that Judge McFarland had expressed not only his views, but those of at least a majority of North Dakota farmers.

Ex-Representative Frank D. Scott and Herbert H. Frost of New York today invited President Coolidge to speak at the Radio Industrial Conference in New York City Sept. 21, at which manufacturers, broadcasters and other members of the radio industry will be represented. They told the President that the conference plans to send his speech over the widest national and international expanse in history. The President held the invitation under advisement.

Gladys Pyle, Secretary of State of South Dakota, the first woman in the State to hold an elective office, paid her respects to President Coolidge and assured him that his presence in the State had won him much support and had softened the opposition to the Administration founded on his veto of the McNary-Haugen bill.

President Coolidge will entertain at luncheon tomorrow a Wyoming party, including Governor Emerson, ex-Governors Cary and Brooks, Senator Kendrick, Frank Sullivan, national Republican committeeman, and Representative Winter.

Seeks Coolidge for Grant Exercises.

CINCINNATI, July 11 (AP).—President Coolidge will be invited to dedicate the imitation of the homestead of Ulysses S. Grant and Memorial Bridge on the Atlantic and Pacific Highway at Point Pleasant, Ohio, the latter part of September. The replica of the Grant cabin has been completed and will be open for inspection July 20. The original cabin is at Columbus, where it was moved by an act of the Ohio Legislature.

'Outlaws' Steal Message, 'Posse' Regains It, As Pony Express Rides Again for Coolidge

TORRINGTON, Wyo., July 11 (AP).—A dozen armed men led by Dan Nolan and Floyd Coy intercepted Clyde Smith Jr., pony express rider, bearing an invitation from Wyoming to President Coolidge, on the outskirts of Torrington just before 3 P. M. today. The "outlaws" overpowered Smith and made for the Bad Lands, but were overtaken and captured by a posse of some forty cowboys under Sheriff Harold DeWitt.

The pony express riders had rushed the message through to Torrington nearly forty minutes ahead of schedule. After the invitation, burned on calfskin, was recovered from the "outlaws" Boone Reed sped on with it toward the Black Hills.

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 11 (AP).—A relay of Western horsemen rode swiftly over prairie and hills tonight in a revival of the famous Pony Express, bearing an invitation to President Coolidge to visit Cheyenne, Wyo.

Into the pocket of each rider, as he picked up the trail where his predecessor left off, a roll of buckskin was slipped and on it was inscribed a message of good-will to Mr. Coolidge and the hope that he would attend another rodeo in the Wyoming capital July 28.

Although it has been indicated that the President may find it impossible to make any trips outside of South Dakota, Mr. Coolidge watched the progress of the riders with interest, seeing in their ride the wonderful advance in the transportation of mail in the West during a quarter of a century.

A hundred miles from his Summer residence, the latest development in the postal service was winging mail through the air at high speed, yet a few decades ago the delivery of a letter in these Western parts was fraught with the greatest hazards both to life and property.

Tonight as the twenty-seven relay riders rode on their mission, they traveled over the same Cheyenne-Deadwood stage coach trail used in the old days when ambushing Indians and marauding "bad men" were looked for at every turn. Now the trail was over mostly graded and graveled roads through peaceful valleys turned to the production of crops.

The end of the 270-mile journey, which began at Cheyenne at 9:15 this morning, lies at the Summer White House. In company with Governor Emerson of Wyoming, who will come here by airplane, the President tomorrow afternoon will receive the last rider, Dakota Clyde Jones. The riders will have covered ten miles each on horses named in honor of distinguished Wyoming, Nebraska and South Dakota citizens.

The trip was started by John H. (Dutch) Bell on a horse named Frank Emerson, in honor of the Wyoming Governor, and will be ended by Jones on a mount named Calvin Coolidge.

The President today received an invitation to visit Spearfish Canyon, S. D., as unusually attractive part of the Black Hills, where a beefsteak barbecue awaited him.

The President, late in the day, retreated to Squaw Creek for a few hours at fishing, using flies, which he is trying out in place of the worms he used when he first started angling in the Black Hills streams.

FARM LEADERS URGE M'NARY RELIEF PLAN

ing the result of this conference. The drift of the political alignment here will be heralded as the political drift of the times. What will be the answer of the farmers of this conference?"

The farmers' hope in the future is to maintain economic quality through legislation, Mr. Dickinson said, adding that the purpose of proposed farm relief measures was not to fix prices, but to stabilize them on a higher level.

A Federal Farm Board must be included in any satisfactory farm aid legislation, he declared, but instead of specifying commodities to come under the bill, the board should be given "the opportunity to put it in operation on any good commodity that came within the scope of its provisions.

"An equalisation fee will be necessary until the public treasury is to absorb the loss. To say there will be no loss is wrong. The producers of the commodity are willing to absorb the loss if given a stabilized price."

There will be no surrender in the fight to obtain "economic equality" for the farmers of the nation, declared Frank W. Murphy of Wheaton, Minn., Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Council of Agriculture. He predicted an emphatic reaffirmation of agriculture's allegiance to the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill.

"There will be given to the farmers of America," he said, "the assurance that there will be no recession, no concession and no surrender in the battle to obtain economic equality before Congress for the farmers of the nation."

Ben Franklin Would Have Liked This Wanamaker Furniture

38th Annual Wanamaker August Furniture Sale

Franklin undoubtedly saw in America and England many of the pieces from which this present-day Wanamaker furniture draws its inspiration —the master designers of the Eighteenth Century.

He knew the furniture of France . . . so many of the pieces in Belmaison reproduce the very chairs and sofas of that old French Court . . . that Poor Richard would feel quite at home!

He would find that the Wanamaker Sale was a cross-section of American life . . . he would rejoice to see that visitors came from every State in the Union . . . that furniture from the sale goes forth not only in America but to many other parts of the world . . .

Not least in his mind would be the thrift of the sale . . . prices are lowest since the war, you know . . . and he would see in the Little Home That Budget Built . . . the acme of thrift . . . buying only what can be afforded . . . paying for it out of income . . . leaving capital to do its own work of increase, undisturbed.

FORD'S OWN INQUIRY LED TO HIS APOLOGY

J. A. Palma Says Overtures He Suggested Brought the Request to "Go to It."

EX-EDITOR MAKES CHARGE

Declares Ford Ordered Campaign Against Jews to Further His Candidacy for President.

Joseph A. Palma, head of the New York field force of the United States Secret Service, who formerly was stationed in Detroit, told in an interview yesterday of his part in the negotiations leading up to Henry Ford's apology for and repudiation of The Dearborn Independent's seven-year campaign against the Jews.

Mr. Palma explained that he went to Mr. Ford several months ago to complain of an inaccurate article published by The Dearborn Independent on a subject in which the Secret Service was interested, and that Mr. Ford rebuked one of his editors, warning him that nothing must be published in the future without complete proof. Then, according to Mr. Palma, Mr. Ford told him he had been making a "quiet investigation" of the anti-Semitic articles, that he had been surprised at statements made by his paper, that he was "for" the Jews and had thousands in his employ, and that he wanted to stop the campaign and right the wrong it had done.

Thereupon, Mr. Palma went on, he and Earl J. Davis of Detroit, former Assistant United States Attorney General, came to New York and had the conferences with Louis Marshall, head of the American Jewish Committee, and former Congressman Nathan D. Perlman, a Vice President of the American Jewish Congress, which were described in yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES. As a result of these conferences, Mr. Palma revealed, Mr. Ford's apology was sent by air mail from Detroit to Mr. Marshall in New York.

Mr. Palma expressed confidence in Mr. Ford's sincerity. He also made it clear that his own part in the negotiations were in a personal and not an official capacity. Mr. Palma declined to discuss the statement made on Sunday by Mr. Perlman that Mr. Palma and Mr. Davis had agreed with Mr. Perlman, in their first conference, that after making the apology Mr. Ford should dismiss E. G. Leibold, for seventeen years his general secretary and now Vice President of the Dearborn Publishing Company, and W. J. Cameron, editor of The Dearborn Independent, as the men responsible for the anti-Semitic campaign.

Another development yesterday was the issuance by The American Hebrew of excerpts from an article by E. G. Pipp, first editor of The Dearborn Independent, to be published in The American Hebrew's issue of July 15, contradicting Mr. Ford's statement that he did not appreciate either the general nature or details of The Dearborn Independent's anti-Jewish articles, and charging that the campaign was begun on Mr. Ford's order to take advantage of anti-Jewish prejudice in rural districts for the furtherance of Ford's Presidential ambitions in 1920.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency also issued several statements on the Ford retraction, including the theory said to be held in Detroit that Mr. Ford's apology was due to the influence of his son, Edsel Ford, who was said to have attempted to invest $1,000,000 in Palestine mortgage securities a year ago.

Mr. Palma in his statement said:

"Several months ago, The Dearborn Independent published an article in which my department was interested. At my first opportunity, I took this up with Harry Bennett, chief of the Ford secret service, whom I have known for a number of years, and called his attention to a number of inaccuracies. When I questioned him as to where he got such information, he made it very plain indeed that his department had nothing to do with gathering it; that it had been handled entirely by the organization of the Independent.

"I then asked him if the same thing was true in regard to the Jewish articles and he said that it was; that the Ford secret service had nothing to do with them. Then he further surprised me by saying that Mr. Ford was really an admirer of the Jews.

"'He regards them as an essential people,' he said.

"Subsequent to my talk with Bennett, we called on Mr. Ford, and took up with him the article in which I was interested. He promptly called in one of the editors of the magazine and told him that in the future, nothing was to be printed unless the paper had full proof in its possession. 'You know my policy is to print only the truth; that this paper is to be a medium of instruction and not of destruction,' he said.

"After some further conversation, mention was made of the articles on the Jews. Mr. Ford said that for several months he had been making a quiet investigation and was really surprised at some of the statements that had been made in the Independent. I have known Mr. Ford for a number of years, and I could see that he really felt hurt at the information his survey had disclosed.

"In view of that fact, I felt that I could open the subject further. I told him that I was particularly pleased at what he said because I came from New York where so large a percentage of the population was Jewish, and where I had abundant opportunity to observe not only the feelings of the Jew toward him, but also the Jew as a citizen. Being a kindly man, he was hurt deeply. 'I wish this thing could be stopped and the wrong righted,' he exclaimed.

"I was so pleased that I really was stunned, so cannot say whether Bennett or I made the suggestion that he take steps to stop it. I remember I promised to help him all I could.

"'Go to it,' he said, 'I know you can do it. It's a fair and honorable thing to do. When my real views are explained to the proper people, they will know that I'm prepared to act honorably in this matter and, so far as I am able, to repair any damage that has been done.'"

Mr. Palma said that he then got in touch with Earl J. Davis of Detroit, and through him with Louis Marshall and Nathan D. Perlman. A few days later, he said, the negotiations started.

"I want to make it clear that the action he (Mr. Ford) took was entirely of his own free will and accord," Mr. Palma said. "He did it without thought of personal gain, politics, or anything else except to right a wrong to the very best of his ability."

The American Hebrew statement on Mr. Pipp says that he resigned as editor of The Dearborn Independent because he refused to launch the anti-Jewish campaign, and quotes him as saying: "The campaign was carried on not only with Mr. Ford's approval but on his orders."

Discussing the comment made in some quarters that Mr. Ford's apology was a step toward the 1928 Presidential nomination, Mr. Pipp says: "When Ford first launched the attack on the Jews he was a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, firmly so in his own mind. He figured that the prejudice in the small communities throughout the United States was so strong against the Jews that he would gain three, four or five votes there for every Jewish vote he would lose."

Mr. Pipp declares that Mr. Cameron wrote the anti-Jewish articles not because he believed what he wrote but "to please Ford, to reflect Ford's views." As to Mr. Ford's motive in making his apology, Mr. Pipp continues:

"Henry Ford loves money, he loves power, he loves leadership. He likes to be first in everything. Ford for years encouraged Cameron in the work of vengeance. Now that he sees the effect of it on himself as well as on others he repudiates Cameron and his works, works molded after Ford's patterns. I will not say the spirit is not contrite. I will not say that he has not been overpowered by the awfulness of that which had been done in his name. I will not say that he is sorry for business reasons alone. You will have to judge that for yourself."

The man with whom Edsel Ford negotiated for a $1,000,000 loan to Palestine, according to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, was Morris Freedberg, a Detroit Zionist, and spokesman of Zionist investment corporations. Although Edsel Ford viewed favorably the idea of the Ford fortune cooperating in the rehabilitation of Palestine as the Jewish national home, the statement continued, "the negotiations did not culminate due to criticism expressed in certain Zionist quarters of the enlistment of Ford's cooperation. This criticism was based on the fact that an avowed enemy of the Jews, as Henry Ford was then considered, could not be permitted to cooperate with Zionists in the rebuilding of Palestine."

Berliner Tageblatt: "Only a short time ago Ford in an interview with the representatives of the Berliner Tageblatt, urged the German people to free itself from the slavery of Jewish capital and of the Jewish League of Nations."

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency made public the following cablegram from Alfred M. Cohen, President of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith who is visiting in Prague, Czechoslovakia:

"Henry Ford will prove true his contrition if he follows his request for forgiveness by dedicating himself and some of his enormous means to the service of removing prejudice against Jews and other peoples based on ignorance such as he now confesses."

"Mercury in His Third House," Astrologers' Explanation of His Apology

While the rays of the almost full moon seeped through the windows and dimly vied with electric lights, the members of New York's Astrologers Guild met last evening in the Hotel McAlpin and read the horoscopes of men of the day.

Henry Ford's apology, as adjudged by Elizabeth Aldrich, Vice President of the guild, was seen on the chart as "He has Mercury in the Third House—that is the house of publications—while Jupiter and Uranus are over his Neptune." This fact, said the speaker, resulted in Mr. Ford coming to the conviction that he should no longer insult any people. The third house, she added, differed from the ninth in the fact that the former was of temporal newsprints, while the latter was of those more lasting.

The eclipse came in for a share of praise, for it launched Commander Byrd on his journey, his moon, by the way, being in the beginning of Cancer, and "broke up the President's son's reserve." Had Leo been in the ascent when the Commander took off, he likely would not have reached France at all, his failure to get to Paris being due to not waiting until twenty-four hours had passed after the end of the eclipse.

Miss Aldrich was interrupted in a discussion of Lindbergh's horoscope by some question as to his birthday. The trouble lay in whether that day were Aug. 2 or 3, all the difference in the world being made on his manner by way of his sagittarius. The speaker concluded with a notation of disarmament—"The Geneva conference has its horoscope written all over it, and I don't see how they can expect to get anywhere."

Earlier in the evening there was a temporary note of discord struck when Sidney K. Bennett, the Guild's President, announced a forthcoming convention of astrologers in Los Angeles and audibly wondered whether any one cared to put a motion that a letter of commendation be sent to the larger body. The motion was made, but defeated when Miss Aldrich rose and remarked: "I am not in favor of it. They called the convention in the dark of the moon, and if they are not better astrologers than that, I move we do not help them."

EXPECTS FORD'S SUPPORT.

Sapiro, Withdrawing Suit, Looks for Aid for Cooperative Marketing.

CHICAGO, July 11 (AP).—Belief that Henry Ford would, in a further statement necessary for the settlement of Aaron Sapiro's $1,000,000 libel suit against him, endorse the principle of cooperative marketing, was expressed by Mr. Sapiro here today. Meanwhile William Henry Gallagher, his chief of counsel, continued negotiations in Detroit looking toward withdrawal of the suit.

"I have faith in Mr. Ford's sense of justice," said the Chicago attorney, "and I believe, now that he has been informed of the scope, purpose and accomplishments of cooperative marketing, he will endorse it because he will know it is sound in principle.

"I don't ask that Ford say cooperative marketing wherever it exists is good, but as an economic principle I am convinced of its value. Unless there is some retraction on that issue also cooperative marketing will be weakened because of the respect in which many farmers of the nation hold Mr. Ford."

Mr. Sapiro again paid tribute to Mr. Ford's courage in making public an apology for the attacks of his weekly, The Dearborn Independent, upon Jews the publication linked in an international conspiracy.

FLYING BATTLESHIP IN FIRST PUBLIC TEST

Special to The New York Times.

MITCHEL FIELD, L. I., July 11.—The big twin-motored army bomber, completed last week by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Company at its Garden City factory, was turned over to army officers this afternoon for its first public test flights. In the presence of F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War, and officials and engineers of the Curtiss Company, Lieutenants Harry Johnson and Eugene Batten, test pilots from McCook Field, took the big ship, built to carry a total load of more than eight tons, for three flights.

Early in the day it was thought that the rain had softened the sod of Mitchel Field to a point where the tests would have to be postponed, but this afternoon the sun came out and there was a light breeze. Although the field was slightly soft and the tail skid ploughed up the turf, the Condor, as the ship has been named, got off the ground after a surprisingly short run.

Aloft in Seven Seconds.

Lieutenant Johnson, with Batten in the dual control cockpit beside him and R. H. Beisel, assistant chief engineer of the Curtiss Company, in the gun turret in the nose of the fuselage, took the bomber off from a standing start after a run of less than a hundred yards in about seven seconds. After climbing to about six hundred feet Johnson banked and flew northward across Nassau County. After a twenty-minute flight he landed and taxied up to the "line" where Curtiss mechanics were waiting.

Although to the layman's eye and ear the six-hundred horsepower engines were functioning perfectly the mechanics appeared to find them sluggish and changed a couple of spark plugs.

Lieutenant Batten took the controls for a second hop and several Curtiss engineers climbed aboard. Batten swung her back and forth across Curtiss, Roosevelt and Michel flying fields, banking sharply, cutting his motors down and speeding them alternately for about half an hour before he came down.

Then there was a third flight with newspaper men as passengers. One climbed into the cockpit with Lieutenant Batten, another manned the two machine guns in the bow, while two more crouched in the outboard gun turrets on the big wings, which are built into the engine casing behind the engines. Frank H. Russell, Vice President of the Curtiss company, who supervised the tests, made every guest don a parachute, goggles and helmet.

Six Guns Mounted in Ship.

The ship carries six guns. Those in the bow are rigged to cover the air ahead, below and above as well as on either side. The four guns in the two outboard turrets point back and are rigged on arches which give the gunners a chance to make the air behind, above and also to the sides untenable for enemy ships.

The Condor is a biplane with a wing spread of 90 feet, an overall length of 47 feet 6 inches. It weighs, fully loaded, 16,350 pounds, and according to its builders, in spite of its great size it has a performance exceeding that of any other bomber in the United States. It carries 640 gallons of gasoline and has a cruising radius of nearly 800 miles at a cruising speed of 100 miles an hour, according to the estimates. The ship carries a crew of five men—a pilot, a bomber and three machine gunners. It is built to carry more than two tons of bombs.

The landing wheels are equipped with hydraulic brakes and the whole landing gear structure is reinforced with shock absorbers, which let the big ship from the air onto the ground so smoothly that the passengers today could not tell when they had stopped flying and were rolling along the ground.

After other flights here the Condor will be flown to McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, for its final tests.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 11.—Joanna Southcott's mysterious box, which has been securely sealed for 113 years and the only previous clue as to the contents whereof was given by a recent X-ray photograph, was publicly opened tonight before a large gathering at Church House, Westminster.

One of the first objects which met the eyes of the investigators, who included Professor A. M. Low and the Bishop of Grantham, was a book dated 1796 entitled "The Surprises of Love, or An Adventure in Greenwich Park." It was greeted with a burst of laughter.

Joanna Southcott, a servant girl prophetess of considerable fame over a century ago, had directed that the box should be opened in a period of national distress in the presence of twenty-four Bishops. Less than that number of prelates was present tonight, but it was agreed that the state of the nation was sufficiently distressing to satisfy the conditions.

How the nation is to benefit from the contents of the box, however, does not appear. They include a pistol, a diary for 1715 with manuscript notes of a book by Richard Brothers (Joanna's rival) dated 1794, two discourses, a calendar of a French court published in 1793, a puzzle, a child's night cap, an earring, a dice box, a lottery ticket dated 1796, a jubilee medal, a bead purse, a wooden box with a seal book with metal clasps, a shilling token of George III, a coin of Cromwell, miscellaneous coins and a medal of Augusta, Princess of Wales, who died in 1772. A follower of Joanna who was present tonight indignantly maintained that it was the wrong box.

SMITH SETS THURSDAY FOR HONOLULU FLIGHT

Bronte Will Be Navigator in Former Air Mail Pilot's Second Attempt.

OAKLAND, Cal., July 11 (AP).—Ernest L. Smith, former air mail pilot, announced today he would begin a non-stop flight to Honolulu Thursday morning. He will fly in a monoplane, the City of Oakland, and depart from the municipal airport. Emery B. Bronte will be the navigator.

This will be Smith's second attempt to fly from the mainland to the Hawaiian Islands. He was forced to return June 28 because of a broken wind deflector. Smith and Bronte made a successful test flight from Oakland to Santa Monica, Cal., and return over the week-end.

Every precaution for the safety of the airmen has been taken, Captain W. H. Royle, Smith's manager, said. The ship will carry a radio that can be heard for a radius of 600 miles. A rubber raft such as the one used by Commander Byrd and his companions when they were forced down off the coast of France, will be carried in the plane.

The army has offered the fliers the use of the radio beacon which helped to guide Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger to their goal.

THOUSANDS TO SEE LAKE GEORGE SWIM

DEMPSEY GUN TO START 147

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., July 11.—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, who is training at Saratoga Springs, will fire the gun tomorrow morning which will start 147 contestants in the longest fresh water marathon swim in sporting records.

The swim, starting at Hague, will end at the Fort William Henry Hotel Italian pergola in Lake George Village, a distance of about twenty-four miles.

Harry Smith, Sanitary Inspector, has permitted the swimmers to use grease as a protection against the coldness of the spring-fed waters, having been convinced that the wool fat would not be injurious to the lake as a water supply.

Today and over the week-end, thousands of vacationists and swimming enthusiasts arrived at various resorts and points along the 140-mile shore line to witness this $10,000 event, in which foremost European, Canadian and American stars will participate, giving the marathon an international aspect.

The favorites today were Ernst Vierkoetter, the massive German, who swam the English Channel; Ernest Moore Jr., brother of Mrs. Lottie Moore Schoemmel, who in her "grease bathing suit" set a record for the swim down the Hudson River from Albany to New York City, which was bettered only in recent weeks by the Zitenfield twins; Meyer Mendelsohn, the 19-year-old Montreal swimming marvel; Sam Richards Jr., a Boston entrant in many swimming tests; Mrs. Schoemmel, Esther Hertle, the breaststroke champion, and Ethelda Bleibtrey, the Olympic woman's champion.

Other entrants include, Mme. Jane Sion, the Belgian champion, who won the Seine swim in France last year, and several times attempted the Channel; Georges Michel the French baker, the champion of France and swimmer of the Channel, and Olav Farstad, the Norwegian champion.

Omer Terrault, the French-Canadian champion, is registered, and Meyer Mendelsohn, the Canadian swimming star, is looked upon by those who have studied the course in training as the dark horse of the race.

Among the Americans entered are May Elwell of Boston; Lucy Dimond of New York City; Eva Morrison, the Boston light swimmer; Charles Toth of Boston, the first American Channel swimmer; William Sadlo Jr., swimming champion of the New York Boys' Club; George A. Greegan of Paterson, N. J., and Edward Keating of New York City.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., July 11 (AP).—Word was received here this afternoon that the Lake George marathon swim will be under army supervision. Major William L. Rose of Governors Island will arrive tomorrow morning in time for the start and will represent Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, Chief of Staff of the army, as chief judge.

Plans were completed for policing the lake and surrounding district at a conference this afternoon, between Karl T. Crandale, commander of the Lake George Post of the American Legion, which is sponsoring the swim, and Lieutenant M. E. Doescher of the State Police.

Lieutenant Doescher with Sergeant Dowsy Lawrence as second in command, will have a score of troopers available, some of them in police boats to patrol the swim area. Small speed boat tenders will take such swimmers as may need medical attention to the emergency hospital.

BANKERS' CLUB GREETS SALVADOR MINISTER

Americans prominent in finance, business, engineering and the law, who have interests in Central and South America, honored Dr. Gustavo J. Guerrero, Minister of Foreign Relations of the Republic of Salvador, at an informal luncheon given yesterday at the Bankers' Club, 120 Broadway, by the Pan-American Society of the United States.

Dr. Guerrero arrived a few hours before on the steamer Ecuador and will sail today on the George Washington for France. After a brief stay in Paris, the Minister will proceed to Geneva, where he will resume his duties as the permanent official delegate of Salvador to the League of Nations.

Responding to the introduction by Boaz W. Long, former United States Minister to Salvador, Dr. Guerrero, speaking in Spanish said he "deeply appreciated the opportunity to meet those who devote some of their time to the realization of an ideal which has been very dear to me."

"Pan-Americanism," he continued, "responds to a spirit of fraternity which is prevalent all over Latin America. The labor carried on up to now in this sense has made great progress, and many hopes should be founded on the work to be performed at the approaching Pan-American Conference to be held in January of next year.

"On this account, gentlemen, I am happy now to be among you men possessed of such generous disposition toward the closer union of the people of the new world, and it is with the hope of seeing our aspirations realized soon that I reiterate my profound appreciation for the honor of being with you on this occasion."

HECKSCHER ARGUES CONTRACT IS VOID

ASSAIL THE SINGER'S SUIT

Supreme Court Reserves Decision on Motion to Dismiss Action of Concert Star.

Supreme Court Justice Mahoney heard argument yesterday and reserved decision on the application of August Heckscher, realty man and philanthropist, to dismiss the suit brought against him by Mme. Frieda Hempel, concert singer, for breach of a contract to pay her $48,000 a year for life. Mr. Heckscher contended that the case came within the Statute of Frauds involving oral agreements which are not to be performed within a year. He insisted the he made no written contract, and that the complaint shows the agreement could not have been performed within a year.

Irving L. Ernst, counsel for Mme. Hempel, cited decisions which he contended covered the case, conceding for the purpose of argument that the agreement was oral. He said the courts have held that an agreement to support a person for life does not come within the Statute of Frauds, because the person may not live for a year after the contract has started, and that the alleged Hempel contract was "subject to the contingency of the plaintiff's death within a year."

Chadbourne, Stanchfield & Levy, attorneys for Mr. Heckscher, asserted that where it is manifest that the parties to a contract do not contemplate its performance within a year, it is void under the Statute of Frauds, although no time for performance is specified, and there is a mere possibility of performance within a year. The attorneys contended that the decisions cited by counsel for the plaintiff do not cover the present case, and that the "authorities are unanimous that all agreements for a period of a year, performance of which is to commence on a future date, are void."

Counsel also said: "We don't wish to cast any reflections upon Miss Hempel personally, but we believe that the attempt to saddle upon Mr. Heckscher an obligation to pay this lady about a million dollars bears many of the earmarks of extortion."

RETIRED BROKER A SUICIDE.

Milton M. Arnold, Long Ill, Shoots Himself in His Home.

Milton M. Arnold, 63 years old, a retired broker, died in Knickerbocker Hospital yesterday morning after he had shot himself twice in the right temple an hour earlier at his home at 315 West Ninety-first Street. Lawrence Arnold, a son, said his father had been ill for a long time from a nervous disorder.

Shortly after 8 o'clock a maid in the apartment saw Mr. Arnold pacing the hall while his wife, Mrs. Hattie Arnold, was still in bed. Then he sat down at a table and wrote a note, which, when disclosed later, proved to be addressed to his wife and son, and read: "God bless you both. Passed to the Great Beyond." After writing the note Mr. Arnold went into the dining room and a few minutes later two shots were heard. Mrs. Arnold and the maid found the broker unconscious on the floor with a .32-calibre revolver at his side.

$30,000.00 in cash prizes

FIVE CENTS

The dollar is worth less than half what it was in 1886, the year Coca-Cola had its beginning. But through tremendous volume the nickel still keeps this pure drink of natural flavors safe for democracy.

THROUGH a national survey the public has given us six outstanding reasons why everybody likes Coca-Cola—over 7 million a day. We have named them "six keys to the popularity of Coca-Cola." And they are being illustrated and presented in Coca-Cola advertising between the first week in May and the middle of August.

How to find them

You'll find all these "keys" (one "key" to each advertisement) in each of the following weeklies at intervals between the first week in May and the middle of August: The Saturday Evening Post, Literary Digest, Liberty, Collier's Weekly, and Life. You'll also find them in posters and outdoor signs throughout the country, and in the show window displays and the soda fountain and refreshment stand decorations of the many thousands of places that serve Coca-Cola.

Three of the "keys" have already appeared. Did you find them? If you did not, you may still enter this $30,000 cash prize contest by looking through your old magazines and finding the first three "keys." The fourth "key" is illustrated and presented in the picture and the copy that goes with it above. All "six keys" are easy to find if you just keep your eyes open to Coca-Cola advertising.

Note that there are just three things to do to enter this $30,000 cash prize contest. You'll find it simple and interesting. And the first prize is $10,000.

to enter this $30,000 cash prize contest

1. Find and write down the "six keys" and tell where you found each one. (See rules.)
2. Pick out the one key that appeals to you most and tell in one paragraph why it is a good reason for the popularity of Coca-Cola.
3. Then write an answer (in one paragraph) to this question:

Other than magazine and newspaper advertisements, what Coca-Cola advertisement (a wall, poster, red sign or any one of the various pieces used to decorate show windows, soda fountains and refreshment stands) best illustrates or presents to you one or more of the "six keys"? Tell why—and also where you saw the advertisement.

For the correct naming of the "six keys" and the best answers to the questions, the following cash prizes will be awarded:

3rd prize	2,500
4th prize	1,000
10 sixth prizes (each)	100
20 seventh prizes (each)	50
200 eighth prizes (each)	25
400 ninth prizes (each)	10
A total of 635 prizes	$30,000

Follow these simple rules

Do not mail any entry before the first week in August. You must see all "six keys" before you can write correct answers, and the final "key" will not appear until then. Contest closes August 25, 1927. All entries must be mailed by midnight of August 25, 1927, to Contest Judges, The Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga. The contest is open to everybody except those connected with The Coca-Cola Company, a Coca-Cola bottling company, or their families. Write on only one side of paper. Use typewriter, pen or pencil, but please write plainly. Write your name, occupation and address plainly at the top of the first page of your entry. Prizes will be awarded strictly on merit, including the correctness, neatness and clearness of your answers.

All answers become the property of The Coca-Cola Company and may be used in advertising or otherwise. None will be returned.

CONTEST JUDGES
The Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga.

Announcement of the winners and awarding of the prizes will be made as soon after the close of the contest as the judges can complete their work.

The judges will be three former Presidents of the International Advertising Association (formerly Associated Advertising Clubs of the World) and the President of the Coca-Cola Bottlers' Association, and their awards shall be final.

Radio Program—The Coca-Cola Girl—telling a story with music—every Tuesday evening during the contest, 9 to 9:30 Eastern Standard time, 8 to 8:30 Central Standard time, over the following stations: WEAF, New York; WEEI, Boston; WFI, Philadelphia; WRC, Washington; WGR, Buffalo; WCAE, Pittsburgh; WWJ, Detroit; WMAQ, Chicago; KSD, St. Louis; WHAS, Louisville; WSM, Nashville; WMC, Memphis; WSB, Atlanta; WOC, Davenport.

IT MUST BATTLE ITS WAY THROUGH EVERY LIST

The American Weekly, like the "bold knight of old," must battle its way through every list.

$15,000 a page puts it out of the "Let's-help-Old-Bill's-boy," and "We-might-as-well-throw-a-little-business-to-Charlie," class.

The third assistant space buyer and the sales manager's stenographer can't influence its selection.

It's a think-before-you-look rate, a stop-look-and-listen rate—a rate that provokes verification and invokes comparisons.

Every order must submit to an inquisition of facts and figures; every contract first runs a gamut of quizzes and questions.

Price and magnitude practically confine its service to the bigger units of industry—to corporations and concerns whose scale of operation and spread of distribution compel market saturation and require broad-visioned experts in apportioning their appropriations

That's how we get our business: we sell on production records, not on golf links, frat pins and obsolete tradition.

We sell five million circulation—we sell the fourteen pivotal markets and seven hundred best towns—we sell a transcontinental steam roller that crushes a market resistance against which no other medium has ever lastingly prevailed.

STEPHENSON OFFERS HIS PROOF OF DEAL

ALSO TURNS OVER 'CHECK'

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 11.—A photostatic copy of a letter of agreement purported to have been signed by Claude M. Worley, Chief of Detectives, was turned over to William H. Remy, Marion County Prosecutor, and his aids today by Lloyd O. Hill, attorney for D. C. Stephenson, former Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, as one of the two documents promised by Stephenson as a result of an interview with the Prosecutors at the Indiana State Prison last week.

Stephenson is serving a life sentence for the murder of an Indianapolis girl.

Mr. Hill said that on orders of Stephenson he previously had delivered to an Indianapolis newspaper other documents, consisting of checks, letters and contracts. The attorney declared that the documents consisted principally of checks paid to various officials by Stephenson and that the agreements included contracts between Stephenson and some State officials.

The photostatic copy of the alleged agreement between Worley and Stephenson was written on note paper, apparently torn from a small note book. The agreement filled one side and ran over on the back of the sheet of paper. It was undated and read as follows:

Text of Alleged Agreement.

Mr. D. C. Stephenson, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir

For the things you have done to bring about my appointment to the position of Chief of Police under the Duvall Administration, I hereby agree to name Foster Strader as Captain of Police under me and assign him to duty as special investigator for my office. Also I will name one man of your choice as Lieutenant Detective, and will confer with you in the matter of assigning all officers to districts in the city.

CLAUDE M. WORLEY.

Worley denied today any knowledge of the purported agreement. "I don't know anything about it," he said. "On the face of it, it is ridiculous, for I never was appointed Chief of Police."

Several "mysterious" persons were called before the Prosecutor in the course of the day. Mr. Remy would not tell their names and they refused to be interviewed.

Hill asserted that the other document which Stephenson ordered turned over to the Marion County Prosecutors was not in his possession and that he did not know just where it was, although it was in existence. Hill intimated that it was a contract between Stephenson and high city officials of Indianapolis. Publication some time ago of an alleged agreement in which Mayor John L. Duvall was alleged to have promised to name Worley Chief of Police and make other appointments, was the basis of a damage suit filed by Duvall for $1,000,000 against several newspapers. Duvall at that time branded the agreement as a forgery.

Copy of "Check" Made Public.

In the meantime Hill through articles and pictures copyrighted by The Indianapolis Times made public a copy of a check alleged to have been given to Governor Jackson by Stephenson for Jackson's campaign for the Governorship in 1924 The check, written on a bank of Columbus, Ohio, and dated Sept. 12, 1923, was made payable to Jackson and was for $2,500. In a note accompanying the check, says the copyrighted article, Stephenson explained it was "the first one-fourth of $10,000 given Jackson personally for primary expenses."

Remy and his aides who were in conference in the Grand Jury room said the check to Governor Jackson was not included in the documents that Stephenson directed him to turn over to them.

In commenting on the copy of the alleged Stephenson check to Jackson, Remy said that any documents that Stephenson and his friends might produce which tended to substantiate the former Klan leader's charges would be considered on their merits.

Remy declined to say whether in his opinion the check, if valid, constituted a violation of the law, and if it did, whether it would be used as evidence because of the supposed expiration of the two-year limit for prosecution.

When asked over the telephone whether he received the $2,500 check from Stephenson for primary expenses and whether he received others in addition to this check Governor Jackson, who is at Osawatomie, Kan., visiting with his wife at the home of her father, David Beatty, said:

Reports Gifts to Republicans.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 11 (AP).—The Republican State Committee was the recipient of a check for a large sum of money from D. C. Stephenson when he was a power in Indiana politics, Thomas H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, said tonight in discussing the newest developments into the charges by the former Ku Klux Klan leader. Adams instigated the original investigation into the political situation through charges he made last Fall.

Adams would not give the amount of the check which he said was cashed by the Republican State Committee. Neither would he give the date it was written nor the "deal" that he intimated was made.

What he termed a "gentlemen's agreement" with the editor of the newspaper receiving the documents prevented his talking, Adams said. He did go so far as to say that he had examined their contents, knew what they contained and felt certain they were originals and would substantiate Stephenson's claims. Adams added that the names of State and county officials were signed to some of the statements.

He added that Stephenson had revealed a "powerful narrative of Klan control over elections and official life" and concluded with the statement the Legislature should meet in special session "to cleanse itself and vindicate the decent fight for clean government that has been made."

the measure of cooperation required for successful prosecutions. Fear was expressed that with the introduction of new agents into the service through the medium of Civil Service Commission examinations enforcement may temporarily break down.

It appeared to be the consensus of the administrators' opinions that there should be more unstinted use of the padlock. The padlock is regarded as one of the most effective weapons that can be utilized in the warfare on organized bootleggers.

General Andrews, who will retire from office on Aug. 1, was not present at today's conference, although the conference was called by his order. He is away on a vacation. It is understood he will not return to his desk in the Treasury except to "clean up his affairs" and bid his old associates good-bye. For all practical purposes, Mr. Lowman has assumed the duties of the office, although he will not be formally sworn in until Aug. 1.

An element of discord has crept into the prohibition service by reason of the action of Commissioner Doran in calling upon Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General in charge of prohibition enforcement, for legal advice. James M. Britt is the legal counsel of the prohibition unit, but in the framing of new regulations which will be considered by the administrators' conference, Mr. Britt is understood to have been ignored. Mrs. Willebrandt has long been of the opinion that dry enforcement has been rendered ineffective by the regulations with respect to the permissive features of the law.

On her recommendation the new regulations provide that a dealer in whisky, alcohol or wine shall sign a contract assuming full responsibility for any violation of the law on the part of an employe as long as the liquor legally remains in the custody of the permittee. Mrs. Willebrandt also has recommended a proviso permitting unlimited right of search of the premises of a permittee, and unlimited right to examine all the records of retail druggists who deal in intoxicating liquors.

Some months ago General Andrews issued an order vacating the provision of the regulations requiring physicians to name a specific druggist in writing prescriptions for whisky. The National Association of Retail Druggists complained that where the druggist was named in a prescription there was opportunity for collusion between physicians and unscrupulous retailers. The association has informed Commissioner Doran that the present plan should stand, as it contends that the public would be greatly inconvenienced by being compelled to have a prescription for medicinal spirits filled at a particular drug store, which might be located remotely from the patient's home.

Treasury officials were careful to explain today that assistant Secretary Lowman has no intention of resorting to spectacular methods in enforcing prohibition. It will be the aim under Mr. Lowman and Dr. Doran to rid enforcement work of the incidents that have proved offensive to the public in the past. This reform probably will include the permanent abandonment of certain "under cover" methods that have resulted in much adverse criticism. Before the conclusion of the meetings, it was said, the prohibition administrators would be supplied with an enforcement manual outlining methods of building up cases and other important phases of the enforcement work. Major Herbert H. White, Assistant Prohibition Commissioner, has been engaged in preparing this document.

There were informal addresses to the Administrator at the opening session by Governor Lowman and Commissioner Doran. In the afternoon addresses were made by A. A. Smith on "General Accounting"; Major E. A. Coleman, head of the accounts sections; G. E. Knapp on "Field Accounting and Auditing," and Colonel L. G. Nutt, Deputy Commissioner in charge of narcotic enforcement. It was indicated today that John E. Cooper, zone supervisor for the Pacific Coast, would be named to succeed John T. Barrett, prohibition administrator for Hawaii, who has just been chosen United States Marshal for the Panama Canal Zone. The conference will continue until Sunday.

SAYS RUM ROW IS GONE.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 11.—Oliver M. Maxam, Divisional Chief of Coast Guard Operations, completing a tour of inspection of the North Jersey shore Coast Guard stations, declared today that rum running along the coast is rapidly becoming a thing of the past.

"The days of Rum Row are over," said Mr. Maxam. "Rum Row has been knocked higher than the proverbial kite, thanks to the assiduous watch of the Coast Guard and the relentless war that is carried on against the liquor smugglers. The matter of liquor smuggling no longer causes the concern that it did some years ago."

Mr. Maxam, who conducted the inspection with Rear Admiral Frederick W. Billard, denied that extensive cuts in the personnel of the stations in the Fifth District were to be made.

SEES DRY LAW 'FOSSILIZING'

Borah Says Only a Political Party Can Save Amendment From Futility

CHICAGO, July 11 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho in the current Christian Advocate declares that the Eighteenth Amendment will become "fossilized" unless a great political party makes an issue of its enforcement.

"There are those in both parties who are against the Eighteenth Amendment," he said. "Unless the party as a party throws the pledge and the prestige of the party behind its enforcement, there will always be this balancing of the pros and cons, the Wets and Drys, and enforcement will be as it now is in many localities, a mere skirmishing between the lines.

"I venture the opinion that unless the upholding and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, in view of its open, persistent challenge, can call to its support a great political party, the Eighteenth Amendment will continue more and more to be disregarded until, as one of its shrewd adversaries has declared, it becomes 'fossilized and futile.'"

Trap Shooter Wounded by Accident.

HARRISON, N. J., July 11.—Frank Bombace, 56 years old, of Woodside Avenue, Silver Lake, is in a serious condition at the White Plains Hospital through loss of blood incurred when he was accidentally shot yesterday by Tony Valentoni, a friend. The two were shooting clay pigeons on the farm of Frank Parks at Rye Lake, Harrison. Valentoni's gun accidentally went off as he was reloading it and the charge of buckshot hit Bombace's left leg.

And public acceptance, intensified by knowledge that the most popular Essex of history was withdrawn to make way for it, has swept the country in a nation-wide buying fervor that quickly outran the greatest of all Essex production schedules.

All that the previous Essex stood for—speed, reliability and a riding ease that was like flying—is here in greater and more enjoyable degree. There is greater power, pick-up and performance. There is greater luxury and comfort in these longer, roomier, more beautifully finished bodies. But no words can adequately describe the totally different thrill of this new transportation. No price comparison can give any expectation of the quality, value and zestful performance exclusive to this car.

DR. COFFIN FORESEES NO RELIGIOUS RIFT

CITES HISTORY AS PROOF

Church Always Has Weathered Any Threatened Collapse, Clergyman Asserts.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, President of Union Theological Seminary, questioned last night in a public speech the recent utterance of Count Herman Keyserling that "we stand upon the threshold of the most anti-religious epoch of all time."

Dr. Coffin discussed the Count's declaration at the service held in the chapel of the seminary, Broadway and 120th Street, marking the opening of the seventh annual midsummer Conference for Ministers and other Christian workers.

"Church history can tell us that in generation after generation Christianity has seemed to contemporaries to be in a decline and often on the verge of collapse; but the collapse never came," he said.

"It may be that we are entering upon a bitterly anti-religious epoch. The Christian Church has lived through such more than once. And if this be our plight let us thank God for trusting us upon the high places of the field in a day of fierce conflict.

"Ministers of Christ must toil terribly. The ministry is no career for the imperfectly trained; nor is there place in it for any unwilling to think hard and to be life-long students."

Earlier Dr. Coffin said: "Men in general are lazy and stupid and selfish. Ideals frequently go down to defeat and are crucified. The universe encourages brutal struggle with its race to the swift and its battle to the strong and seems ruthlessly uncaring of man and his idealism."

Preceding Dr. Coffin's sermon the students were guests of the directors of the seminary at a dinner in the Faculty Club of Columbia University. After the sermon Dr. and Mrs. Coffin gave a reception at the President's residence, 15 Claremont Avenue.

HELD AS ARMY DESERTERS.

Three Soldiers From Fort Slocum Caught After Swim to New Rochelle

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., July 11.—Three young men, soldiers at Fort Slocum, swam from the post on Davids Island to Davenport Neck, New Rochelle, early today in what police believe was an attempt at desertion. They were arrested by Sergeant John Hildebrand and Detective James Forsyth at Hudson Park dock, New Rochelle.

Drenched to the skin and exhausted from their swim, they were taken to New Rochelle Police Headquarters on charges of vagrancy, and communication with Fort Slocum resulted in holding them for the army authorities. They were turned over to the authorities after being arraigned in New Rochelle City Court before Judge Bizel.

the root of all representative government, and no one who realizes what it means could do otherwise than condemn and deplore it."

The immediate political result of the crime has been a strong revulsion of popular feeling from the opponents of the Free State Government.

The people's confidence in the Government was expressed in today's Stock Exchange quotations. The National Loan fell only half a point and remains steady 1½ points above the price of issue, while all other Free State issues maintained their positions.

Ireland Calm in Tragedy.

DUBLIN, July 11 (AP).—While the Irish Free State mourns the death of Kevin O'Higgins, the Government is making every effort to find and punish his assassins. Civic Guards made nine arrests in Dublin today of men suspected of complicity or in the actual murder, but no new light has been thrown on the motive for the crime.

The Republican leaders have publicly repudiated responsibility for it. On the other hand, fears that the assassination of the Vice President of the council might have a serious aftermath in the way of disturbances have happily not been fulfilled in Dublin and Ireland generally remains calm. On all sides expressions of horror at the crime and sorrow over the loss of a great statesman and lover of his country are heard.

Before the body of the Minister, clothed in the habit of Our Lady of Carmel, was removed from the home at Blackrock to the Mansion House for the lying in state, there was a poignant scene. Timothy Healy, Governor General, came to pay his last respects. Bowing his head over the bier, the Governor was met by the trembling and weeping widow, whom he embraced and sought to console in her distress.

The assassination of O'Higgins, The Irish Times believes, will rally the whole nation to the Government's support and inspire all parties in Parliament with a new sense of responsibility. The newspaper calls for quiet testimony of faith in the Government's stock and the country's destinies.

Shock to Friends in London.

LONDON, July 11 (AP).—Expressions of regret and indignation were heard in London today over the assassination of Kevin O'Higgins. He had many friends and admirers here, and only last week, returning from Geneva, he visited several British Ministers, to whom the news brought that natural sensation of shock over the death of one recently seen in health and full activity.

A number of prominent British political leaders made statements of regret and admiration for publication, and L. C. M. Amery, Secretary for the Dominions, sent the condolences of the Government to William T. Cosgrave, head of the Free State Cabinet.

Fears are expressed in some newspapers that the murder may mark the beginning of a fresh period of lawlessness in Ireland, perhaps a renewal of civil war. Of this, however, there is no present indication, and as far as reported here, the only excitement in Ireland yesterday arose from indignation over the assassination.

Special dispatches suggest the probability that political motives inspired the assassination. The special correspondent of The Daily Mail who reported the recent elections in the Free State declares:

"It is impossible to say from which section came the Vice President's death warrant. He had enemies throughout all the counties."

KELLOGG SENDS CONDOLENCES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Secretary Kellogg today sent to President Cosgrave of the Irish Free State a message of condolence on the assassination of Vice President Kevin O'Higgins yesterday. It read:

Washington, July 11, 1927.

His Excellence, William T. Cosgrave,
President, Executive Council,
Irish Free State, Dublin.

I desire to express my heartfelt condolence on the tragic death of Mr. Kevin O'Higgins, Vice President and Foreign Minister of the Free State, and delegate to the Geneva Naval Conference.

FRANK B. KELLOGG,
Secretary of State.

A solemn high mass in memory of Kevin O'Higgins will be held at St. Patrick's Church at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning. It will be attended by American officials and the diplomatic corps, headed by Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, dean of the corps.

SEES NO POLITICAL EFFECT.

Irish Representative Here Says Others Will Take O'Higgins's Posts.

The assassination of Kevin O'Higgins, Vice President of the Irish Free State, will have no political significance, in the opinion of Lindsay Crawford, trade representative of the Free State in this country.

"The loss of Mr. O'Higgins will be felt by Ireland," said Mr. Crawford, "but the Government consists largely of young men who have been steeped in the affairs of State ever since the present Government was organized. They have been with Mr. O'Higgins while he organized the court system that is now effective and they know what he had planned to do. His staff is particularly efficient and will carry on."

Mr. Crawford would venture no opinion as to the cause of the murder. "The police would like to know that," he said. However, the Rev. John H. Dooley of 585 West 121st Street, pastor of the Church of Corpus Christi, expressed a definite opinion.

"We can say little more than 'God have mercy on his soul,'" said Father Dooley, "but at the same time we must feel that it is to Ireland's benefit that he has gone. The Christians in Rome must have felt a relief at the death of Nero, and this is an incident that brings the same feeling. The recent elections caused the fear, no doubt, that O'Higgins would be placed in charge of work similar to that done by our Attorney General in this country, and his power was feared.

"This man, who is held responsible for the killing of fifty or sixty young men who dared to defy his power, was held to be nothing less than a Nero and, no doubt, the feeling ran rife that Ireland was in for a reign of terror. He was known as a merciless person; hundreds of persons have fled for their very lives, to this country because of the fear with which they held O'Higgins. I do not think there will be any political effect, but I do think that sheer fear caused this group to determine to kill him as the only means of safety."

The Irish Advocate, a weekly newspaper with republican tendencies, as against Free State, will say editorially in Thursday's issue:

"The assassination of Mr. O'Higgins is extremely regrettable. It recall: the circumstances and conditions surrounding the killing of Burke and Cavendish in the Phoenix Park, Dublin, in 1882. So far there is nothing in the press despatches to indicate that the killing has any political significance.

"It is more probable that it was an act of private vengeance by some one who had a grievance, real or imaginary, against Mr. O'Higgins, first, because of the working of what is known as the flogging act, which, it was believed, he was responsible for; or second, because of the execution of Rory O'Connor and his comrades during his régime as Minister of Justice.

"He had many enemies, too, among the supporters of the Free State Government since the time of the army crisis, so that it is very difficult to see from what section the order for his execution came. It is to be hoped that there will be no panic in Ireland as a result of the ugly murder but that the Government will proceed calmly to fix the blame and bring the perpetrators of the crime to justice."

Francis J. Lowe, Secretary of the Friends of the Irish Free State, said yesterday that the incident should not be discussed by Irishmen in this country.

"Nothing is to be gained at this time," he said, "in trying to start more trouble, and we believe that at this time Irishmen should keep their mouths shut in the interest of peace."

Miss Spas Bitten by Dog.

Mary Louise Spas, who was once adopted by Edward West Browning, was bitten in the upper lip, it was learned yesterday, by a playful police dog. She had to have the wound dressed at St. John's Hospital, Long Island City. On her way to her home at 29 Wilson Avenue, Long Island City, the taxicab in which she was a passenger collided with another automobile and she was shaken.

"Eight hours vanished forever from my life"

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, the philosopher of The Bowling Green, recently took his first "voyage" on the 20th Century Limited. He told the story in the Saturday Review of Literature, from which these extracts are reprinted by his permission:

In New York we think of the Twentieth Century Limited as just a train, but in Chicago she is an institution.

The Century, as she is affectionately and familiarly called out there, makes her departure from the La Salle Street Station with something of the circumstance of a crack liner leaving her pier.

The morale of the whole scene is magnificent.

She pulls out on the tick, and leaps at once into her long, smooth stride. Behind you see the second section following, the big locomotive fluttering two green flags.

We make our first stop at Elkhart. It's fine to see a squad of oilers and coal-passers leap at the engine almost before she has come to a stop and begin hostlering her . . . Then we're off again. The second section pulls in just as we leave. Do they keep it up like that, nip and tuck, all night?

* * * *

The sweet brown fields of Indiana recede behind us. . . . I guess there's truth in what the railroad claims about the water level route: certainly the running is amazingly smooth.

By dusk the train has settled down to so tranquil and domestic a routine that you have all the settled feeling of an ocean voyage.

When you've had a light dinner, and read G. K. Chesterton in the Illustrated London News, and remembered to put your watch an hour ahead, you'll find your berth made up. You fall asleep just as you come into Erie.

What happens between Erie and Albany I have no notion. Usually I don't sleep much on trains, but I thank the Century for some eight hours vanished forever from my life—hours of complete nothing, a capsule of eternity.

I was sorry to see the last of our relay of locomotives leave us at Harmon. It would have been nice for her, I thought, to have had the honor of roaring us proudly to the very end. And I wouldn't have been myself, I reflected ruefully, if I hadn't immediately gone on to find a symbol in the matter. For it is just so with man throughout his life—he's frequently changing engines. For a while, Fun is his motive power; then Earning, or Ambition, or Love, or Family, all powerful moguls, keep him all steamed up. Perhaps it is the quiet electric engine, Peace, that brings him at last into his Grand Central Station.

A complete reprint of Mr. Morley's article may be obtained upon request to the Passenger Department, New York Central Lines, 466 Lexington Avenue, New York.

TELL OF THE SPREAD OF ROTARY ABROAD

Report Extension Prospects Good, With Germany Coming Into Movement in Short Time.

More than 100 Rotarians who have been attending the International Rotary Convention at Ostend, Belgium, and touring Europe, where they were entertained by Kings and Queens and Government heads, returned yesterday on the Cunarder Scythia from Liverpool.

Arthur H. Sapp of Huntington, Ind., newly elected President of Rotary International, said that in numbers and interest this convention was the greatest ever held in Europe. More than 3,000 Rotarians were present, he said, and added that fully 2,000 will come to the United States in 1928 for the International Convention at Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Sapp said the Rotarians visited clubs in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Holland, France, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Austria, Hungary, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Norway, Denmark and Portugal, and were treated with the utmost courtesy.

Extension Prospects Bright.

Prospects of further extension of the Rotary movement in Europe were bright, Mr. Sapp said. There are now 365 Rotary Clubs in Europe and the United Kingdom and on the Continent, and enough new clubs are about ready for charters to bring the total to 400. By the end of the year the total will reach 500, he believes. One new factor in causing this will be the bringing of Germany into Rotary; the first club in that country is expected to be chartered shortly at Hamburg, and in a number of other German cities the preliminary organization is already completed. Several new clubs will be organized in the United Kingdom this year also; while in London recently Mr. Sapp aided in presenting charters to two new clubs, Eastham and Tottenham.

Harry H. Rogers of San Antonio, Texas, President of Rotary International last year, was decorated with the Order of the Crown of Leopold by King Albert of Belgium after the convention.

"The widest publicity ever given an international convention was accorded our meeting at Ostend," said Mr. Rogers. "Not only did the British papers 'cover' in detail every phase of the convention along with a number of the Continental papers, but the American press associations were represented by staff men and gave American papers the story of the convention in full. There was an expression of confidence on every hand in Rotary's possibilities, the convention demonstrated the fact that the 3,000 American Rotarians could conduct themselves rotarily abroad as well as at home, and it gave the two largest groups, the Rotarians from the British Isles and those from North America, a broader vision of Rotary's possibilities. It gave the smaller groups in Rotary among the forty-one nations a clearer as well as a more sympathetic vision, furnished opportunity to renew old acquaintanceships and make new ones on an international basis, and planted the seedbed for the greatest extension program Rotary has so far contemplated.

Meeting Was Financial Success.

"Certain necessary and wholesome legislation, needed to help along this international program was passed. Although 3,000 miles from America, whence came nearly half the 7,000 Rotarians present, the convention was a financial success, and the large group of American Rotarians return with a new and much better appreciation of the European situation and with a more sympathetic because better informed mind than they had previously."

Walter D. Cline of Wichita Falls, Texas, Chairman, and Chesley R. Perry of Chicago, Ill., Secretary, were also decorated by King Albert.

TWO POLICEMEN ARE HELD.

$1,000 Bail for Each on Assault Charges—Both Suspended.

Two policemen were held in $1,000 bail each yesterday, one in the Harlem Court and the other in the Washington Heights Court, after they had been suspended on charges of assaulting civilians.

In the Harlem Court Patrolman Albert Otto, 22 years old, of the Queensboro Bridge Station, was charged before Magistrate George F. Ewald with having struck Louis Nesladek of 1,441 Avenue A. When Nesladek and his wife, Frances, told Magistrate Ewald that they wished to withdraw the charge against Otto, the Magistrate held them as material witnesses. Nesladek said that he and his wife with the policeman and another man had drunk some liquor at their house and Otto had fired a shot with his service revolver and then knocked out two of Nesladek's teeth with his black jack.

Patrolman Thomas M. Joyce, 25 years old, of Traffic Squad "A" was charged in the Washington Heights Court with having struck Mrs. Mary Florio of 30 Vermilyea Avenue at Academy Street and Broadway on Sunday night. He was pronounced unfit for duty by Dr. Henry Weinstein, a police surgeon, and suspended by Deputy Inspector John A. Leach. Magistrate Henry M. R. Goodman held the policeman for a hearing on Monday.

Court Decides for Ziegfeld.

Supreme Court Justice Ingraham denied yesterday the application by Elizabeth Hines, musical comedy star, to compel Florenz Ziegfeld to arbitrate a dispute over her claim on a contract. The Court said that by the terms of the contract Miss Hines was limited to damages consisting of two weeks' salary at $1,500 a week, and that since the defendant has offered to pay this sum there is no controversy to be arbitrated.

ELEVATED TRAINS CRASH.

600 Passengers Frightened by Collision in Brooklyn.

Six hundred passengers on the B. M. T. elevated were frightened yesterday morning when a four-car Bay Ridge train slid on the slippery tracks into the rear of a six-car Myrtle Avenue train at Adams Street and Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn. The two colliding platforms were damaged and some passengers were thrown from their feet, but none was injured.

Traffic was delayed twelve minutes. The Myrtle Avenue train was standing at the Adams Street station when the Bay Ridge train came around the curve. P. J. O'Neill, motorman, said he tried to stop in obedience to the automatic signal but the rails were too slippery. Reserves were sent from the Poplar Street Police Station. The passengers left the two trains, which were taken to repair shops, and continued their journeys on others.

Ex-Police Chief Freed From Prison.

SALEM, Mass., July 11 (AP).—William L. Quinn, former Chief of Police of Swampscott, who has served at Salem Jail seven months of a fifteen-month sentence imposed by the Federal Court for violation of the liquor laws while Chief, was paroled today by order of the Federal authorities at Washington.

The camp is affiliated with the Jewish Board of Guardians and takes care of 300 school girls between the ages of 9 and 14 years, giving them a minimum of three weeks' free vacation each.

Levy, Senator Benjamin Antin, Senator Burchell, Sophie Irene Loeb, Fanny Hurst, Mrs. Simon Frankel, Mrs. Isaac Kuble, Mrs. Joseph Leblang and Mrs. Louis Surut. The children will entertain the visitors with a playlet, songs, esthetic dancing and feats in swimming.

Subway Guard Jailed for Assault.

In default of a $50 fine Albert Graham of 20 East 112th Street, an Interborough guard, was sent to jail for ten days by Magistrate Ewald in the Harlem Court yesterday for abusing a passenger. Graham was arrested on June 25 after he struck George H. Rosenstein, a Washington (D. C.) attorney. Rosenstein and his wife were boarding a train when Graham shut the doors too quickly and the lawyer was knocked down. When he expostulated with Graham, Rosenstein said, the guard struck him in the face.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, July 11.—The first qualifying round of the British open golf championship was played here today, and America has no cause to grumble since her representatives are so far, well up in the forefront according to the returns. Wild Bill Mehlhorn, playing the new course, went wild enough to top the list there with 73 with Jim Barnes next at 74. On the old course Kirkwood did well with a 75 and Bobby Jones was next door with a 76.

The best score on the old course was returned by a Frenchman, Rene Golias, who was practically unheard of in this country hitherto. Golias played wonderful golf to the turn which he reached in 34 and only slackness in putting coming in prevented a record score. Next to Golias came George Gadd and E. R. Whitcombe with 72 each and Cyril Tolley and Aubrey Boomer with 73 each.

Mehlhorn's 73 on the new course was accomplished by virture of good putting. As he said afterward, "If I putt like this during the championship proper, always providing I qualify, I shall be tickled to death."

Recovery Shots Brilliant.

Mehlhorn was cutting his tee shots but making wonderful recoveries from bad lies. Also on the new course, Barnes was producing almost automatic golf. The human element came in occasionally, but not often enough to cause him much worry.

With a clover blossom stuck in the corner of his mouth and with a look of grim determination, Barnes did his 74 without apparent effort except at the twelfth, where a visit to two bunkers caused him a certain amount of thought. This hole cost him six. Barnes said to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent afterward. "It was silly of me, but I am not worrying. Everything in the garden is lovely." Incidentally, he agreed that the new course as compared with the old one was not as easy as represented.

Kirkwood had an excellent opportunity of returning the best score on the old course. Playing superb golf, he was out in 34, and until the twelfth was three under fours. Then disaster befell him, the unlucky thirteenth, where he took three putts costing him a 5.

At the fourteenth Kirkwood drove out of bounds, losing stroke and distance, and took a 7. He took a 5 for the fifteenth, thus needing eighteen strokes for the three holes. Under the circumstances, his 75 with 41 for the homeward half showed remarkable if erratic golf.

However, the American who drew the biggest crowd was Bobby Jones, since he is defending his title. The rain was pouring down in torrents when he started this morning with a black and white umbrella as somewhat inadequate protection against the elements. Nevertheless, at least a thousand enthusiasts braved the weather in order not to miss the opportunity of seeing one who is regarded in this mecca of golf as the greatest exponent of the game—amateur or professional—the world ever has produced.

On the official program Jones is described as Mr. Robert T. Jones Jr., but to people here—Scottish, English, Irish and Welsh—he is just plain Bobby. R. A. Whitcombe, his partner, despite the great things he has done, was a negligible quantity compared to them. The only matter they seemed to be concerned about was Bobby's performance. If he missed a holeable putt—and there were a number of them—there was a groan of sympathy; if he made a good shot then there was applause.

Jones's score for the day would have been considerably better if he could have got his putts down. With the rain pouring down and the greens slow he found difficulty, not only in gauging his strength but in calculating the bias of the green. Several times he was so mystified by the behavior of his ball that, after holeing out, he tried the putts again—and he missed them every time and shook his head despairingly.

Bobby Has Pair of Sixes.

Bobby was out in 38 and home in 38, with two sixes on the card. The second 6 was at the seventeenth—the famous road hole where so many potential champions come to grief, but he never went on to the road. He scuttled his second shot into a bunker, played a fairly respectable shot out, and then, with a chance of still getting his five, ran past the pin too far to get down in one putt. He threw down his club and the crowd understood his feelings. They agreed with him that it was a feeble shot.

The biggest tragedy of the day was experienced by Cyril Tolley. He brought it on himself. Playing perfect golf on the old course he was within two yards of the pin at the eighteenth and needed one putt for a 70. Too confidently, perhaps, he struck the ball and missed the hole. He took a careless backhanded flick with the putter and missed again. He did the same thing again twice. Then he decided there was a proper way of putting and tried it. The hole cost him 6 and his score was 73. The other leading British amateur, Roger Wethered, is practically out of the running as the result of an 82.

There were two other Americans who must not be lost sight of. One on the old course, the Californian, Tom Sevens, did a creditable round of 76, and one on the new course, Larry Nabholtz of Cleveland, did a 77. Sad to relate, the American amateur, Joshua Crane, from Brookline, could not struggle around in less than 92. Anyway he had pluck enough to return his card. The American amateur, John G. Anderson, took a 78.

Duncan Takes an 80.

George Duncan, one of the bright hopes of Britain, failed to maintain his patch of brilliance and turned in an 80 on the new course, practically putting himself out of the running.

The American amateur, E. W. Haley, who got the Britishers scared by his unexpectedly brilliant performance in the recent amateur championship, could not get his clubs to function so well today. He said he only entered the championship for fun and was quite smilingly satisfied with his score of 81 on the new course.

Archie Compston, another British hope, did better with a 76 on the new course. Other British scores were Ted Ray, 76; James Braid, 76; J. H. Taylor, 75; Percy Boomer, 75, and Harry Vardon, 77.

Bobby Asks a Question.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, July 11 (AP).—"If I take 76 hitting the shots as well as I did this morning, what will I have if I begin missing the shots?" said Bobby Jones, from the centre of a swarm of Scottish bairns, who surrounded him with autograph books outstretched at the end of his first round in the British open. The champion's chief trouble was putting. He dropped three strokes to par and never recovered them, because not a single little birdie flew out of his bag during the whole round.

Rain, which flooded St. Andrews for the first hour of championship play, ceased as Jones entered the "loop" district from the seventh to eleventh holes. The weather improved as Bobby's round progressed, but the champion couldn't seem to inject any real brilliance into his game. He finished three strokes down to par.

Bill Mehlhorn, who turned in a 73, was out in 35. He holed a five-yard putt at the fourth for a 3. His drive and brassie were fifteen yards short of the pin at the 535-yard eighth hole, but he chipped up and holed his putt for a 4. At the 265-yard ninth he was four yards from the pin with his first drive and then down in 3.

The father and son entrants, Robert Nettleford and his son, Len Nettleford, who is the amateur champion of Australia, returned 86 and 80 respectively.

Tomorrow the players will switch courses for another qualifying round, after which all but the first hundred and ties for the hundredth place will be eliminated.

BUSTER TIES BABE IN HOME-RUN DASH

COLLINS ALSO HITS DRIVE

Nets New York's First Run and Finds Range for Hugmen—Hoyt and Stoner Fail to Last Distance.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.
Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, July 11.—The Buster and the Babe are neck and neck once more in the Great American Home-Run Handicap of 1927.

Except for the fact that Buster Gehrig hit his twenty-ninth home run of the season, putting him again on even terms with Babe Ruth, it hardly seems worth while mentioning the little game of baseball between the Yanks and the Tigers here today.

Of course, the Yanks won, 8 to 5. That might be an item of some interest. It also might be mentioned, casually, that Waite Hoyt and Bob Shawkey made the wild and ferocious Tigers appear strangely like house cats. But these factors are merely incidental to the main bit of gossip.

Having done nothing more devastating than to bang out a few singles, doubles and triples since Independence Day, Lou decided it was about time to get back into the race where hits are really worth while. He warmed up with a double off Lil Stoner in the sixth inning, which started a five-run rally that overcame a slight Detroit lead and he took up the main business of the afternoon as a starter to the seventh.

Gehrig Breaks Through.

Stoner, through a little oversight on the part of George Moriarty, was still on the pitching premises. Nobody was on base and the Yankees were far enough ahead to make a run or two of small concern to any one. But Buster had his own personal affairs to think of and took no pity on any one, least of all the ball.

He belted it on a line into the bleachers that nestle between right and centre field and then trotted around the bases as though he hit 'em like that every day. Well, he does—almost.

Pat Collins also hit for the circuit. His drive went in the other direction, settling somewhere beyond the left field fence in the fifth inning. It was the first run the Yanks made and as the Tigers had accumulated a couple in the first inning it seemed highly important at the time. However, it found the range for the others and it wasn't long before the base hits started flying around Mr. Stoner in clusters and Yanks marched over the plate in columns of squads.

Five runs in the sixth and two more in the seventh put Stoner in such a predicament that he had to give way to a pinch hitter and Nancy Hankins finished the game for the Tigers without further damage from the opposition.

Huggins Switches Hoyt.

Hoyt was greeted with a single and a double at the very beginning, but after that he did all the pitching any one could ask of a young man with a sore arm until his wounded wing weakened in the seventh. Between the first and the seventh Hoyt allowed Detroit only one hit, but three more flew past him before Shawkey could get warmed up, and as a couple of runs flowed over the plate Manager Huggins came to the conclusion that a little shifting would be healthy.

Stoner staggered through to an 11-8 victory in the opening game of the series unaided, but he had no such good fortune today. He didn't receive the support he evidently is accustomed to from the hitting end.

Hoyt, however, did not rely on the other Yanks to drive in runs. He belted out a pair of singles that accounted for three tallies in his own right.

Golfer Appears on Historic Course With Gaudily Colored Clubs.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, July 11 (AP).—Anconeus Dell, entrant in the British open championship, is attempting to add to the gayety of golf with colored clubs.

Dell appeared at the historic first tee at St. Andrews today with a set of variegated clubs, the heads painted yellow and the shafts blue and red. He calls for his clubs by their colors.

Dell is something of a golfing theorist. He is an exponent of the flat-footed swing and explained that he entered the championship to determine what is the matter with golf and why it is that Americans make low scores and win championships.

St. Andrews doesn't like innovations in its ancient game, and much unfavorable comment was heard about the colored clubs. Dell's researches into golf were not altogether successful today for he finished with a total of 82 strokes.

SENATORS WIN, 3-2, ON HARRIS'S STEAL

LOSERS TIE IN THE SEVENTH

Knot Count After Opponents Take Lead in First With Two-Run Assault.

CLEVELAND, July 11 (AP).—Bucky Harris, manager of the Senators, stole home in the tenth inning of today's game with the run that beat Cleveland, 3-2, thus making it six straight from the Indians.

Washington bunched hits in the first inning to score two runs off Buckeye, but Cleveland tied it in the seventh.

In the tenth Harris singled with one out and Speaker walked. Goslin flied to right which sent Harris to third. With Judge at bat Speaker dashed toward second and Grant, forgetting all about Harris, threw to second to head off Speaker and Harris scored without opposition.

CHICAGO, July 11 (AP).—Daring base running by Bill Barrett enabled Chicago to defeat Boston 7 to 6, taking three out of the five game series. After the local team had taken an early lead, the Red Sox bunched hits and drove Blankenship off the hill in the eighth inning, whereupon Jacobs forced in the tying run.

With two out in the ninth, Barrett singled and stole second. Hoffman's throw was wide and Barrett went to third and scored when Flagstead fumbled the ball in centre field.

Pickups and Putouts

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, July 11.—The victory over Detroit this afternoon gave the Yanks an even break in the six-game series.

Combs plucked a line drive off his fast moving instep that was a gem, but the real sparkling play of the afternoon was made by Signor Lazzeri. Tony slipped back into left field, snared Warner's grounder with one hand and then threw him out from a range of three or four kilometers.

When Gehrig lofted his homer into the bleachers it brought the Yankees' total to nine in the six-game series here. Ruth made three, Lazzeri two, Dugan, Meusel, Collins and Gehrig one each.

It may have been very irritating but the Yanks were forced to hurry through the game. They had to make a train that left just about the time they are accustomed to starting the sixth inning on any other day.

The train was headed in the general direction of Cleveland, where the New Yorkers will see the first Indians since arriving in the West. They'll mingle with McCallister's Tribe in a four-game series, starting tomorrow.

CARDS POUND PRUETT HARD

Get 15 Hits, Though Held to 2 Runs Till 8th—Frisch's 2 Stolen Bases Make Total 25.

PHILADELPHIA, July 11 (AP).—The Cardinals gained a half game on the Pirates and Cubs, both idle today, by opening a series here with a 7-0 triumph over the Phillies.

Grover Cleveland Alexander blanked the Phils with four scattered hits and did not permit a man to advance beyond first base. The four hits were divided over as many innings and among as many batters.

Pruett, though touched for fifteen hits, only yielded two runs to the Cards until the eighth, but they got five more in the last two innings.

Frankie Frisch, leading base stealer of the league, increased his total for the season to twenty-five by stealing second base twice. Heinie Schuble, new St. Louis shortstop, starred in the field by accepting eleven chances without an error.

TOLEDO, July 11 (AP).—The largest initial day crowd of several seasons, a fast track, perfect weather and fine racing all helped inaugurate the opening of the 1927 Grand Circuit season here today.

The feature, the Steadman two-year-old class trot, was captured by Nellie Signal in straight heats. This filly, owned by Ed Stout of Pontiac, Mich., and driven by Nat Ray, trotted both miles in 2:07¼.

The Mooney stake for three-year-old pacers went to Volo Rico, the favorite in straight heats. Will Crozier had a buggy ride in every heat in this race and was never seriously threatened.

The open trot, the first event on the card, went to the Stellarene with Bob Plaxico, well known half-mile track driver, in the sulky. Stellarene won the first and third heats, the second going to Bamore with Stokes up. Bamore led to the stretch in the first heat and then seemed to tire and was passed by Stellarene. Stokes came back in the second heat and drove the gelding to a half-length victory over the favorite.

In the final mile, Bamore was again the leader until 100 yards from the finish line. When Stellarene threatened, Bamore broke and the Plaxico horse took the event.

BEZDEK OUT ON CRUTCHES.

Penn State Coach Makes First Appearance After Long Illness.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., July 11 (AP).—Hugo Bezdek, director of athletics at Pennsylvania State College, today made his first appearance on the campus in almost four months, having been confined to the Centre County Hospital and to his home here for the best part of six months with an infected leg.

"Bez" appeared on crutches, hobbling about from one office to another in the Administration Building. He spent most of the afternoon getting acquainted with Dr. Ralph D. Hetzel, who started his duties as President here in January, only a few days before the popular athletic director was stricken with intestinal influenza and an abscess which later affected his leg.

"Feeling fine, but mighty soft," Bezdek said. "It's too early to talk football, but there's nothing doing in the line of an offer from Butler College."

EMPIRE CITY RACE DISPLEASES CROWD

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Racing at Empire City yesterday afternoon, like the "Heathen Chinee," was peculiar. It was so much so that only one favorite scored, and that at even money by a nose. Furthermore, in a two-horse race, the 1-to-4 choice was nosed out of the money. Out of an entry of seventy-two, twenty-seven, or nearly half, were scratched in the face of a track that was no worse than good and fast at its best.

That was not all. The race for the Amaranth Purse, a dash of five and a half furlongs, was such as to warrant unpleasure of the crowd and cause the stewards of the meeting making an investigation. The Short Grass Stable's two-year-old colt Fred Parker, which ran his last race in company with such juvenile stars as Dice, Sun Edwin and Groucher, was one of the field of six.

He broke with the leaders and then his jockey, Eddie Robbins, appeared not to be trying with the colt as he finished a bad last. Robbins and the colt's trainer, J. S. Anderson, were called before the stewards for questioning and the investigation has not been completed.

There was an interesting and unusual detail to the two-horse race. It was the second on the card and was called the Prospect Purse—well named in view of the prospect that the fourteen platers would give a good contest. But there were exactly twelve scratches for no apparent reason. It was enough to send the paying patrons home in disgust at rules which permit such a performance. But the strange thing about it was that, although the favorite was beaten, he earned more money than the winner.

Only Two Go to Post.

David S. Rouss's aged mare Belphrizonia and Mrs. K. K. Karrick's Irish Marine were all that were left to do battle over the route of a mile and a sixteenth. The latter was the 1-to-4 favorite backed from 2 to 5, while the mare closed at 7 to 2. She hadn't shown anything of late, having had trouble with her wind. She had been operated on for this and when it came to the race she was right with the gelding. She was once a smart race mare and the operation transformed her into a racing tool that recent form would not indicate. She was receiving twenty-two pounds from the gelding, minus two and a half pounds overweight she was carrying, matched him stride for stride and nosed him out on the wire.

The purse was worth $700 to the winner, while the second money added to the scratch fees, brought Irish Marine's share up to $760.

The featured number was the Hotel Embassy High Weight Handicap at about six furlongs. Half of the entry was scratched, leaving five to run, with H. T. Archibald's Crystal Dominoe, the even-money favorite. This was the only winning choice, Pete Walls bringing the three-year-old home to nose out C. A. Mills's gelding Millwick.

Louis Feustel's Peter Fiz, whose owner-trainer thought him a sure winner, was the second choice, but he was put away in the early running by the B. B. Stable's speedy Sandy. The latter tired badly and the first two in the money battled it out in the stretch.

Black Panther Scores.

As much interest centred in the race for the Spur Purse as in the handicap. This was a gallop of a mile and seventy yards, with penalties and allowances, and Tom Healey found it a nice spot in which to drop Walter J. Salmon's three-year-old colt, Black Panther. The homebred son of Black Toney has been having a rest since the Kentucky and Fairmount Park Derbys and looked to many a good thing under his 110 pounds, and he had a lot of play at 6 to 5 and 3 to 2. The talent went mostly to the Sage Stable's Flippant, which was backed to even money at the close.

The contest was between these two in a field of five. Maiben was up on the Salmon colt, took him into the lead from the drop of the flag and rated him in front to the wire to win by only a head. The others were far out of it.

One of the smallest fields of juveniles of the season paraded for the Amaranth Purse, only five accepting the issue. James Butler's High Flier was the choice of the Westchester County folk and they backed the son of High Noon to 9 to 5. But the band had no chance to play the "Wearin' of the Green," as he finished a length in back of J. N. Levin's filly Effie, which has beaten some of the good ones. She was well supported at 3 to 1 and made all the pace. High Flier hooked up with her at the top of the stretch, but Fields had no difficulty in drawing out in the last sixteenth. J. E. Madden's Muriatic, which had all the worst of the break, came from last place to grab the short end.

Crescent A. C. Bouts Thursday.

Its second open air boxing tournament of the season will be held Thursday night by the Crescent Athletic Club. The bouts will be held at the Bay Ridge Clubhouse. There will be four bouts in four weight classes and also special bouts. Harold Wilson and Wesley Pettit are among the boxers who will be seen in action.

Rickard Back in New York.

Promoter Tex Rickard returned yesterday from his expedition to Saratoga Springs, where he looked over Jack Dempsey. He had nothing to add to his appraisal of the former champion which he gave at the Dempsey camp when he said that Dempsey's condition was gratifying.

COL. TOMKINSON AT HEAD

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

Great Britain's camp of polo invaders is well established this morning at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club in Rye. Early yesterday afternoon the six remaining members of the expedition which has come from India in search of the International Polo Challenge Cup came ashore from the Minnetonka and last night joined Captain J. P. Dening Colonel D. la P. Beresford at the Westchester club.

The players on board the liner yesterday were Major Eric Atkinson, the field captain of the team; Major Austin H. Williams, Captain Claude E. Pert, Captain Richard George and Lieutenant Humphrey P. Guinness. The party was in charge of Colonel Commandant H. A. Tomlinson, team manager.

Also with the team was H. H. the Maharajah of Rutlam and his suite. Six additional polo ponies also arrived. The Maharajah is here in the capacity of adviser to the team and also to play through our season of tournaments. He is rated at seven goals in his country and, during his twenty years as a player there, has been mentioned at times as being numbered among the greatest men at No. 3 in India.

Test Matches Postponed.

Simultaneous with the arrival of the British came the announcement from the offices of the United States Polo Association that the start of the American test matches was postponed again, owing to the continued wet weather on Long Island. The grounds of the Piping Rock Club have not dried out enough to permit play there today so that the first test match has been put off until tomorrow at 4:30 and to be played either at the Piping Rock Club or at Fleischmann Field, according to ground conditions.

This means that the Americans will not have much of a start on the British this season, for the visitors expect to have a gallop this afternoon, though they will not play, but will be ready to start tomorrow. Colonel Tomkinson said that the men had made the trip in great shape and that they were ready now for fast play. This was borne out by the deck stewards of the liner, who complained that they had been worn out chasing medicine balls and helping with the work of the British players.

The Americans, it was learned today, will probably start their practice without the services of their captain, Devereux Milburn. Milburn's sprained back still is bothering him and he is not likely to play tomorrow. Stephen Sanford, in this event, will go in at No. 1 on that team, moving Watson Webb back to No. 2, Earl Hopping to No. 3 and Malcolm Stevenson to back.

The contrast between this British team and the team of 1924 was apparent on shipboard. Colonel Tomkinson is definitely the head. In a statement prepared for the press, Colonel Tomkinson said, "It will be a team and not just four players."

Team Not Yet Selected.

"We hope," said the team's leader, "to play throughout this month with both American and mixed teams. By that I mean sides made up of, say, two of our subs and two Americans.

"I want to emphasize the idea that the team has not been selected as yet and that it will not be selected until we have seen what form is being shown on this side of the Atlantic. Major Atkinson has been playing remarkably well and it is pretty certain that Captain Roark will play. We feel that he will add a good deal of strength to us.

"All of England is behind us strongly and it is a united effort. The subscription in India was widespread and we cannot express too much gratitude to the Indian rulers who contributed so generously to the fund."

Major Atkinson, Major Williams, Captain George, Captain Dening and Captain Roark are regarded as the most likely candidates for the team. Captain Pert and Lieutenant Guinness are young lower goal players of much promise but the feeling is that they are here more for the experience and in the event of an emergency.

Colonel Tomkinson, the manager, is experienced in the way of American polo, having been a member of the team last to win from this country in 1914 and again a member of the British team when America won back the cup in 1921.

Players All in Shape.

In his statement he said: "The players are all very fit and well and quite ready to begin playing fast games a soon as the ponies are in condition.

"Five of the players, Atkinson, Dening, Williams, Pert and Guinness, have come from India, where they were playing hard all Winter. The Indian grounds being so much faster than the English I consider it a much better place to train a team to compete against America than in England, where grounds get out up and bumpy and consequently slow down the game. It was for this reason that it was decided not to play in England, but to come to America in ample time to get thoroughly accustomed to grounds and conditions and then finally to decide on the composition of the team.

"It is hoped that Captain Roark will shortly be able to join us and his inclusion in the team will undoubtedly strengthen it.

"What the exact composition of the team will be I cannot at present say, as it will depend on the form shown by the various players. It is hoped that we shall have definitely decided on the team early next month.

"It will be a good team, probably better mounted than any English international since the war, and it will be a real team and not just four players. Whether it will be good enough to lift the cup depends on your Big Four, and we quite realize what a tough proposition we are up against.

"Apart from some assistance from Hurlingham, the whole of the finances for this trip have been subscribed in India, and it would have been impossible to have raised sufficient funds but for the Indian princes and Indian rulers, who subscribed most generously and rendered us every possible assistance.

Much Interest in Cowdin.

Colonel Tomkinson gave his idea of how the British side would line up at the start of practice, naming the team as follows: Captain George, Major Williams, Captain Roark and Major Atkinson. Major Atkinson and Roark have both played here before. Major Williams was a member of the Jodhpur team which defeated the American Army in London two seasons ago. Captain George has never been here.

A total of about £20,000 has been subscribed for the expedition.

The work of Chesver Cowdin in the American test match tomorrow will be watched with interest. In a practice game Sunday, Cowdin scored seven goals from the back position against opposition which included Averell Harriman, Stephen Sanford, Watson Webb and Louis Stoddard.

The Britons were met at the pier by Louis E. Stoddard, Chairman of the United States Polo Association; Devereux Milburn and Francis S. O'Reilly, Secretary and Treasurer of the association.

BASSFORD VICTOR IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Beats Moorhead in First Round of Singles in Ulster County Title Play.

Special to The New York Times.

MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., July 11.—The seventh annual tournament for the Ulster County tennis championship opened today with eighty-two players in the well-balanced field. The first round in the men's and women's singles was completed. Dr. Hawk had an easy first-round match with Captain Bailey. Henry Bassford encountered determined opposition from St. Clair Moorhead of Montclair.

Two of the more one-sided matches were won by Garretson of the Cornell tennis team and Wolf of Williams College, the score in each match being 6–1, 6–0. The women's singles has a particularly strong entry of thirty players, headed by Miss Alice Francis, Miss Rosamond Newton, Mrs. Frederick M. Letson and Mrs. Philip B. Hawk.

BRITISH POLO AT RYE.

Practice Matches for Army in India Will Be Played on No. 1 Field.

Contrary to the belief of many persons, the exhibition practice polo games, which will be played by the members of the British team on July 16, 23 and 30, will not be held at the No. 2 polo field at Rye, where the Army in India camp has been established. The games will be played on the No. 1 field, adjacent to the Westchester Biltmore Country Club. This is the same field on which the intercollegiate polo championships have been held for several years past.

The field is an exceptionally fine one and is noted for its recovery after heavy rains. Situated on a hilltop, the rainfall drains off quickly and leaves the terrain in condition for play within a comparatively brief period. The No. 2 polo field, which the British officers are using for the exercise of their ponies, is situated some two or three miles from the club.

INDIAN STARS TO PERFORM.

Men With English Polo Squad Will Give Riding Exhibitions.

A spectacular feat of horsemanship which, so far as known, has never been seen in the East, will be one of the features in the practice matches played at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club by the members of the British Army in India polo team here as challenger for the International Cup. This exhibition will be a tent-pegging contest put on by the native officers and men who accompanied the Englishmen to these shores.

The exhibition consists of riding at a full gallop and hurling twelve-foot lances at tents so that they are pegged down as accuratately as if done with hammer and tent spike. This exhibition has been given by the Indians in many parts of the British Empire but has never been shown in this country.

Chapman in Bike Races Tonight.

George Chapman, who held the motor-paced championship of America for six consecutive years, will get another chance tonight to increase his point total toward the present championship. He will ride in another of the series of championship races at the New York Velodrome. In the same race will be Vincent Madonna, Robert Grassin, Francesco Zucchetti, Charley Jaeger, and Franco Georgetti and others.

France Scores Clean Sweep And Gains Davis Cup Final

EASTBOURNE, England, July 11 (AP).—France today made a clean sweep of her Davis Cup series with South Africa, the French players taking two singles after already having captured the three preceding matches last week. Rene Lacoste defeated Jack Condon, 7–5, 6–3, 6–1, while Jacques Brugnon defeated P. D. B. Spence, 6–2, 6–3, 6–4. France now will meet Denmark in the final of the European zone.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 11.—Nationally famed tennis players, including a brilliant coterie of college and junior stars, opened play in the men's singles of the annual State lawn tennis championship at the Agawam Hunt courts this afternoon. Despite a late start the committee managed to run off forty-eight matches.

With one exception the sixteen seeded players advanced, the solitary upset being the elimination of Lionel Ogden of California by James Quirk of the Texas contingent in the second round, 3–6, 6–4, 6–2. The veteran Fred C. Baggs also met defeat, going down before Melvin Dranga of Washington in the second round after winning the first set. The scores were 5–7, 10–8, 6–0.

Although Ogden was beaten, Cranston Holman and Ben Gorchakoff, Occidental College star, carried the colors of California into the third round, Holman putting out R. D. Weeden, 6–4, 6–3, and Gorchakoff beating Ralph Cummings, 3–6, 6–3. Lewis M. White of Texas, seeded No. 1 in the tourney, conquered A. H. Champlin in his first round match, 7–5, 6–2.

Van Ryn Beats Heuser.

John Van Ryn of Princeton routed youthful Lemoine Heuser, 6–0, 6–1, while Fritz Mercur, formerly of Lehigh; Ralph McElvenney and Alan Herrington and John Doeg of California, and Kenneth Appel won first round matches in straight sets, and W. W. Ingraham, Ernest Kuhn and A. W. Jones triumphed in the second.

During the morning the women's singles title play started, nineteen matches being played in the first and second rounds. Favorites encountered no difficulty in winning. Only three of the seven seeded players competed, Mrs. J. B. Corbiere of Southborough, Mass.; Miss Elizabeth Bright of Boston, and Miss Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass.

Miss Sarah Palfrey, youngest member of the noted Boston family of tennis sisters, who is seeded in the draw, will enter the competition tomorrow morning. Her three sisters, Mianne, Polly and Lee, won their opening day matches.

South African Claims World's Record For 100-Mile Run in 14 Hours, 45 Minutes

BULUWAYO, Southern Rhodesia, July 11 (AP).—Arther Newton, South African long distance runner, claims to have established a new amateur world's record by running 100 miles over a course from Gwelo to Buluwayo in 14 hours 45 minutes. The distance was officially measured and three official timekeepers were employed.

No world's record for running 100 miles is listed, according to The Associated Press, but the best recorded American track mark for the distance is well behind Newton's figure. In covering a total distance of 120 miles at New York on Feb. 21-22, 1882, J. Saunders was timed at the 100-mile mark in 17 hours, 36 minutes, 14 seconds.

Harry Duell, Minneapolis truck driver, ran 90 miles in 13 hours, 15 minutes, last April, a record for this distance which compares favorably with Newton's performance in South Africa.

ACHESON BEATS BARNES

Veteran Conquers Oklahoma Star—Marsh, Williams College Captain, Also Triumphs.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 11.—One of the features of the opening rounds of the New York State tennis tournament at Sedgwick Farms Club today was the victory of A. R. Acheson, veteran Syracusan, over Lauren Barnes, left-handed star from Oklahoma. Barnes got off to a flashy start, but the steadiness of the Syracuse player was too much for him. Barnes played a nice game at the net, but was wild from deep court.

All of the seasoned players made advances. Jerry Lang, titleholder, chalked up an easy victory, 6–2, 6–0, over Fred Weinheimer of Syracuse, and was well on his way to another when the rain, which fell heavily this afternoon, intervened.

The dark horse of the tournament appears to be Dick Murphy of Utica, who sprang a surprise by defeating Marshall Allen of Syracuse, formerly of California. Murphy forced the going all the way.

F. Messmer was eliminated by M. Bernstein of New York, who showed a lightning-like service and powerful overhead game. Bernstein won, 6–1, 6–4. Messmer staged a rally in this set and went out fighting, there being six match points in the game before the steady Bernstein could bring the contest to a close.

The summaries:

TILDEN AND HUNTER WILL RETURN TODAY

Mrs. Mallory and Washburn Also Will Arrive on Majestic From European Invasion.

MISS WILLS ON THE WAY

William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter, after a tour of two months abroad as the official representatives of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, will return home today on the Majestic, bringing with them the English doubles championship.

The tour carried them to Berlin, Brussels, the Hague, St. Cloud and Dublin for team matches and all of them were won except the match with France. Tilden, in addition, finished runner-up to René Lacoste in the French championship after being three times within a stroke of winning the final, and was eliminated by Henri Cochet at Wimbledon after leading him two sets to none and 5–1 in the third chapter. Hunter was a double victor at Wimbledon, sharing the mixed doubles honors with Miss Elizabeth Ryan.

Accompanying the two players on the same boat are Watson Washburn and Mrs. Molla Mallory, both of whom competed at Wimbledon; Franklin I. Mallory, Mrs. Hunter and James S. Cushman of Newport, the "official spokesman" of the U. S. L. T. A. abroad.

Miss Helen Wills, who won the singles crown and also the doubles with Miss Ryan, is now on the high seas on board the Berengaria and is due here on Friday. It is reported that Miss Ryan, who returned to the United States in 1926 after a long residence abroad, will remain in England.

A private luncheon is to be given by the U. S. L. T. A. at the Bankers' Club, 120 Broadway, tomorrow, and it is possible that Tilden, Hunter and Washburn will be among the guests to tell of some of their experiences abroad.

An entirely new kind of racket inspired by champions

AMERICAN skill in tennis has made a new type of racket necessary. Champions said there was no bat fast enough for the game as it is played today. They asked Spalding to attempt a faster racket—one suited to the modern, lightning-fast, all-court game.

Spalding started to work. 500 experimental rackets were turned out. A group of famous stars judged them one by one, criticised them, offered helpful suggestions. Then came the racket that won their unanimous and enthusiastic approval—the bat with which they won many of last year's important tournaments. We named that bat "Top-Flite".

Now it is offered to you. The fastest tennis racket ever made. Lighter head—yet in perfect balance. Smaller head, which permits tighter stringing. Kro-Bat construction to give it strength for many restringings. Open throat, which gives it a new, delightful flexibility. Top-Flite will help you play your fastest tennis. There is one here that will suit you exactly. Come and find it. Price $15.

State Com'n Claims Saratoga Geyser and Hathorn Waters Helpful

Acidity Said to Be Cause of Indigestion and Much Sickness

Acidity is the name for a condition of the stomach when its contents show too much acid, which means that the food is not being properly digested.

In literature recently published by the State Conservation Commission, Saratoga Natural Geyser Water is highly recommended as a pleasant and dependable means of reducing such acidity, thereby getting rid of bad breath, gas, sourness, dizziness, heartburn, nausea, headache, tired feeling, biliousness and other symptoms.

The State literature also recommends Saratoga Natural Hathorn Water as a delightful, wholesome means of internal cleansing without unpleasant or undesirable effects. This sparkling medicinal water is not a violent or sudden purgative. Its action is gentle, normal and thorough. Take at least half hour before breakfast. It is a most surprising and delightful "pick-me-up" whose good effect carries through the whole day. Shenecossett Field Led by Miss Orcutt With 83

MISS ORCUTT LEADS SHENECOSSETT GOLF

MRS. HURD OUT IN 39

Then Falters and Finishes in Tie With Miss Gottlieb at 86—Seven in Play-Off.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., July 11.—Miss Maureen Orcutt, the metropolitan champion, was medalist today in the qualifying round of the women's ninth annual invitation tournament for the Griswold Trophy at the Shenecossett Country Club. She turned in a score of 41, 42—83, against stiff competition from a brilliant field of 220 entrants.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd started brilliantly and at the end of the first nine holes, which she completed in 39, looked like a very dangerous opponent for Miss Orcutt. Mrs. Hurd encountered trouble on the homestretch, however, and piled up 47 strokes, to rob herself of the medal.

Miss Beatrice Gottlieb, New York municipal champion, tied with Mrs. Hurd for second place with a card of 44, 42—86.

Today's play was marked by surprises with regard to reverses in form. A number of entrants from whom great things had been expected played very poorly, while several other contenders turned in cards much better than had been expected. Among the disappointments might be cited Miss Jane Brooks of Englewood and Mrs. J. S. Cassriel of Chicago, both of whom picked up after some very disastrous holes.

In winning today's medal Miss Orcutt did not have to extend herself, nor did she play up to her usual brilliant game, as her card of 83 against a par 72 would indicate.

Miss Orcutt's card:

Out—Par	4	4	4	3	5	3	5	4	4	—36
Miss Orcutt	4	5	5	3	5	4	6	4	5	—41
In—Par	4	3	5	5	4	3	4	4	4	—36—72
Miss Orcutt	5	4	6	5	4	3	5	5	5	—42—83

Mrs. Hurd played beautiful golf until she reached the turn, and then she began slipping, until disaster overtook her at the sixteenth. Trying to get on the green in two, she flew into a trap and had to use three strokes to get out. She also had difficulty at the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth holes, taking six strokes for each.

Unless some one of the first thirty-three withdraws overnight, there will be a play-off in the morning for last place in the championship flight, as there are seven women tied at 92 for six places.

Hidden Rock Breaks Wrist When Golfer Plays Iron Shot

STAMFORD, Conn., July 11.—John O. Brotherhood, a crack golfer of the New Canaan Country Club, broke his left wrist while playing over his home course today. Using an iron, Brotherhood attempted to take a divot as he stroked the ball. Hidden beneath the turf was rock and the impact of the club and the stone fractured a bone in his wrist.

NEWS OF GOLF CLUBS IN METROPOLITAN AREA

With course records steadily being lowered over newly lengthened links, many local golfers are wondering what is going to be the next move of greens committees to stiffen the layouts. Only recently many links have been revamped, with several hundred yards in length added to offset the longer distances obtainable with the livelier balls now in play.

Johnny Farrell pointed out recently that in most cases, however, new records are not so much the result of long shots as exceptional putting. For instance, at his own course, Quaker Ridge, it was believed next to impossible to break par, 70, since the course has been changed. Yet Walter Hagen, a fortnight ago, after taking 37 for the first nine, came back in 32, lowering the record a stroke, largely through the dropping of long putts.

When the Progress Club officially opened its new layout a short while ago it was said that its 70 par was safe. Then along came Bobby Cruickshank, the club pro, and in his first serious effort hung up a record of 67, also with the aid of several one-putt holes.

Last week Eddie Driggs smashed the old record at Cherry Valley with a 66, par 73. It will be recalled that few were better than par in the recent sectional qualifying test there for the national open. Eddie's record can be attributed to his putting, taking only 28 strokes on the greens.

Walter Hagen's sensational 275 for seventy-two holes in last year's Eastern open also largely was the result of extraordinary putting. In his round of 65, it will be recalled that he had eight one-putt holes.

All of which should give local greens committeemen much food for thought.

The Metropolitan Advertising Golf Association will hold its third tournament of the season today at the Oakland Golf Club, Bayside. There will be several prizes for the best gross and low nets in both morning and afternoon rounds.

A big field is expected tomorrow at Briar Hills for the next one-day event of the Westchester Association. Already more than sixty golfers have signified their intention of being on hand for the occasion.

Golf will be pushed out of the limelight at the Westchester Biltmore on Saturdays the 16th, 23d and 30th of this month, as the club has arranged to present in exhibition matches the British international polo team and the "cream of American polo ists."

The Deal Golf Club will play host on the 19th to members of the Ohio Society of New York. The program calls for a boat trip to Highlands, a round of golf, dinner on the porch of the club and cards in the evening.

The Artists and Writers' Golf Association, of which Grantland Rice is President and many of the leading contemporary artists and writers are members, has announced that applications for membership will close Aug. 1.

Shortly thereafter it is expected to stage the first golf tournament of the new organization. Present plans call for two chief events a year, one in the late Summer in the North and the other in Winter over some prominent Florida links.

Perley Boone and Arell Poinsett of the Newspaper Golf Association managed to settle, for the time being at least, their discussions of individual golf supremacy yesterday when they met in their organization's one-day tournament at the Engineers Club. Boone came out victorious, 5 up and 3 to play.

The Oak Ridge Club at Tuckahoe will play host today to the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association's regular one-day tournament.

NEW ENGLAND GOLF TO REID

Paired With Turner, He Wins Pro-Amateur Title at Farmington.

Special to The New York Times.

FARMINGTON, Conn., July 11.—With a low net best ball of 75—68—143—9—134, Teddy Turner, Lowell pro, and Graham Reid, amateur of Farmington, today won the New England pro-amateur golf tournament at the Country Club in Farmington.

Arthur Reid, pro at Farmington, and John Hill, amateur of Wethersfield, had a gross best ball of 70—77—146, and Jack Start, pro, and Walter E. Patterson, amateur of Hartford, scored 70—71—141, with a handicap of 6 for a net of 135. Reid and Hill had a net of 137.

Unsung Hero, Who Totes No Devastating Bludgeon Nor Plans No Strategic Move, but Who Must Get Team Through Storms, Wrecks and Washouts, Is Known as Traveling Secretary.

The Yankees are justly famous. There is a great deal written pro and con regarding the abilities of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig. The praises of Tony Lazzeri are sung loud and often and the name of Miller Huggins, the mite manager of the league leaders, is known to all small boys and fans in general. Even Colonel Jake Ruppert, the man behind the whole combination, has gained his modicum of fame, but there is one young man upon whom the destinies of the club ride through storm and strife, train wrecks and washouts, whose name is seldom mentioned and who struggles on with his labors unsung and unhonored. His name is Mark Roth.

Mark does not tote a mighty bludgeon to the plate in the ninth inning with the score tied to do a "Dick Merriwell," nor does he figure out some strategic play to make opposing managers say "he is a smart pilot." Not Mark. All Mark does is to guide the troopers through the country, feed them, transport them, see that they are housed and that they are satisfied. Babe Ruth may find his job of trying to keep abreast of Lou Gehrig trying. There are times when Miller Huggins probably has as hard a job as any manager in the business, but of Mark Roth it safely can be said he has a perpetually hard task. For Mark Roth is the traveling secretary of the Yankees.

The traveling secretary of a baseball club has manifold duties. He is the man who buys the railroad tickets, the upper and lower berths, which, incidentally, cause him no little trouble. He is the one who is responsible for having enough rooms and the proper kind in the hotels of seven cities around the circuit.

Responsible for Transportation.

He is responsible for the safe transportation of all the players, their baggage and the club baggage, bats, uniforms, &c. If anything goes wrong, if any one is displeased, if trains are late and if a dozen or one other things happen, Mark Roth is the man who takes the blame. And when everything runs in smooth fashion every one forgets to praise him.

Mark is a veteran in service, but by no means a veteran in years. Mark started young. This is his twenty-fifth season with the Yankees. However, he did not become the traveling secretary of the Yankees until the club was purchased by Colonels Ruppert and T. L. Huston in 1915. Previous to that, Mark had been a baseball correspondent for a New York newspaper and he traveled with the first New York American League club in that capacity and kept it up year after year, in lean seasons and fat ones. He saw many managers, Clark Griffith, Kid Elberfeld, Harry Wolverton, Frank Chance, Hal Chase, Bill Donovan, in fact, all of them, down to Miller Huggins, come and go.

Started Back in 1903.

Through it all, Mark trudged his quiet way, running on like a constantly flowing brook. He alone, of all the men who have been connected with the New York American League Club in one way or another since its beginning in 1903, has survived the entire history of the organization. And he has smiled through it all.

The traveling secretary, as has been pointed out, has a multitude of jobs to attend to. His is one of detail to the nth degree. Roth, for instance, begins his weary journey in February each year. At that time he chaperons a division of the Yankees from the home port to the training camp. He arrives on the job before the first detachment of catchers and pitchers has reached camp. His first task is to see that there are enough rooms for all the troopers. He then takes the list of players and camp followers, a matter of sixty or seventy, checks them off and pairs this man with that as room-mates. Here is where his tact meets its first test. There must be no injured feelings. Certain players want certain other players as room-mates and Mark has to see that these wishes are carried out.

Pays All the Checks.

One way or another he finally straightens this out, satisfies every one, and then has to see to it that every one likes the food, gets enough of it and is satisfied with that. He handles all of the financial transactions, pays all the bills and collects all the money from exhibition games, &c.

When it is time to break camp he routes the team, arranges for transportation on railroads, steamships, motor buses, makes advance reservations for hotel rooms, and when not otherwise occupied stands at the ticket gate to represent the club, then checks over the receipts and "settles up the house." He takes care of all the correspondence of the club, excepting that which Miller Huggins himself handles. He is up at 7 o'clock in the morning and to bed whenever he can get his work finished.

In the regular season the same routine is followed, but on a more systematic basis. The club stops at the same hotels in the various cities year in and year out. But the same rooms are not always available. The roster shrinks and increases, and for each change Mark must make allowances He has to watch out for this temperamental player and that one. When there are quick train connections to be made he has to have taxicabs waiting for the dash to the train. He has to see that every one gets on board.

Handles Railroad Tickets.

Once on board the train, he billets the men, distributing the lowers and uppers with infinite tact. He deals with the conductor, so that no player has to bother about his railroad ticket, his berth or anything. While traveling, the players are paid in cash a daily allowance for food, and this money Roth distributes to the men. If he should fail them, many a boy might go hungry, and hungry ball players are not companionable persons.

Taken all in all, Roth, as is the case with all traveling secretaries with baseball clubs, plays a mighty important rôle. If he should slip in some of his duties, there would be a lot of confusion. If, through some error of his, a club missed a train, there would be a postponed game, probably a fine from the league. Lots of trouble. So his responsibilities are great. It's a trying job, but Mark thrives under it. And Roth is always smiling and never grouchy.

And when the baseball season is over, all Mark has to worry about is a few dozen football games at the Stadium to handle before the next season rolls around.

TITLE GOLF TOMORROW.

Massachusetts Players Await Start of State Amateur.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWTON CENTRE, Mass., July 11.—All day long golfers from all parts of the State have been arriving here to test the links of the Charles River Country Club in tuning up for the Massachusetts amateur championship which will get under way Wednesday and continue on through Saturday.

Wednesday will be given over to the qualifying test, which will require two trips around the course. The first thirty-two will then continue for the championship in match play, with eighteen holes on Thursday and Friday and thirty-six holes for the final round on Saturday.

In conjunction with the championship, the Windeler Shield will be competed for on Wednesday and will go to the club whose five members make the best aggregate score in the qualifying rounds.

WILLS AND PAULINO READY FOR BATTLE

Harry Wills and Paulino, the Basque woodchopper, were reported in fine condition for their scheduled fifteen-round bout at Ebbets Field tomorrow night under the direction of promoter Humbert Fugazy. Both have finished their training program and are marking time.

Fugazy said yesterday that the ticket sale was progressing satisfactorily and announced that the gates would be thrown open at 7 o'clock at Ebbets Field to accommodate those who did not get tickets in advance. The show is being presented at popular prices.

Wills is determined to prove that his showing against Jack Sharkey last Fall was not conclusive and that he has been prematurely rated as "through." Paulino, having dropped out of promoter Tex Rickard's heavyweight considerations through his troubles with the Massachusetts Boxing Commission and Jack Sharkey's rise into the limelight, is out to demonstrate his claims to further recognition.

MANDELL ENDS TRAINING.

DETROIT, July 11 (AP).—Sammy Mandell, wearer of the lightweight crown, tonight had put aside his gloves until Friday night when he will climb into the ring at the University of Detroit Stadium to defend his title against Phil McGraw.

"He will do no more boxing for this fight," Eddie Kane, the Rockford puncher's manager, said today. "His condition is almost perfect and all he needs is light work to keep his muscles loose."

Camp followers at McGraw's headquarters remarked that the challenger looks much faster in the ring than when he began his training.

Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons today began putting the ring in place at Dinan Field. Plans are under way to provide additional transportation facilities to the stadium, which is located quite some distance from the downtown district.

DELVICCHIO WINS TITLE.

His 144 Takes Western Pennsylvania Open Golf Championship.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 11 (AP).—Perry Delvicchio, Greensburg, today won the Western Pennsylvania open golf championship, dethroning Fred Baroni of Chartiers Heights, who had held the title for two years. Delvicchio scored 144 for the thirty-six holes.

LEO LOMSKI SCORES KNOCKOUT VICTORY

Leo Lomski of Aberdeen, Wash., scored his third straight victory of his Eastern invasion by knocking out Willie Walker of Harlem in 2 minutes 59 seconds of the third round of the scheduled ten-round main bout last night at Dexter Park Stadium.

Lomski impressed the 4,500 spectators who witnessed the battle by his all-around boxing ability and his willingness to mix.

The Western boxer carried the fight to Walker from the first bell and scored easily with hard rights and lefts to the face and body. The Harlem boxer stood up under the hail of blows and continuously plowed into Lomski. The latter always met the advances without retreating and kept up his heavy bombardment upon the New York fighter.

Lomski proved that he could take punishment as well as deal it. In the second round he grew careless and left himself open to Walker's right hand, and he caught two heavy punches on the jaw without flinching, then came back to score heavily.

Lomski directed his attack to the body in the third round and beat Walker down steadily. Toward the end of the battle Lomski floored Walker for a count of eight with a left to the body.

The weights were Lomski 170¼ pounds and Walker 174.

Fast Action in Semi-Final.

Billy Humphries of Woodhaven outslugged Ralph Nischio, East New York, in the ten-round semi-final. The bout was one of the most furiously contested bouts ever seen at Dexter Park, both boys slugging away at each other for the greater part of the battle.

The Woodhaven battler presented a more stubborn defense, together with a flashing left-hand and fine infighting ability.

Humphries scored at will early in the battle, and closed Nischio's left eye early in the second round. Nischio retaliated by opening a cut over Humphries, left eye in the fourth round.

Humphries piled up a lead as a result of his relentless aggressiveness and ably withstood Nischio's sporadic rallies. The tenth session saw both boys merrily punching away at each other from first bell to last, with Humphries forcing Nischio to retreat.

Immediately after the close of the round Nischio accidentally hit Humphries low, causing the latter to collapse. The East New York boxer was roundly booed when he left the ring. Humphries weighed 125 pounds, Nischio 125¼.

Cohen's Defense Tight.

Jackie Cohen of East New York outpointed Cap Columbo of the Philippines in the first ten-rounder. Columbo carried the fight to Cohen, but had trouble penetrating the latter's defense. The boys battled furiously from the start, with each boxer scoring telling blows to the jaw and body. Cohen weighed 128 pounds and Columbo 144½.

Nat Cohen, 128½ pounds, of the east side stopped Murray Rosen, 122¾, also of the east side, in the third round of a scheduled six-round contest. Cohen hit Rosen steadily with hard rights and lefts, and the referee stopped the bout in the third session, after 2 minutes and 45 seconds of fighting.

BAKER IN ACTION TONIGHT.

Boxes Callahan, Junior Welterweight Champion, in Chicago Park.

CHICAGO, July 11 (AP).—Mushy Callahan may be compelled to defend his junior welterweight title against Sammy Baker of New York tomorrow night at the Cubs' Park, despite the fact that he had no intention of doing so when he signed for the match.

The articles provide that both men shall enter the ring for their ten-round scrap weighing less than 145 pounds, which is five pounds over the junior welterweight limit. Callahan probably will weigh-in slightly under 145 pounds. Baker, however, was within a pound of the limit today and said he can easily get down to 140 pounds.

Thus, even though the champion is over the limit, Baker has a chance to lift the crown by making the title weight himself.

For the second time in a fortnight a champion on a Chicago fight card was on the small end of the betting odds. Baker was a 6 to 5 favorite today, just as Tony Canzoneri was favorite before he met Bud Taylor for the bantam title in the same park last month.

The fight is being staged as an American Legion benefit and will be attended by several prominent personages.

GARRY BEATEN BY MOTTO.

TROY, N. Y., July 11 (AP).—Patsy Motto of Albany won the decision from Andy Garry, Elizabeth, N. J., in a ten-round bout here tonight. Both principals weighed 153 pounds. Al Delgaldo, New York City, 142½ pounds, beat Edge Ryan, Troy, 146, in ten rounds.

DEMPSEY'S HITTING FEATURE OF DRILL

TWO NEWCOMERS STOPPED

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 11.—Socially prominent guests visited Jack Dempsey at his training camp at Tom Luther's resort on Saratoga Lake this afternoon and cheered Dempsey as he went through a ten-round drill which, for him, was fast and in spots spectacular.

Mrs. Raymond T. Baker occupied a front-row seat with a party of friends which included Sidney Smith, brother of Earl E. T. Smith. Before the workout Mrs. Baker greeted Dempsey as the former champion was on his way to his dressing room, and they chatted for a few minutes.

Hitting Power in Evidence.

Those approached for an opinion on the showing of Dempsey expressed varying views, but they were unanimous on one point—that Dempsey is hitting. This is the impressive feature of the workouts Dempsey is holding daily for his battle with Jack Sharkey in the Yankee Stadium on July 21. Hitting is the outstanding feature of his daily drills.

Dempsey devoted six rounds of his workout today to sparring against as many rivals. He opened fast, but slowed down under the changing styles of the men who faced him. He also was caught off his balance frequently and, as usual, was wide open for attack and more than ordinarily wild.

When he hit, however, there was marked evidence of power, and the conclusion would not down that if Dempsey is to beat Sharkey he will have to knock him out, and do it quickly.

Manager Leo P. Flynn is gaiting Dempsey for a distance fight. He admits this, and his drilling of the former champion bears out this plan of campaign. It is not hard, though, to conjure a picture of a floundering, albeit heroic, Dempsey if the fight progresses far. Dempsey's main weakness, and the handicap with which he will enter the ring, is lack of coordination between his mind and his hands and feet.

Two Boxers Bowled Over.

Dempsey bowled over two of his sparring mates, both new additions to the camp. Martin Gallagher, a youngster of 185 pounds from Washington, D. C., was the first to succumb, but he landed many straight lefts and right crosses to Dempsey's face and head before he dropped.

It was with body punching at close quarters that Dempsey finally weakened Gallagher. Just before the bell rang a light left hook grazed his jaw, following a drilling of rights and lefts to the body, and Gallagher went down. He was on his hands and knees when the session ended.

The other victim of Dempsey's hitting was Chief Metoquah, Toledo heavyweight, and he was a slow-moving target. After battering him about the body, Dempsey quickly hooked a left to the jaw and Metoquah sat down hard.

Johnny Dundee said after the workout, he was more impressed with Dempsey than he had been last Saturday. He stressed the fact that Dempsey was hitting solidly and heard Referee Lewis praised the same element in Dempsey's work-out.

Gallagher Lands Frequently.

Against Shade, Dempsey didn't get much chance to practice his hitting, because Shade ducked, bobbed and weaved in a baffling manner every time Dempsey set to release a blow. However, Dempsey got an opening and sharp and true, crashed a right to the head over a left lead.

Then came the two and one-half minute knockout of Metoquah and Italian Jack Herman finished out the round, and remained in the ring for another round with Dempsey. Herman jabbed Dempsey frequently with lefts in this round, while Dempsey spent his time pounding the body.

A round with Larry Gaines, Toronto negro, finished the sparring, and in a manner which reflected little glory on Dempsey. Gaines, backpedaling all the time, stepped nimbly out of range as he drove left after left into the face of the former champion and Dempsey failed to land a solid blow until he was coming out of a clinch, when he nicked Gaines with a left hook which grazed the jaw.

The former champion will spend tomorrow watching other sport exponents work. He will journey early in the morning to Lake George, where he is to start a twenty-four-mile swim Marathon being conducted by the American Legion.

Buell Out of Danger.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 11 (AP).—Charles C. Buell, captain of the 1922 Harvard football team, is recovering from pneumonia here after a critical illness of about ten days. It was said today at his home that he was out of danger. He was brought here from a camp at Bridgewater, N. H., ten days ago.

Sports of the Times

Copyright, 1927, by The New York Times Company.

THE Cincinnati Reds are here for their second visit of the season. The lowly estate of the Herrmann forces recalls the uncertainty of fate and the weakness of the human intellect.

About four months ago the baseball dopesters began figuring out the pennant race in advance. A reasonable amount of "ifs" and "buts" are tossed into such predictions, but even so, the task is not half as easy as that of the weather prophet for an almanac.

The long-distance weather prophet, for instance, can pick any week in August for years in advance and write: "Heat wave hereabouts; watch out for thunderstorms." There's a prediction that can't go far wrong.

And there was the prognostication of Josh Billings for the week of Jan. 5, 1870, in his famous "Farmer's Allminax": Perhaps rain, perhaps not.

But the baseball dopester hasn't that much leeway and some club like the Reds is always in there kicking any reasonable prediction all around the raspberry bush.

On Previous Performances.

There was every reason to expect the Reds to be up in the pennant race this year. Instead of that, they are the doormats of the league. Anybody who could figure that out in advance should have no trouble in breaking into the average insane asylum.

The Reds had five high-class pitchers last year in Pete Donohue, Carl Mays, Dolf Luque, Jakie May and Eppa Rixey. They had the league leading batter in Rube Bressler with a mark of .357 in eighty-six games. If anybody objects to awarding the honor to a player who participates in less than 100 games there is another applicant for the 1926 batting title in Bubbles Hargrave of the same Cincinnati club. The sturdy Bubbles belted the ball for an average of .353 in 105 games, and Christensen, another Redleg, was next in line, three points below the Cincinnati catcher.

Thus "on paper" the Reds had a great pitching staff and a healthy batful of hitters. Roush was traded for George Kelly, but that looked like a stand-off.

But the Reds bogged down at their strongest points. The five-star pitching staff clattered apart with a terrific detonation. Jack Hendricks could say of his pitching staff what a certain corpulent artist said of an article of furniture that collapsed under his weight: "The bottom rushed out of it."

Worse and More of It.

When the pitchers failed to pitch the Reds fell victim to another quaint ailment. The hitters failed to hit. After a bit the fielders failed to field.

"It's always darkest just before the dawn," said Jack Hendricks hopefully. Just when he was looking for a glint of sunrise in the east or a touch of silver in the lining of the clouds Hughey Critz pulled up with a charley horse, Horace Ford was hurt in several different ways, George Kelly went to a hospital to have his vermiform appendix removed, and Carl Mays was carved up for some intestinal trouble which will keep him out of the game for the remainder of the season.

"There is no Santa Claus," is the outraged wail of the Red rooter. It does seem that Cincinnati has a kick coming, but Manager Hendricks is so stunned by the whole performance that he can't eat more than three meals a day and most of his athletes are in the same dire straits.

Absolutely Neutral.

With regard to the outcome of the National League pennant debate the Reds are now absolutely neutral. They aren't going anywhere and they are thus able to view the parade with unprejudiced eyes. When the Cards were playing the Giants in a double-header at the Polo Grounds on Sunday most of the Reds were in the press box and voted for the Pirates as probable pennant winners.

This, of course, is not a startling ballot, but it indicates that the Pirates have plenty of supporters in their own line of business; men who should know something about the trade.

Pete Donohue agrees with his leader. Hughey Critz tossed another straight Democratic ballot into the box. Jakie May went along with the party. "Red" Lucas wasn't voting; he was chewing.

Looking Ahead.

If Hendricks really wants to know who will beat the Pirates he might ask Joe McCarthy of the Cubs. A Chicago representative has arrived here with the information that the manager of the Cubs is now concentrating on a study of the weaknesses of the Yankees.

"That won't take him long," said Colonel Jacob Ruppert when he heard the report.

All of which may be true, but it indicates the line of thought which Manager McCarthy is pursuing. He is getting ready for the world's series at the Stadium.

He might take a tip from Nick Altrock. "The way to pitch to Ruth and Gehrig," said Nick, "is to throw the ball to second base."

There are times when that wouldn't be a half bad idea.

A Point of Information.

It was only a few days ago that a tourist got into conversation with McCarthy on the subject of baseball.

"Do you think you can beat the Cardinals for second position?" was the opening question.

"Listen!" said McCarthy. "Gehrig, curve balls, low and inside. Ruth, nothing but floaters and maybe a base on balls. Meusel, curve, outside. Lazzeri, mix 'em up but the big one must be fast, letters high, and inside. Stop me if I'm wrong."

"Well, can you beat the Pirates out for first place?"

"We'll hit Shocker, but I don't think they'll work him much against us. Hoyt will be tough for us," answered McCarthy. "That guy Moore I don't know. He's got a sinker. Pennock isn't tip-top this year. We'll beat 'em sure. Isn't that what you asked?"

"How's your uncle?" queried the tourist.

"We can beat them on the bases and we can beat them in the field," says McCarthy. "We're faster afoot and we have better pitching. We'll win sure."

Maybe he has no uncle.

URBAN IS DROPPED IN SHARKEY DRILL

One of Jack Sharkey's sparring mates felt the force of the Boston sailor's left hook and short right and went to the canvas groggy during the training drill on the rink at the Garden roof yesterday afternoon. The first victim of Sharkey's powerful punch was Johnny Urban of Pittsburgh. He was knocked down toward the end of the second round, when Jack sent his heavily gloved left to the body nad followed it with a sharp right to the chin.

It was the first time since he started training here last Friday that Sharkey has cut loose to the extent of bowling over a sparring mate.

A crowd that was even larger than the afternoon gathering on Sunday watched the Boston contender go through his exercises in preparation for his critical test against Jack Dempsey at the Yankee Stadium on July 21. Every seat was taken and the standees crowded as close as they could. In all it was estimated the spectators numbered about 2,000.

New York is taking kindly to the heavyweight championship contender, who is giving it the first opportunity in many years to see an important principal train within the city limits. Notable, too, is the type of persons who compose the crowd. Many of them are obviously not regular fight followers, who may be seen at every training camp; the majority seem to be watching a boxer in training for the first time.

Advance Sale Record Set.

While the number of spectators on the roof was the largest ever to see a non-champion go through his paces, another record also was set yesterday when the ticket sale passed the $650,000 mark. This is the biggest figure in Promoter Tex Rickard's experience so early before the date of the bout.

The knockdown of Urban was not the only exciting moment during the seven rounds of boxing which constituted Sharkey's afternoon after he had done six minutes' work on the light bag. Sharkey began speeding up a bit at the outset of his session with Urban. However, he was still far from really letting go. The restraint under which Manager Buckley and Trainer Kelly are keeping the Bostonian was evidenced by Buckley's sharp command to Sharkey not to hit Urban again, as the Pittsburgher started to get up.

Leo Gates was Sharkey's receiver in the second sparring session of two rounds. Sharkey practiced his left hook and right uppercut on the Mohawk Indian, who was puffing and blowing at the end. Similar tactics marked two more rounds with Marco Polo, who gives Sharkey the best workout. Against Polo Sharkey put in his right uppercut often and accurately. A round of clowning with Rocky Stone concluded the afternoon, and Kelly's suggestion that Sharkey work a bit more brought an impatient and emphatic negative from the Lithuanian.

Through all of Jack's four workouts in New York it has been evident that he has not been exerting himself very hard. With all his youth and enthusiasm Sharkey maintains a level head and sticks to the training plan he and his handlers have mapped out. Sunday's workout was a step more energetic than Saturday's and yesterday's in turn a little faster than Sunday's.

More Boxing Aides Expected.

By the week-end it is likely that Sharkey will be battering his sparring aides around pretty freely. In fact, preparations are already being made for replacements, which indicates that the program calls for cumulative activity.

Sharkey still shows that he is practicing his left hook and right uppercut. He has been shortening the blows from day to day, consistently keeping his elbows close to his body. A youngster learning to play the piano with a book under each arm to teach him to keep his elbows in could not be more conscientious in this respect than Sharkey is. He does it while punching the light bag, he does it during his sparring and he does it while shadow boxing. In this manner the blows get body force behind them.

Also evident during the four workouts has been a tendency on Sharkey's part to telegraph his left to his rival. After a second view of him the observer can pretty well tell just about when the left is about ready to go. Whether this is due to the fact that he is practicing something will not be known until Sharkey steps into the ring. On the same side of the ledger in balancing how Sharkey's form figures must be noted another tendency to get out of position under attack.

However, the gymnasium workouts are not a criterion, especially when they are rather mild as Sharkey's have been so far. When he lets go later in the week a more mature judgment may be passed. Sharkey remains in the pink of condition, full of confidence and ready to go at any minute.

Sharkey's Campaign Discussed.

Veteran observers are trying to figure what Sharkey's campaign against Dempsey will be on the strength of what he has shown so far. Their conclusion seems to be that he will do much the same as he did with Maloney. He will put in one or two hard smashes early if he can and then bore and poke away until he sees his opening or Dempsey tires.

None believe that Sharkey will attempt to slug it out with Dempsey from the start. They say Sharkey has too much respect for Dempsey's hitting to attempt that. The fact that Sharkey spends so much time during his sparring taking his partners' blows as he practices riding with the punches would seem to bear out the supposition that Sharkey plans to box Dempsey, at least in the early rounds.

Jim Corbett was among the spectators but would not give any opinion of Sharkey except in comparison favorably upon his condition.

Sharkey will hold another long session on the Garden roof today, starting at 1:30 and women will be admitted free.

INJURY TO HERMAN CAUSES BOUT SHIFT

Queensboro Program to Go On Tonight With Zivic in Feature—Other Contests.

An accident to the shoulder of Babe Herman, signed as one of the principals in the main bout at the Queensboro A. C. tonight, has changed the complexion of the card. Herman threw out his shoulder in the gymnasium and announced late yesterday evening that he could not go through with his scheduled ten-round bout with Joe Glick.

As a result of the accident, the scheduled semi-final ten-rounder between Jack Zivic and Hilario Martinez has been moved to the final position. Glick will box in the semi-final against the best obtainable opponent. This probably will be Newport Johnny Brown. The principals in the first ten-rounder remain the same, Monte Munn vs. Dan Bright.

Norway's flyweight contender, Pete Sanstol, will meet Jack Cofone in a four-round preliminary and Sid Angstreich and Mickey Davis are paired in another.

Cut-rate prices will prevail for tonight's program.

Two soldier programs also are listed tonight. At the Twenty-second Regiment Engineers Armory, the principal bout will be between the veteran Willie Hermans and Nick Palmer, a youthful welterweight. They are slated for ten rounds. Jimmy Doyle vs. Johnny Huber and Bobby Anderson vs. Nick Esposito are paired in eight-rounder. Besides there are two sixes.

The main bout at the final show of the season at the Ninth Regiment Armory will be between Mike Carrier and Paul Jancek, welterweights. Kid Rash and Buster Moore also are slated to meet.

Eleven bouts are listed for the regular weekly series of amateur bouts at the Golden City Arena tonight. The bouts will be in three classes, with two specials added.

Canarsie Amateur Bouts Tonight.

Another of the series of amateur boxing tournaments, being conducted under the auspices of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U., will be held tonight at the Golden City Arena, Canarsie. The feature bout will be between George Hoffman of the Holy Name Club, national light-heavyweight champion, and Ed Malcolm of the Salem Crescent A. C.

Kearns Is Due Here July 20, May 'Interfere With Fight'

PARIS, July 11 (AP).—Jack Kearns, manager of Mickey Walker, middleweight boxing champion, will arrive in New York July 20, the day before Jack Dempsey's contest with Jack Sharkey, and will attempt to collect money he alleges Dempsey owes him under an old contract.

"I am sailing on the Homeric from Cherbourg Wednesday," Kearns said today. "I don't say I am going to prevent the Dempsey-Sharkey fight, but I want to collect the money due me, and if such collection interferes with the fight, then I am sorry."

WALKER TRIUMPHS IN TWO BIKE RACES

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., July 11.—Harold Smith of Australia suffered his first defeat in an Australian pursuit race this season when he bowed to Cecil Walker, all-around champion, in a race at the Velodrome here tonight. Reggie McNamara was third, Alfredo Dinale fourth, Tony Beckman fifth and Otto Petri sixth. The time for the two miles and one lap was 4:29.

The riders sprinted from the start. Dinale, Beckman and Petri were early victims. At two miles Smith, pressed hard by Walker, circled McNamara and was himself passed by Walker on the next half lap.

Norman Hill, riding his first race since breaking his collarbone less than a month ago in a motor-paced bike race, won the two-mile handicap, defeating Tom Bello, Roy Johnson, Lloyd Thomas, Chris Dotterwich, Paul Croley and Leroy Garrison. Hill rode from 110 yards. The scratch men never caught the limit men.

Mario Rossi of Plainfield won the half-mile amateur handicap. Cecil Walker proved his endurance by winning the five-mile open, defeating Bill Keller, Fred Spencer, Willie Grimm, Dave Lands, Willie Hanley and Otto Petri. The time was 9:50 3-5.

In a spectacular motor-paced race, George Chapman won the forty-mile event, defeating Charlie Jaeger, Robert Grassin, Franco Georgetti, Vincent Madonna and Francesco Zucchetti. The time was 57:20 4-5. The victory, scored in the second of the thirty races to decide the national motor pace championship, put Chapman in a tie for second place.

Chapman gained the lead in the first few laps. From then on he was never headed. First Georgetti, then Grassin and then Jaeger made desperate attempts to wrest away the lead, but all failed. Grassin was dropped off twice, but came back each time and with two miles to go went past Georgetti to clinch third place.

Notes of Yachts and Yachtsmen.

It is understood that the R Class sloops Yankee, owned by James W. Alker; Puffin, the property of Junius Morgan, and Gamecock, piloted by Walter Bowes, will invade Marblehead early in August on the second quest of the Long Island Sound helmsmen for the Ladies' Plate and the Manhasset Cup.

The invasion by the Long Island Sound yachtsmen of the famous home port of the Eastern Yacht Club will not be so extensive as that of last year, when Doreas, Grayling, Ardelle, Quiver, Astrild, Bob-kat and Alarm sailed to the eastward in search of the prizes but did not get anywhere to speak of.

Yankee was originally a Marblehead boat and will be returning to her home waters in the rôle of challenger for the Manhasset Cup, which she captured at Indian Harbor in September, 1926, sailed by her former owner, C. A. Welch 2d of Boston. Yankee is still a fine boat in a strong breeze and may surprise the Eastern shellbacks if the conditions suit her.

Junius Morgan's Puffin, on the other hand, seems to go exceptionally well in light weather and on smooth seas, and won another race in the R Class Saturday at the open regatta of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club. Puffin embodies some of Captain Morgan's own ideas as to design and has raced well so far this season.

All the marine thoroughfares will lead to Larchmont on Narragansett Bay this week when the club's annual race week begins. With many new boats added, the fleet, as usual, should be a record one this year. On the final day last year 151 yachts crossed the line, the biggest squadron the Larchmont Race Committee ever recorded. Chairman Carrich and his corps of assistants will have some busy times clocking the times of the finishes during the coming race week, especially on the first and last days. They are already rehearsing the act.

On the race of the International Star Class at Larchmont on Saturday will hang the determination of the Western Long Island Sound challenger for the championships to be sailed on Narragansett Bay late in August.

Adrian Iselin 2d with Ace, and Jack Robinson with Little Bear, both former international champions, are tied for the lead at present in the Star Class eliminations, having 51 points each, with Commodore George Corry, dean of the class, and Little Dipper, close up with 50 points scored.

Ed Willis with his good sloop Altair seems to be the dark horse in the Star Class situation. Altair is only a few points behind the others. Willis is a crack skipper and was crewman for Iselin in the 1925 series when Ace captured the international title.

The New Orleans Star Class controversy has already been settled and Emil Blouin will again be the challenging skipper for the New Orleans Yacht Club.

THE IRISH ASSASSINATION.

The young Irish dramatist, SEAN O'CASEY, is without honor in his own country. His plays have been booed and tabooed in Dublin. The reason alleged was that in his sternly realistic characterization of life in Ireland since the Easter Rebellion of 1916 he has had too much shooting of defenseless people, and has implied a too great facility of the Irish in political murder. Doubtless Dublin will not now admit that the assassination of Vice President O'HIGGINS on Sunday vindicates the veracity of the playwright, but at least there will be in the capital of the Irish Free State, and throughout all Southern Ireland, a feeling not only of shock but of self-reproach. That Irish self-government has not yet been able to put an end to the old tradition of the Invincibles, and that political differences between Irishmen lead to the taking of life in a burst of ferocity, just as used to be the case when the differences were between Irishmen and Englishmen, must everywhere be regarded as lamentable.

That the brutal killing of Mr. O'HIGGINS sprang from partisan hatreds there can be little doubt. The assassins did not bear themselves like men cherishing a private grudge. It is taken for granted by all Irishmen, and is explicitly asserted by the Government of the Irish Free State, that the atrocious murder was intended as an act of intimidation. Extreme Republicans in Ireland hasten to disavow it, and to protest that while they have been and remain at deadly enmity with the Government, they have not countenanced or desired violence. But it is always easy for the wild fringe of an Irish party to translate the whirling words of their leaders into bloody deeds. It is not in Ireland, as it used to be said of Russia under the Czars, a case of tyranny tempered by assassination. The old English tyranny, if it was one, has been entirely withdrawn from Ireland. The Irish people are left to make their own Government and conduct it as they choose. They now have only themselves to blame if, under rulers chosen by themselves, they keep up that reputation for using murder as a political weapon which they acquired before the days of Home Rule, when it was thought natural, if unfortunate, for Irish daggers to do to death in Phoenix Park two Englishmen like Lord FREDERICK CAVENDISH and Mr. BURKE.

It will be said that political crimes are not unknown in other countries. Free America has seen three Presidents of the United States shot to death. But there is a difference between individual acts of men who had very nearly if not quite lost their reason and the planned assassination of a man like Vice President O'HIGGINS by a band of desperate conspirators who somehow believed that they and their friends would get a party advantage out of it.

It is easy to understand the sense not only of outrage but of fear that is reported to have settled upon Ireland as a result of this monstrous crime. What member of the Government will next be singled out for murderous attack? Is the series of Irish political assassinations never to end? Of course, there is a plausible historic explanation of this ugly phase of Irish public character. It is something that was bred in the bone during hundreds of years of oppression. To shoot an absentee Irish landlord was long regarded as little more of a sin or crime than to shoot a hare. But it is certain that the Irish Government and the Irish people have got to take themselves sternly in hand to correct this ancient habit, and to show that the authorities cannot be terrorized by criminals into abandoning their official duties.

While no connection has been established, or probably can be established, between the Republican agitators in Ireland and the murder of last Sunday, they cannot escape suspicion or a certain responsibility. Mr. DE VALERA has recently sent word to his friends in this country that he will need more money to conduct his next campaign against the Government of the Irish Free State. He ought at once to be plainly informed that not a penny will go forward to him from the United States until he and his associates have made every effort to help run down and punish the criminals, and until he has made it clear to all his followers that he has nothing but abhorrence for the policy of assassination, and has neither part nor lot in it.

CONTAMINATED WATERS.

The report on the relative danger to the public health of the water at various bathing beaches in or near the city, which has been drawn up by direction of Health Commissioner HARRIS, confirms what had been previously suspected. All the waters in the immediate vicinity of Manhattan are unsafe. Specifically these include the Hudson, East and Harlem Rivers, the greater portion of New York Harbor and the extreme western end of Long Island Sound. Jamaica Bay is also included, although reports for that region indicate that at times it is less dangerous than others. Obviously there, as with the other places mentioned, the pollution decreases near ocean or Sound currents. Despite the large volume of contaminated water that passes out of New York Harbor, the presence of cleansing ocean streams renders the beaches on the lower portion of Staten Island comparatively safe. The Rockaways and points east show a clean bill of health.

The tests had reference not to garbage and refuse in the water, but to the presence of harmful bacilli. They thus throw light on the problems of sewage disposal rather than of garbage removal. They are an indication of the extent to which present methods of drainage infect the water. It does not follow that because the dangerous bacilli are not found outside the harbor the presence of garbage and other refuse on the beaches is any the less unpleasant. Such menace to the public health as exists from garbage along the beaches comes rather from the piles of it that occasionally strew the sands and rot under the influence of the sun and air than from those portions actually floating in the waters.

The report is valuable to the public in that it shows what waters to avoid. But the city should not use it as an excuse for postponing work on scientific methods of sewage and garbage disposal. Except in the waters immediately adjacent to the city, swimming is not actually dangerous to health. But the conditions are not such as to make swimming altogether a pleasure. Until the three types of water pollution are effectively checked—sewage, garbage and industrial refuse—the beaches will not render their full measure of social service to the community.

Commissioner HARRIS has shown his anxiety to do what he can to improve the condition of the beaches. His investigation of the bacillus content of the waters is an effort to determine facts. If he continues his good work and after checking up on the various causes of pollution devises and pushes through practical plans for lessening the evil, he will earn for himself the gratitude of New Yorkers.

BROADWAY.

When an English visitor, one JOHN LAMBERT, visited New York in 1807, he spoke of Broadway and the Bowery Road as the "two finest avenues" in New York. He added that the city is "the finest and most agreeable for situation" and that when the intended improvements are completed will be "a very elegant and commodious town and worthy of becoming the capital of the United States." In that city which had neither the "narrow and confined irregularity of Boston" nor "the monotonous regularity of Philadelphia," Broadway was then but two miles in length, though the pavement did not extend beyond a mile and a quarter, the rest of the "road" consisting of "straggling houses." The sister avenue has since then had "Ichabod" written over it. Its glory long ago departed, but Broadway, in whose short reach of respectability the genteel lounged in that day from 11 to 3 o'clock, has extended its length all the way to where it must needs cross the water to tie Manhattan Island into the mainland of America.

In all the three centuries since Broadway began to creep at the Battery till it became the great world-known illuminated highway it has not had such a glorification among streets as it has just received in the report of the President of the society which has taken its name—the Broadway Association. It is treated as if it were a sort of local tutelary divinity, whose very name in a business address has "a national asset." It has "centred around it" the "tallest buildings, the greatest banks, the largest hotels, the finest theatres, the most diversified shops and the most beautiful parks" of all the streets in the world. But to maintain this claim of supremacy the President of the association has included an area not only contiguous to this street but also all that appertaining thereto—which is, in assessed valuation, about a third of the island.

In this apotheosis of the street he has, by a figure of speech called metonymy, substituted the street for the island and even the city itself when he makes comparison with other cities of the present or, "turning back the pages of history," notes the "golden periods" in the world's progress. He even forgets the fate of Babylon and other cities in the future that he sees aglow with greater possibilities for this city which, like the celestial city of the Apocalypse, has one "street in the midst of it." This pioneer street has wrought a marvelous change in New York even in the half-century since GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA observed that it had erased the signs from the living rock eulogistic of Drake's Plantation Bitters and Old Jacob Townsend's Sarsaparilla and built lordly mansions of stone with marble façades in their stead. But this "main street of all the main streets in the world" still lacks in most of its length the beauty for which its winding breadth gives ampler possibilities than any other. The Broadway Association has a great task ahead of it to keep this street worthy of its past and of the city from which those away from it measure their absence by distance in time or space "from Broadway."

ALABAMA LAW ENFORCEMENT.

"There have been scores, if not "hundreds, of whippings in Ala-"bama within the last five years," says The Montgomery Advertiser, "and we doubt if anybody has even been indicted." Why should anybody? Many of the floggings are attributed to the salutary moral forces of the Ku Klux Klan, the ruler of Alabama. Besides, the law doesn't bother about trifles; and the full rigor of justice is given to enforcing that cardinal statute, the State prohibitory law. Under the administration of Governor BIBB GRAVES, darling of the Klan, the sole essential purpose of State Government in Alabama has been pursued vigorously, though the Attorney General has done glorious work against slot machines. These devices of Satan have been pretty well shattered, and the State Law Enforcement Department has "succeeded in making Alabama so dry "that not a ten-year-old girl in the "State can buy a drop of liquor."

Such was the regrettable language of our verjuiced Montgomery contemporary, inviting the Governor and his enforcers to bring the floggers to justice. The first gracious incident was the reproof given to a boy of 19, an orphan who had made his way "almost from babyhood." He was standing in front of a church. Eighteen cars, "filled with grotesque figures," came along. He was thrown into a car, kicked in the face, taken out at a lonely spot, beaten soundly and miscellaneously by the morals-enforcers and left half conscious. In spite of the hideous fact that he admitted having "taken a drink" and had a bit of whisky in his possession, will it be believed that the people of his town and county boil with wrath against his admonishers? State enforcement officers are trying to hunt them down. A special Grand Jury has been called.

The second gracious incident was the taking of a woman out of her own home by a gang of masked men, said to have worn the sacred robes of the truest of "Americans." She was tied to a barrel and drubbed till the strong right hands of the admonishers grew weary. This case of discipline, coming so soon after the other, made a lot more of Alabamians hot. After a period of meditation Governor BIBB GRAVES declares that "flogging in Alabama must cease." New laws are proposed, as usual. Isn't the root of the trouble to be found in the grotesque magnification of the prohibition law and the pursuit of violators of it as the chief, practically the only, criminals? Commenting on the stress laid upon the violation of the Prohibition law in the Sunday-before-the-Fourth sermons of Birmingham preachers, The News says:

> Graver crimes now plentiful in the country were apparently unnoted. Men and boys done to death by prohibition enforcement officers who had "fired first"—the blood of these victims failed, it is reported, to move any one of these distinguished clergymen to protest. Lynchings and burnings at the stake that have shamed the country received from these monitors on "preservation of order" and "obedience to law" not even the faintest allusion. Flogging of men, boys and even women by hooded and robed brigands, stalking the highways by day and by night—crimes that brand communities that tolerate them barbaric—upon this subject what word of protest was spoken on Fourth of July Eve in the year 1927 of "the Christian Era" from any one of these Birmingham pulpits?

This monomania, this everlasting harping on one law and one duty, is common. Why bother about floggers and lynchers and such small deer? No matter what you do if your heart is true to Volsteadism.

ANSCHLUSS.

By the Paris press the old question of a political union between Germany and Austria has been taken up again. It might be dismissed as a hot-weather topic if it were not for the definiteness and assurance of French predictions. The Temps sees preparations already under way in both countries. M. SAUERWEIN of the Matin thinks that such efforts to prevent the union as the Entente might make will be vain; "the game is already lost." Opinions differ as to the method which the Anschluss parties in both countries will pursue. The Temps seems to anticipate an out-and-out incorporation in open defiance of the Treaty of St. Germain, which specifically prohibits such a step without the consent of the League of Nations. M. SAUERWEIN expects a more informal, though no less effective, union. Austrian legislation and administration is to be placed on an identic basis with Germany's, and it will then require only a single policy to operate what will be virtually a single machine.

When one examines in detail the case as presented by the Matin writer it is difficult to see why the event should be regarded as imminent. In Austria the peasants and "aristocrats" are opposed to the union and Chancellor SEIPEL understands the danger inherent in such a move. But as it happens the peasant-conservative coalition under SEIPEL'S leadership is now in control in Vienna, having received a new lease of power in the recent elections. MUSSOLINI is certain to be displeased; he has uttered threats on the subject before this. War would be let loose in Europe by a revival of the Mitteleuropa scheme. Thus we are asked to take it as probable that Germany and Austria will light-heartedly take on the risk of war in the absence of pressing necessity. Both nations are doing well, though Germany better than Austria for the time being. It is implied that after ten years of painful climbing out of the abyss Berlin and Vienna will take chances on another war and another catastrophe.

A plausible explanation of the sudden state of mind in the French press would be the desire to make Czechoslovakia see reason in her economic relations with Austria. Why, suggests M. SAUERWEIN, should not the League of Nations immediately proceed to cut the ground from under Anschluss sentiment in Austria by making timely concessions? In that country there are 200,000 unemployed. They expect by incorporation into the German Reich to share German prosperity. Show Austria another way out of unemployment. The way is not specified, but obviously means a reversal of the hostile tariff policy which Czechoslovakia is pursuing. As between making commercial peace with Austria and facing the "spectre" of a German-Austrian union, the succession States, and especially Prague, ought to see where prudence leads. Fortunately, says M. SAUERWEIN, there is a Minister at Prague, BENES, "who is a statesman of the first rank." The hint is plain.

A NEW MOVE ON THE COLORADO.

Utah has sent an appeal to President COOLIDGE and Congress asking that no action be taken looking to the development of the Colorado River until the seven States concerned have settled their differences. In view of the bitter feeling between them, that might be taken as a somewhat sardonic request if it were not for the fact that there is even now a movement on foot to resolve the long-standing interstate controversies over water rights by another round-table conference. It appears likely that the Governors of the seven States, or their representatives, will get together some time this Fall in an effort to agree on a program in advance of the next session of Congress.

The Colorado River Compact, designed to bring peace to that troubled watershed, never went into effect, because Arizona refused to ratify it. Hardly had the other six States decided to go ahead on their own hook—California on some rather stiff conditions—when Utah decided to back out. So today the States are left without any common understanding whatever. Utah's official Colorado River Fact-Finding Commission makes the novel suggestion that the upper basin States—Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico—shall, if called upon, lend their good offices to their sister States of the lower basin to bring about an agreement between them.

Boulder Dam is at a point where the Colorado River forms the boundary between Arizona and Nevada. The power developed there, under present economic conditions, would go mainly to California, which also wants a large share of the water for irrigation and water supply. Arizona has always insisted that there should be no development on the river until an understanding had been reached with California for a division of the water and for some sort of compensation to Arizona for the power generated. At the last session of Congress Utah's representatives denounced the project as an attempt by California to gain special privileges at the expense of the other States. It is now Utah's contention that the upper basin States should remain neutral until the lower basin States reach an "amicable and definite settlement," and that then all seven should proceed to ratify the original Colorado River Compact unconditionally. This would pave the way for harnessing the river, at Boulder Dam or some other site.

It has been suggested that the States should lay their rival contentions before the Supreme Court for adjudication. But that would involve a long-drawn-out litigation. Some judicial determination of the complicated legal points involved may ultimately be required, but the common-sense approach to the problem is through an interstate agreement. Of course, such an agreement will not of itself bring about the harnessing of the river. The Boulder Dam project involves political and economic issues of major significance which will have to be fought out in Congress. But until the underlying controversy over water rights is settled, development of any kind is thwarted.

RUINS IN LABRADOR.

It is not surprising that members of the Morrissey expedition who examined the stone ruins on the shores of Sculpin Island off Labrador were of the opinion that these were not Norse but Eskimo remains. The search for "authentic" relics of the Norsemen in America has been in progress for many years and has resulted in many strange claims being brought forward. "Runic" inscriptions have turned up at the most unexpected—and unnatural—places, and ruins obviously either of the early English settlers or their Indian predecessors have been hailed as of Norse origin. At one time, when the theory of the great "Nordic" race was debated, the pre-Columbian discovery of our northern shores was brought forward as an evidence of the superiority of the fair-haired, blue-eyed boys of the North over the darklings from the Mediterranean. Several spots have been chosen as the landing place of the early viking chieftains.

That these early voyagers reached the American coast and probably visited it on numerous occasions is now generally accepted by scholars. The only serious dispute is as to the location and duration of their settlements. Certainly the description of the Labrador coast, and particularly of Sculpin Island, would indicate that, except for a temporary visit in connection with fishing, the early Norsemen probably moved on elsewhere. Migrants have a tendency to seek a climate and countryside similar to that which they have known at home. It is not altogether chance that the Spaniards, for example, accustomed to the dry lands and sunny climate of Spain, should have pushed into the semi-arid regions of North and South America, or that the English colonists settled in a climate which, though having greater extremes, is not unlike their own. What more natural than that the Norse adventurers, after stopping at some of the treeless barren islands off Labrador, should have pushed south until they came to timbered lands?

The Eskimos, likewise, have shown a tendency to prefer a special type of climate and country. The mere fact that tribes living in the vicinity of Sculpin Island today have no knowledge of the builders of the houses there does not mean that they may not be of Eskimo origin. The Indians of the Southwest have no definite knowledge about the ruins of the cliff dwellings, yet there is every reason to believe that their ancestors once lived in them. Except where written records are kept, it is natural to find that accurate information about ruins is not in the possession of persons living near them. Tradition and legend sometimes help to throw a light on their origin, but what has been termed the "coefficient of mendacity" is likely to be high in all such tales.

Further search of the American coast for evidences of Norse settlement should by all means be encouraged. There are few more fascinating studies than the exploits of these early Lindberghs and Byrds who sailed over unknown waters and battled with fog and rain, at the constant peril of their lives. They had no compasses or radios, and no welcome receptions at their destination. No newspapers chronicled their adventures. Only a few rude poets sang their sagas. Fragments of these songs have survived the ages, but a world anxious to obtain exact facts wishes to know more about them than has yet been told.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Airplanes Too Noisy.

Country dwellers living near any of the aerial routes or aviation fields will readily understand how all the men in Commander BYRD'S plane were deafened by the constant roar of the motors. Even when flying high their hum is sometimes loud enough to disturb persons on the ground.

The spread of commercial aviation and the increase in the number of airplanes should spur the scientists and engineers to study methods of silencing airplanes. For years automobiles and motorboats were nuisances because of their failure to use mufflers. Airplanes are rapidly becoming as bothersome. When they fly low they make so much noise that it is sometimes difficult for people below to carry on a conversation.

No doubt, it will be impossible ever to make airplanes completely silent. But much can be done to reduce their present excessive din. Some method may be found to divert the heat from the exhaust so as to warm the wings and other parts of the machine against sleet and ice and at the same time reduce the noise of the plane after the manner of a muffler. The method will require long study. Sooner or later a system will have to be adopted. Better to prepare for it early by experiments to determine the best way of achieving the desired result.

Making the Warning Fit the Crime.

Boston has decided on drastic action in order to decrease traffic accidents. Casting aside squeamish respect for the niceties of speech, the city has started a campaign to warn careless drivers in terms calculated to catch their attention. The Boston Automobile Club is busy putting up some 5,000 signs which read, "Kids near! Slow down!" The committee which picked this slogan defended their choice by stating that they felt this concise warning would be more effective than others "couched in terms less picturesque."

If the new type of sign is successful, shorter and more emphatic words may be used in warnings in other fields. Boston banks may display signs reading, "Dicks on the job. Watch your step." Subways may improve on New York's "You can't win," by giving notice to prospective robbers of station officials that "You can't get away with it." And if respect for the law is thereby increased, grammar is well lost.

There is at least one thing to be thankful for in Boston's sudden adoption of vulgar terms. She stopped short of that sentimental and saccharine barbarism—"kiddie."

President Eliot as Seen by a Contemporary.

The veteran educational editor, Dr. A. E. WINSHIP of Boston, in rehearsing to the teachers, at their national meeting in Seattle last week, the achievements of the late President ELIOT, told among other things of his vital interest in the students and the uncanny way he had of knowing about their affairs, their families, and the communities from which they came.

A married man, who was an exceptionally good student, once applied for service of a janitorial nature, and was asked to call upon President ELIOT, to whom he had never spoken. The President, after inquiring of the student whether he had not worked his way through a certain normal school and then taught in a colored school in Louisiana, said to him that he must not undertake the work for which he had applied, that he needed culture. The President gave him a note in addition to the advice, which on opening the student found to contain a one-hundred-dollar bill.

The sequel to the story is that this same young man later became Principal of a young ladies' seminary, and when he died left an estate valued at a quarter of a million dollars. He always wondered, said Dr. WINSHIP, how President ELIOT knew about him.

The public knows well the contribution of this great leader to educational reform, but it is not aware of the active interest he took in the personal welfare of the students. It would take a volume, says Dr. WINSHIP, to tell what he did for them as individuals.

The More It Changes—

If you have observed that the American family is not what it used to be, and would like to know why, you should have attended the lecture on "What Is Happening to the Family" at the Horace Mann Auditorium Sunday night. Have you noticed that husbands are now deliberately going out to play golf or fish without a word of apology? Have you seen wives behaving with amazing independence, getting themselves jobs, playing bridge, making purchases without so much as a by your leave?

What evidences of the self-reliant spirit are the young people not showing? They take the family car for joy rides. They dance until dawn. They select the college they prefer, and consult their elders about nothing. As for the small children, their complete freedom from family restraint has been pictured by the cartoonist who has six-year-olds letting themselves in by the light of the pale moon with their own latchkey.

The speaker, who has noted all this for the purpose of explaining it, clears it all up in a sentence: "I think the family is changing from status to contract." In the former condition, the family was the unit, and no member dared to make a move without the sanction of the group. No golfing, no extravagance, no midnight motor rides without the formal approval of the family. Now the individual consults no one and nothing. That is why domestic life moves so smoothly.

THE EXILE.

Stands pridefully beside her eggs
And cackles vainly that she lays,
For none but I would give her praise.

But I shall not go home again
To ride upon the loaded wain;
To seek for wild rose seeds to sell,
Nor deck my wether with a bell.

I shall not spin beneath the eaves,
Nor rustle fallen birchen leaves.
I shall not gather wooden chips,
Nor ripened haws to stain my lips.

I will not wear that fancy gown,
For in my heart there is a frown!
I do not like my cobweb hose,
For I am scarcely clad in those.

And oh, my life is very sad
Because I love my city lad—
Because I cannot quit it—quite—
Or else I would go home tonight!

NEED FOR FLOOD RELIEF.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorials on important public questions, or upon questions affecting a substantial number of our people, are generally sound and on solid ground. It is therefore difficult to understand why you were not favorable to the calling of a special session of Congress for the relief of the Mississippi River flood sufferers.

You stated that the Government was directing the work of saving lives, the Red Cross was feeding and taking care of them in concentration camps and that no plan for flood control could be submitted to Congress for some months, and that therefore a special session was unnecessary.

But you overlooked the most drab and sad part of this terrible calamity. As the waters gradually recede these people are being returned to the places where they once lived. It is well known that thousands of homes have been washed away or overturned. Where standing, they are water soaked and covered, both inside and out, with a thick coating of reddish brown silt. Everything inside that has not floated out with the flood is in like condition.

Cattle drowned, many implements washed away, no food except what may be provided by the Red Cross for a few days' supply as they start from camps to the desolate place that was once home, and no credit. I say no credit for the reason that at this season of the year the average farmer in that section has practically exhausted his credit at bank with pledge of cotton or other growing crops as security.

Now there is no chance to produce the crops; they are destroyed and it is too late to plant another. Therefore there is no credit at bank, and under the conditions that confront a vast number of these people they cannot come back without financial help.

It is nonsense for our Government officials to talk about the formation of banks or associations to assist the local banks in extending credit. They are not going to make loans unless they are reasonably safe. The only agency that can put these people in a position to come back is the United States Government.

If that help is not given quickly, many of these people will be forced to abandon these farms and seek employment elsewhere in order to feed and clothe their families. If this begins it will create a great economic loss in the decline of farm values in that section, which is already bad enough.

With fine sympathy the Cuban Government came forward with a contribution of $50,000 toward the relief of these people, yet our own Government, with a Treasury overflowing with surplus money, has not contributed one dollar to the relief of these people. Mr. Hoover has, of course, made use of every Government agency available in saving lives and getting the people into camps and has done wonderfully effective work, but the failure of the President to call Congress together for the purpose of rehabilitating these people has placed our Government in a position of indifference to their distress that is not approved by a large part of our people.

The statement has been made that even if a special session of Congress was called no progress could be made in passing a relief bill, as certain political contests or controversies would delay or prevent action. I venture the statement that the most selfish partisan member of Congress would not have dared to interpose partisan controversies to the detriment or defeat of such a vital relief measure.

The cold, naked facts are that over 700,000 of an industrious farm population have suffered the greatest calamity in the history of this country. They are impoverished and in dire distress. The only agency that can aid the greater part of them to become producers and earners is the United States Government, and it is placed in the position of cold indifference to the distress of these people. Members of Congress who have failed to unite in an effort to have a special session called, occupy a similar position of indifference or passive neglect.

SOME PRESIDENTS ON DRINK

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was glad to read the letter from Samuel Wilson proving that the statements at Abbie N. Warren of Bermuda were untrue about the quotations attributed to Abraham Lincoln. I thought when I read Abbie's letter that it did not sound at all like Lincoln. I suspected there must be something wrong about the authenticity of her statement. I would like to mention herewith "A Presidential Declaration." This is absolutely authentic:

> Being satisfied from observation and experience, as well as from medical testimony, that ardent spirits, as a drink, is not only needless, but hurtful; and that the entire disuse of it would tend to promote the health, the virtue and the happiness of the community, we hereby express our conviction, that should the citizens of the United States and especially the young men discontinue entirely the use of it, they would not only promote their own personal benefit, but the good of our country and the world.

Ban on Parades of Klan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to thank you for publishing the letter of C. M. F. Minot, protesting against the ban on the parade of the Klan. I, too, wish to protest against such an unfair proceeding. What is this "tolerance" we hear so much of, and which we are asked to extend to all races, creeds and color except Americans? [illegible] DE MANNE.

BARS VETERAN PAY TO MEN IN SERVICE

General Hines Rules That Law Prohibits War Compensations to Those on Active Duty.

ORDER EFFECTIVE JULY 23

Annual Notice Will Be Sent to Men In National Guard and Army, Navy and Marine Reserves.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Beneficiaries of the United States Veterans' Bureau who are members of a federalized National Guard organization called into the active Federal service, or of the army, navy, or Marine Corps reserve called to active duty, cannot concurrently receive active pay and disability or death compensation, under a decision issued today by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the bureau. The decision becomes effective July 23, and is contained in a general order interpreting that section of the World War Veterans' act which provided that death or disability compensation should not be paid concurrently to a person who is in receipt of active service or retirement pay.

The order directs that every beneficiary of the bureau receiving disability or death compensation be notified of the provisions of the statute relating to prevention of concurrent payments from the bureau and from Government establishments for active service.

A special notice setting forth the conditions under Section 212 of the World War Veterans' act, together with the new proviso, was prepared by the bureau, with instructions to the finance service of the bureau and to special disbursing agents in the regional offices throughout the country that mimeographed copies of it be enclosed with the first compensation checks mailed to beneficiaries after the receipt by them of the new general order.

Bureau disbursing agents were also notified that this notice "must also accompany the first disability or death compensation check issued on all original awards and reopened awards subsequent to the receipt of this general order and annually thereafter a copy of this notice must accompany the May disability or death compensation check mailed on June 1 to every person in receipt of disability or death compensation."

In cases where the active service pay of a member of the army, navy or Marine Corps reserve or a member of a federalized national guard organization is less than the amount of compensation awarded such member, the order declares the Veterans' Bureau "is not authorized to pay such member the excess of his compensation over the amount of his active service pay."

In this connection the order refers to the provision of Section 212 of the World War Veterans' act of 1924, which it characterizes as "clear and unmistakable on this point."

"That compensation under this title [disability and death] shall not be paid while the person is in receipt of active service or retirement pay."

HOSPITAL TRUSTEE CHOSEN.

J. Lehrenkrauss on the Board at Wyckoff Heights, Brooklyn.

The Board of Trustees of the Wyckoff Heights Hospital, St. Nicholas Avenue and Stanhope Street, Brooklyn, announced the election yesterday of Julius Lehrenkrauss of Lehrenkrauss & Sons, steamship agents and bankers, of 359 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, as a member of the board. Mr. Lehrenkrauss has been a member of the hospital society for many years and recently has been active in its building fund campaign.

Virtual completion of the new addition to the hospital building was announced to the board yesterday by President John Welz. The capacity of the maternity department will be increased by at least fifteen beds, he said. Plans for the renovation of the main hospital building, now twenty-eight years old, were discussed at the meeting of the board. In addition to new furnishings and equipment, the plans contemplate a remodeling of the surgical department and more operating, sterilizing, doctors' and nurses' rooms. A fund of $150,000 is being raised.

Louis G. Burger, Superintendent of the hospital, reported to the board that tonsil and adenoid service is steadily increasing and that more accommodations for the patients, most of whom are children, would be needed.

ADVISES SUMMER STUDENTS

"Get along without the professors and on what few books are prescribed for each course," Professor William F. Russell, newly appointed Dean of Teachers College, Columbia University, advised 4,000 Summer Session students at the Teachers College convocation exercises in Russell Court yesterday morning.

"In giving this advice to Summer sessionists," said Dr. Russell, "one naturally thinks of the short session, with its twenty-six weeks' work crowded into six weeks."

Dr. Russell said that this counsel, however, was strictly American. In European universities the sessions are always short, few English or French terms being any longer than the six weeks' Summer session at Columbia.

"Thus," he said, "the Summer Session student at Columbia is working under the same conditions that students have studied under for several centuries in Europe."

SILENT ON SUNDAY CLOSING.

Rockefeller Jr. Takes No Stand on Shutting Gas Filling Stations.

Efforts to induce John D. Rockefeller Jr. to commit himself on Sunday operation of gasoline filling stations by companies in which he is interested have failed.

It was said yesterday on his behalf that the letter of the Open Sunday League, addressed to him, in which he was urged to take a stand "for complete Sunday closing" of filling stations had been received and filed without being answered. The league in its letter held that if Sunday baseball, under a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, was unlawful then the sale of gasoline in that State on Sunday must also be unlawful.

WANTS LAND FOR AIRPORT.

Cohen Says Mayor Walker Favors Recapture of Governors Island.

William W. Cohen, Congressman from the Seventeenth Congressional District, gave out the statement last night that he had discussed his proposal for the recapture of Governors Island by the State with Mayor Walker yesterday afternoon, and that the Mayor had said he was favorably impressed with the project. Mr. Cohen added that he intended to introduce a bill to this purpose in the next Congress.

The island, he said, was originally turned over to the Federal Government in 1800 for "military purposes" only. His plan was for the city to develop it as an airport, and at the same time to cede back to the Federal Government enough land for an army administration, for whose construction the city would pay.

"There is plenty of room on the island for the airport and the army building," said the Congressman. "The city survey for an airport on East Island in Jamaica Bay gives the size of the proposed field as 3,000 by 2,250 feet, while Governors Island is 4,500 by 2,275. Mitchel Field is 4,000 by 3,000 and Roosevelt is 3,000 by 3,000 feet."

Mayor Walker could not be reached last night for comment on the proposal.

LAMBERT—Wallace, be

In the last ten years woman has progressed forty years

...she uses tons of face powder

but in ten years she has reduced the infant death rate 30%

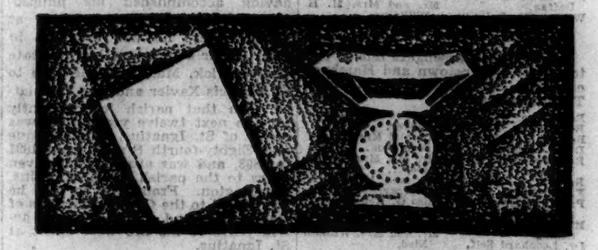
She uses tons of rouge, lipstick and face powder. She cuts her hair, plucks her eyebrows. She goes to Congress . . . clubs . . . and golf tournaments. Yet with all her frivolities and activities, her sensible care of her babies has reduced the infant death rate thirty per cent in the last ten years.

This splendid achievement is due to the fact that the modern mother has at her elbow much more scientific information than her mother had. And she has more time in which to study and apply it.

There are a number of mediums that contribute to the knowledge of the modern mother, but chief among them are the woman's magazines.

Constantly alert to the demand for dependable help and guidance, the woman's magazines have gone to authoritative sources and secured the most advanced information, passing it along to readers in such a way that it could be easily understood and applied.

They have also made it possible for women to devote more serious attention to such matters as child health, by promoting the use of labor-saving devices and thus providing more time for reading and for study.



Among the woman's magazines that have long been vitally concerned with the salvation of infant and child life is McCall's. No other magazine has been more earnest in its efforts to secure for its readers the most authentic information on this important subject. Among the eminent specialists who write for McCall's are Dr. Charles Gilmore Kerley, distinguished pediatrist of New York; Dr. E. V. McCollum of Baltimore, whose work in dietetics is known the world over; Angelo Patri, consulting educator and authority on child training; and John B. Watson, noted psychologist and author of "Behaviorism."

This department of McCall's is but one of many that go deep into the practical side of its readers' needs. Reading through McCall's will quickly convince you that McCall's knows in the most intimate way exactly what the modern woman finds most helpful and interesting. It is the business of McCall's Magazine to know the facts. Get a copy of McCall's today. See the vitality and scope of its editorial contents. See how precisely they dovetail with the things that the woman of today is most interested in . . . art, music, plays, books, health, sports, child care, dietetics, household economics and management, architecture, decoration, gardens, beauty, religion, psychology, motion pictures, fashions, politics, fiction, and special articles by the world's foremost authors and writers.

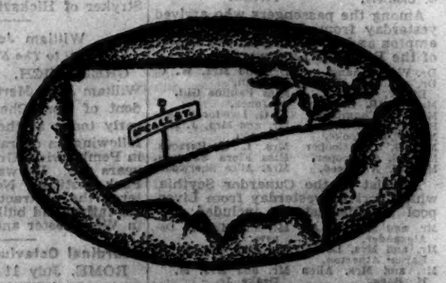
McCALL'S MAGAZINE

The August Issue is out today



There are two sides of McCall Street—the well-known thoroughfare where the 2,200,000 readers of McCall's Magazine live. One is the Romantic side—the other, the Practical side. The former meets woman's desire to escape from herself and her surroundings . . . this is the Fiction side. The latter meets the practical side of her world that she must face daily—foods, clothes, home management, children, etc. This is the Service side of McCall's.

OPPOSE WIDENING WEST END AV. NOW

Residents and Property Owners Ask Delay to Await Test of Traffic Lights.

WOULD SAVE PARK STRIPS

Say Trees and Grass Add to Value of Land and Fear Loss Through Removal.

VERBAL STAY IS GRANTED

Petitioners Want More Concrete Statement to Afford Them Protection in Courts.

A movement to save the trees, park strips and grass plots in West End Avenue, which are to be cut down after Aug. 1 under an order for street widening issued by Borough President Julius Miller of Manhattan, has been launched by residents of West End Avenue, including many prominent citizens.

The residents are anxious to preserve the parkway characteristics of West End Avenue, and in their movement have enlisted the backing of some of the strongest real estate groups in the city. Realty interests fear that property values will be affected adversely by denuding West End Avenue and inviting more traffic through a widened highway.

Borough President Miller has been petitioned to postpone the street widening. The petitioners point out that the widening of streets is designed to relieve traffic congestion and that at present new traffic lights are being installed in West End Avenue for that purpose. They would delay street widening at least until there has been time to see whether the traffic lighting system brings the desired relief.

Alterations Under Way.

Some property owners are going ahead with extensive and expensive alterations to their premises. Here and there an owner is cutting back his grass strips to comply with the Borough President's order of April 25, 1927, to have all encumbrances removed by July 1, an order which later was verbally extended to Aug. 1. Another owner is slicing off an elaborate porte cochere which extends over ten feet of sidewalk which is to be cut away. Others are changing coal chutes and stoops and basement stairs.

These alterations are under way despite the fact that Mr. Miller before sailing last Saturday for a two months' vacation in Europe had left instructions that the street widening was to be held in abeyance for a year to give an opportunity to observe the working of the traffic lights. This decision by Mr. Miller was disclosed yesterday by Joseph Johnson, Commissioner of Public Works, acting for the Borough President.

Property owners are reluctant, however, to be guided by any verbal instructions. They maintain that they would not be justified in law for failure to remove encroachments should the Borough President change his mind about the extension.

Lack of Traffic Control Seen.

The appeal to spare the trees and park strips was made through Mark Rafalsky, representing as managing agent many west side apartment houses, including several on West End Avenue. The appeal referring to the traffic situation declares:

"It seems to me that whatever difficulties now exist are caused, not so much by congestion as by confusion and lack of traffic control. There are at present traffic officers only at Seventy-second, at Seventy-ninth, at Eighty-sixth, and, during a portion of the day, at Eighty-second Streets. Consequently, drivers proceed north and south without consideration for east and west traffic, turn in the middle of the street and otherwise interrupt what should be an orderly flow.

"West End Avenue is a parkway upon which no commercial vehicles are permitted nor are stores or other mercantile enterprises allowed, therefore, no business interests are affected either way. To residents, however, who have been attracted to this thoroughfare, in most instances chiefly because it is restricted and because of the parkway appearance with its trees and grass plots, the destruction of these features will be most unwelcome. Indeed, the change in character and appearance of the avenue may materially affect property values, and consequently tax assessments.

"I ask you to bear in mind that of the six north and south arteries west of Central Park, Broadway, Amsterdam Avenue, Columbus Avenue and Central Park West, with their extensions, traverse practically the length of Manhattan. West End Avenue is essentially a street of thirty-five blocks, extending from Seventy-second Street to 107th Street, where any northbound traffic must join that of Broadway. It is true that Eleventh Avenue may be considered a continuance south of West End Avenue, but since no commercial vehicles may proceed north of Seventy-second Street and very few passenger cars proceed south on Eleventh Avenue, it is doubtful whether adding to the width of the roadway will warrant the expense. Riverside Drive extends from Seventy-second Street to Dyckman, and despite its usage by innumerable buses, there is rarely any congestion or stoppage of traffic. Amsterdam Avenue is usually quite free and should be used to relieve Broadway."

Subscribing to the protest and offering to appear at a public hearing on the matter, according to Mr. Rafalsky, are the following West End property owners or residents and organizations:

The Rev. Henry E. Cobb, minister, West End Collegiate Church; The Rev. J. M. Haldeman, pastor, First Baptist Church; William H. McGee, President, Board of Trustees, Fourth Presbyterian Church; Charles D. Hilles, Vice Chairman, Republican National Committee; Citizens' Union, The City Club, Chase National Bank, Bankers' Trust Company, Central Union Trust Company, James A. Delehanty, H. Morris, Dudley Buck, Franklin Pettit, Edmund Dwight, James M. Dixon, Hotel Esplanade, Breed, Abbott & Morgan, L. E. Mills, Mrs. Lillian G. Whiting, Mrs. Ruth Sushan, Samuel T. Shaw, Allen L. Hawes, P. J. Brennan, Andre L. Causse, A. M. Druckman, Lauten & Meyer, J. Griffin Daugherty, Ribman & Ribman, H. A. B. Dowby, Real Estate Management Company, Mrs. Henry B. Wesselman, Mrs. Anne Rosen, Louis J. Ames, M. Gutshier, Isaac Polstein, Albert E. Heller, Henry B. Stern, Henry Corn, Soule & Calhoun, L. J. Phillips & Co., Romualdo Sapio and Randolph Hurry.

Many of the residents wish to know why they never received a reply to their letter to the Borough President.

Woman Blocks City Traffic In Pity for Mail Wagon Horse

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 11.—Mrs. Mary C. Bletcher, an artist, held up traffic at a downtown street corner for forty-five minutes this afternoon when she stopped a mail wagon at Fifteenth and Sansom Streets and demanded the arrest of its driver for using a lame horse.

Ignoring the pleas of a traffic policeman and the cries of a crowd of several hundred, she climbed into the driver's seat and, holding the reins, refused to let a substitute horse be hitched to the wagon until her charge was examined by an agent for the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

At a police station an hour later the horse was pronounced well and fit. No arrests were made, and the horse returned to work.

"I am so sorry," said Mrs. Bletcher. "I did it for the love of the horse."

FIGHT DANCE HALL ON RIVERSIDE DRIVE

Parks Department to Join With Residents Today to Resist Revision of Zone Law.

ENTERING WEDGE IS FEARED

Restaurant and Ballroom Built in Apartment Near 107th St. Held to Be Violation of Restrictions.

Residents and property owners of Riverside Drive will be aided by the Department of Parks of Manhattan in a determined effort to block the opening of Riverside Drive to business establishments this morning at a hearing before the Bureau of Standards and Appeals in the Municipal Building. They will oppose an application for revision of the building zone ordinance to permit the opening of a restaurant and dance hall at 353 Riverside Drive, between 107th and 108th Streets.

All residents and realty owners of Riverside Drive have been requested by those leading the fight to attend the hearing at 10 o'clock and voice their protests.

The Department of Parks is in the fight on the proposed restaurant and dance hall because it is against establishing a precedent which would open the door to shops of every other description. Not only has the department submitted a written protest to the Bureau of Standards and Appeals, but it will be represented at the hearing by some one from the office of its landscape architect.

The application for the revision of the building zone restrictions was made by Ida Rosoff on behalf of Cora A. Poillon, owner of an apartment house at 353. According to the Bureau of Standards and Appeals the building was constructed with a restaurant on the ground floor and a ballroom on the second floor.

The owner has been unable to obtain a certificate of occupancy because the Department of Buildings has ruled that the restaurant and ballroom are violations of the building zone restrictions. The ruling of the Superintendent of Buildings is now up for review by the Bureau of Standards and Appeals. If the Bureau of Standards and Appeals upholds that ruling the owners of the property have recourse to the civil courts.

Several weeks ago when the owners of the property applied to the Superintendent of Buildings for a certificate of occupancy and carried the Superintendent's refusal to the Bureau of Standards and Appeals, property owners began to file protests with the Bureau of Standards and Appeals. To date thirteen protests have been received from property owners in the immediate zone of the premises, and twenty-two from owners outside that zone.

CAMPBELL SUSPENDS AGENT

The first official act by Maurice Campbell since he became Prohibition Administrator for this district was the suspension yesterday of Albert F. Goodrich of 17 Christopher Street, one of his agents, who was arrested Sunday in Mount Vernon, N. Y., on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mr. Campbell was summoned to Mount Vernon Police Headquarters from his home in Pelham Sunday following Goodrich's arrest. He learned that the agent had been taken into custody with a party of friends following a quarrel with Jerry Rose, restaurant proprietor, of 3 North Fifth Avenue, Mount Vernon. Rose said that the quarrel, which occurred in front of the restaurant, had arisen over a bill of $8.15 which Goodrich had refused to pay. Those arrested were released by Judge Coffey in Mount Vernon in small bail pending examination next Saturday.

Before leaving for Washington, D. C., yesterday Mr. Campbell said he had tried to impress all his agents last week with the necessity for behaving under all circumstances in an exemplary manner.

SLAIN JEWELER INSOLVENT.

Robberies Cited as Cause of $10,000 Deficit in Rodack Estate.

The appraisal of the estate of Aaron Rodack, "the fighting jeweler," which was filed in the State Tax Commissioner's office by the widow yesterday, showed that the estate was insolvent, the assets being valued at $7,219 and expenses and debts at $17,861. Heavy loss sustained through the robbery of his jewelry shop on Washington Heights was a cause cited for the deficit in a report accompanying the appraisal.

On three occasions Rodack's store, on Broadway near 147th Street, was invaded by bandits. Each time Rodack, ignoring the order to throw up his hands, seized a pistol and began shooting. In his third battle with robbers he was shot dead. On one of these robberies the thugs carried away a stock of diamonds and other valuable jewels. Mrs. Rodack, who submitted the appraisal, is now living in Montreal.

LESSONS OF THE ARMY FLIGHT TO HAWAII

Fliers Assert That It Demonstrated That the Pacific Can Now Be Flown in Five Hops—Hope to Undertake This Within a Year—Radio Beacon Helped, but They Think a Plane Can Go Anywhere With a Compass and Celestial Observations

[FINAL ARTICLE]

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HONOLULU, July 6.—We believe that it is possible in a very short time to train the average pilot in overseas flying for long distances.

In spite of the fact that we had all known types of navigation instruments and although many of these failed, we still feel that with an ordinary compass and a few solar and celestial observations it is possible to fly anywhere.

When we were first seen flying near the island of Kauai, a considerable distance from Oahu and Wheeler Field, there were some people, we understood, who thought that we had missed the direction and gotten off the course.

We had been expected to reach Wheeler Field from the southeast, coming indirectly over the city of Honolulu. Instead we appeared from another direction about an hour after, according to many estimates, we should have been sighted.

The fact is, and our chart shows it in minute detail, that we never were far from our originally determined course until we deliberately left that course to fly around Kauai to await daybreak before trying to land at Wheeler Field. We could, had we been an hour or so later, have come in right on the course we expected to take.

Might Well Miss Islands.

And yet, for all that our course was adhered to so closely, these Hawaiian Islands are a mighty small spot on a mighty big ocean, and it is entirely possible that a plane might miss the group if navigation were not good or for some other reason and might fly on and on into the Pacific, unable to find land until failing gasoline would force it to the sea.

This possibility must be taken into consideration by any man who tries the transpacific hop.

After our flight we also realize that greater study must be made of meteorological conditions. Heretofore we believed that if one went to a higher altitude, between 8,000 and 10,000 feet, one would find prevailing westerly winds. After our flight we believe one will find a stronger northeast trade wind blowing at 10,000 feet than at the surface.

Too much care cannot be given to mechanical equipment. Gasoline motors of the most improved type must be minutely inspected and, as Eric Nelson, navigator of the around-the-world flight, says, "must be treated with loving care and kindness," because the slightest failure on the part of the mechanics or the pilot in handling the motors will cause the blowing of a valve, a leaky cylinder or a broken cam rod, which mean the end of a flight of a long nature.

See Radio Beacon as Aid.

While we were not entirely successful in using the radio beacon as a guide, we feel that in the near future the radio beacon will revolutionize not only air navigation but sea navigation. We feel it will be perfectly possible to fly or steer a boat from San Francisco to China entirely by radio and stay within a mile or two of an air line or sea lane that might be drawn with a ruler across a perfectly plotted chart.

Once during our flight, in the middle of the night approximately 900 miles from Hawaii, we were able to tune in on the beacon. The signals came in very loudly and clearly, and we found that the width of the beam was not more than three miles.

It is not believed that at present it would be possible to fly from New York or even San Francisco to Japan on a non-stop flight. However, a flight across the Pacific in five days is entirely feasible, stopping at Hawaii midway, Wake Island, Guam, the Philippines and China.

The only long hop in this project is that flight which we have just accomplished. All the other flights could be made easily during the daylight hours. It would be just a matter of a few weeks to prepare landing facilities at the above-mentioned points.

Look Forward to Orient Flight.

In military flying the objective is not so much the covering of distances as the achieving of a useful purpose; that is, actually to fly to a certain destination, carrying out the mission for which the flight was made and making a return.

While we feel that it has been a great privilege to have made this flight, we hope that we may receive the approval of the War Department for a flight to the Orient as described above. We are certain this flight can be accomplished within a year and we feel that the experience we have had on the last flight will aid us greatly in accomplishing the entire transpacific flight.

Again we want to stress the fact that all flights of the nature of ours depend more upon the equipment and the study given to the project by the engineers than upon the piloting and navigating. In order that progress may be made in the development of commercial aviation it must be borne in mind that too much care cannot be given to the equipment and the careful construction of airplanes to be used for either cargo or passenger transportation.

Stress Need for Safety.

Every distance flight, particularly over the ocean, should be surrounded with every possible factor of safety, and it is a serious mistake for an aviator, no matter what his personal bravery may be, to take risks not justified by his equipment and by the precautions taken to reach him if he should have to make a forced landing.

We realize this—and that is why we consider it a privilege to have made the flight—that it would have been impossible to have obtained all the equipment and the airplane itself and the proper supervision by trained personnel of this equipment, if we had not been in the army.

We feel that nothing succeeds like success; and we hope, in addition to the military lessons we have learned by our flight, that indirectly we will be responsible for saving a number of lives of commercial pilots who are fearless and brave beyond reason and who might venture on a flight of a similar nature without proper equipment.

This article concludes the series of five written by Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger for THE NEW YORK TIMES on their experiences in flying from Oakland, Cal., to the Hawaiian Islands.

BOGUS PRINCE TELLS OF DUPING GERMANY

HIS STORY AMUSES COURT

He Pictures Servility of Aristocrats and Officials Who Thought He Was Hohenzollern.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COLOGNE, Germany, July 11.—The famous case of the bogus Prince Harry Domela, which had taken a political aspect on account of the heated defense of the young adventurer by certain Republican papers, was quickly decided by the Criminal Court here today. The Latvian, who last Fall made several aristocrats ridiculous by successfully posing as Prince William of Prussia, was convicted on four charges of fraud and acquitted on three others, and sentenced to seven months' imprisonment.

Since his arrest he has written his memoirs, which were bought and syndicated by a Republican paper. The rush of the public and of the press, anxious to hear the details of the "cause celebre" was so enormous that the trial had to be transferred to the large Supreme Court room from the walls of which large portraits of various Hohenzollerns looked down upon the young adventurer who successfully posed as one of their scions.

Domela still wore the ill-fitting blue suit in which he had impersonated the former Crown Prince's oldest son. Despite his pale face, strong lisp, defective speech and rather insolent manner, the impression created by the defendant was not unfavorable. Even stern judges smiled when he described his grotesque escapades and the servility of aristocratic circles, Reichswehr officers, public officials and others who crawled in the dust before supposed royalty.

Frankly he confessed previous convictions for a number of petty swindling operations and small thefts. Describing his childhood in an asylum in Latvia, where he was born the son of a poor miller and a woman of noble blood, he stressed his participation in the anti-Bolshevist Ruhr campaign, and added:

"Then I became a tramp, as I didn't feel like working any longer. I made several acquaintances and soon learned I could make an easy living by posing as a Baltic nobleman. Aristocrats now fell over each other trying to aid me. Even the wife of a Berlin Mayor gave me a valuable overcoat."

Domela used all sorts of titles. As Prince Lieven he visited the ultra-feudalistic Heidelberg Student Corps of Saxe-Prussia. Regarding his experience there he said:

"It was a terrible disappointment. I expected to meet cultured people, but found only wild drinking bouts and the rudest manners. Carried to bed dead drunk, I awoke the next morning minus my pocketbook and had to borrow 50 marks from students."

The narrative of Domela reached its most amusing stage when he related how he came to impersonate Prince William of Prussia while in Thuringia.

"I went to the Hotel Kossenhaschen in Erfurt," he said. "The proprietor told me he had been notified by the Police Commissioner that I was Prince William. Everybody addressed me as 'Your Royal Highness.' The next day Kossenhaschen asked me to sign the hotel golden book under the name of Chancellor Marx, saying that he knew positively that I was the Prussian Prince. As I had often imitated the former Emperor's signature, I made the entry desired.

"Now I was a Prince and enjoyed it. Railroad officials furnished me with private compartments. Kossenhaschen took me to the Gotha Hotel, where hangs the portrait of former Crown Princess Cecilia. Pointing to the picture, Kossenhaschen said, 'Of course you know this lady.'

"At Eisenach, Kossenhaschen introduced an elderly American woman, a charming lady, to me. Then we visited the Castle Hotel. On our return to Erfurt the orchestra played the Hohenfriedberg march in my honor. The same evening we went to Gotha again, where I attended a performance at the opera house in the court box.

"After a short sojourn at Magdeburg and Berlin I returned to Gotha. Arriving at the Castle Hotel I found the whole court society assembled to greet me. The whole show was disgusting."

ANTI-FASCISTI HELD IN MURDER ROUNDUP

FOUR SEIZED AS WITNESSES

Arrests Are Made in Connection With the Killing of Two on Memorial Day.

Four men were held last night in the Bronx as material witnesses in the murder of two Fascisti who were killed on Memorial Day while they were journeying to join a detachment of black shirts in a parade in Manhattan. They and three others, all Italians who were said to be connected with anti-Fascist organizations here, were arrested by detectives who found them in the Bronx, in Brooklyn and in raids on two anti-Fascist newspapers in East Tenth Street.

In one of the newspapers, Il Martello, the detectives said they found two fully loaded automatic pistols and four stilettos and taking into custody eight men they held two of them for violation of the Sullivan law and a third for the police of Port Chester, where he was wanted for stabbing a man last March. In the other newspaper, Nuovo Mundo, they took into custody two men, and one of these was held as a material witness.

The raids on the newspapers followed the arrest in Brooklyn early in the day of Colodaro Tesco, 32 years old, of 26 Wilson Avenue, and Donato Carillo, 37, of 1,865 Sixtieth Street, both tailors, as material witnesses in the murder of Joseph Ouist and Michael Amoroso, who were stabbed and shot as they mounted the stairs of the 183d Street Station of the Third Avenue Elevated on their way to the Memorial Day parade.

Soon after they were questioned the police arrested Philip Nardone, 53 years old, of 2,359 Lorillard Place, the Bronx, as a material witness, and then they went to the newspaper offices.

There were four detectives from Inspector Duane's staff and one detective from the Homicide Bureau at Headquarters who since the murders have been working on the case in conjunction with, it was said, members of the Italian Secret Service in Italy, who were keeping the New York police informed on what they learned there. The detectives were Dominick Caso, Donald Carey, Arthur Johnson and Joseph Walsh of Inspector Duane's staff and Silvio Repetti of Headquarters.

They visited Nuovo Mundo at 61 East Tenth Street, first, and took into custody Mario D'Amico, 21, of 666 Magenta Street, the Bronx, a member of the newspaper's circulation department, and Frank Cancelliri, a promotion agent. Next they went to Il Martello at 77 East Tenth Street, edited by Carlo Tresca, and arrested the whole staff of eight men, which included the editor's brother, Mario, 53 years old, of 3,424 Twelfth Avenue, Brooklyn; Luigi Quintallano, 33, of 13 Charlton Street, who were charged with violation of the Sullivan law, and Mario Buzzi, 26, of 131 Waverly Place, who was held for the Port Chester police, charged with felonious assault on Ade Testa of 245 West Forty-sixth Street, on March 20, last. D'Amico was held with Treco, Carillo and Nardone as a material witness.

The men were taken with an unusual show of secrecy to the Highbridge Police Station in an isolated section of the Bronx, as if the police wanted to avoid the possibility of a demonstration.

Even relatives of the men could not learn where they were until late in the evening, and District Attorney McGeehan, who came to the station to question him, would not disclose at first why they were taken into custody. He and Assistant District Attorney Alderman talked to the men until after midnight, when it was announced that seven had been released.

The four men held as material witnesses will be arraigned in the Bronx County Court today, when an order for their detention will be asked. The two charged with violation of the Sullivan law will be brought downtown for arrignment, and the seventh will be turned over to the Port Chester police as soon as representatives call for him.

Salvatore Gagliano, circulation manager of Nuovo Mundo, said last night that when the detectives came there they asked first for Vincent Vacirca, editor of the newspaper. When they were told he was absent, they asked for the person in charge and when he pointed out D'Amico, he said, they arrested him.

As they took him from the office on their way to Il Martello, he said, Cancelliri followed, protesting, whereupon the police arrested him.

Gagliano said the police offered no explanation as to why they wanted any one, and did not show warrants.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 11.—I knew that Vice President of Ireland that was murdered very well. He was a fine, able, conscientious man. I picked him then as one of the coolest, nerviest customers I ever met.

Hope this don't stir up trouble for Ireland, for they were just coming along fine. Tourists, don't miss it this Summer. If you do, you will miss more real hospitality and scenery than in any country in Europe. Yours,

THE CONVERSING AND CONVALESCING MAYOR.

P. S.—Say, the Anti-Saloon League was about to let Calvin and Andy Mellon out, there one time. Guess they would have put Wayne B. Wheeler in as President and Bill Sunday as Secretary of the Treasury.

SACCO'S WIFE TELLS STORY AT ODD 'TRIAL'

She Appears With Other New Defense Witnesses Before Fuller's Advisers.

GOVERNOR ALSO HEARS HER

Proceedings to Get Testimony Not Given in Men's Conviction Run Separately at Boston.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 11.—A "murder trial" unique in the history of jurisprudence, in that Judge, jurors and defendants were absent, and witnesses were not placed under oath, was held behind closed doors of the Executive Council Chamber at the State House today.

Half a dozen men and women, with information affecting the Sacco-Vanzetti case, who have never had an opportunity to tell their stories in a court room, were called before Governor Fuller's Advisory Committee, submitted to questioning by William G. Thompson, counsel for the two condemned men, and were then cross-examined by Dudley P. Ranney, Assistant District Attorney of Norfolk County.

While the members of the Advisory Committee were taking this method of weighing the importance of the new evidence which the defense has accumulated since the case was closed in the courts, Governor Fuller sat in his office just across the corridor for nine hours, and in that time heard the stories of nine men and two women. One of those to appear before both the committee and the Governor was Mrs. Rose Sacco, wife of Nicola Sacco.

There was no contact between the Governor and the three men who have consented to advise him. Governor Fuller arrived at his office at 10 o'clock in the morning and did not come out again until 7:15 o'clock in the evening. His conversations even continued during the luncheon hour, and he munched a sandwich and drank a bottle of milk while he talked with Harry A. Swartz of Brockton, who claims to have been within 600 feet of the murder scene at South Braintree seven years ago, but was never called as a witness.

President Lowell of Harvard, President Stratton of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and former Judge Grant, the members of the committee, arriving a few minutes after the Governor in the morning, did interrupt their activities for luncheon. They left the State House at 5:25 P. M., declining as usual to comment on the day's proceedings and making only the bare announcement that they would meet again tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Goes from Committee to Governor.

The Governor's personal counsel, Joseph Wiggin, sat with him throughout the day. Their first caller was Thomas Doyle, who was an investigator for the defense. As he left, Mrs. Sacco was finishing her story before the Advisory Committee, and she was ushered into the Governor's office, where she remained an hour and a half. Meanwhile, her six-year-old daughter, Inez, entertained and was entertained by the newspapermen in the outer office.

Elias Field, former Corporation Counsel of the City of Boston, who had appeared before the advisory committee, also talked with the Governor for a few minutes. Then followed H. C. Dow, understood to be a haberdasher, who had information as to Sacco's glove size; Mr. Swartz, Mary A. Fortini, Vanzetti's former landlady at Plymouth, who was not a witness at the trial, but is said to support Vanzetti's alibi; Bertrando Brini, also of Plymouth and another alibi witness; Captain Ralph Pieracini of the New Bedford police, believed to have information sustaining the Madeiros "confession"; Henry Iacovelli of Milford, a defense witness, and J. F. Reynolds of Quincy and F. W. Jackson of Brockton, whose connection with the case could not be learned.

When the Advisory Committee assembled it promptly summoned Assistant District Attorney Ranney, Mr. Thompson and Herbert Ehrmann, associate defense counsel. The first witness to enter the council chamber was Mrs. Sacco, who had arrived with her husband's lawyers. She remained but fifteen minutes, and it was believed that she was not subjected to cross-examination.

BLACK REACHES CALCUTTA.

Baltimore Publisher Thinks Flight Possible in Monsoon.

CALCUTTA, July 11 (#).—Van Lear Black, Baltimore publisher, arrived here today from Rangoon on a return flight from the Dutch East Indies to Amsterdam. He flew from Bangkok to Rangoon Sunday.

Mr. Black told a correspondent of The Associated Press that he found the East tremendously interesting and expressed the opinion that commercial flying was not impossible during the monsoon.

He said that he planned to continue on to Allahabad tomorrow morning.

TENEMENT FIRE RISK STIRS STATE BOARD

Inspection of Nine 'Converted' Dwellings Reveals Menace to Many Families.

MEANS OF ESCAPE LACKING

COMMISSIONERS SHOCKED

Counsel Says Thousands Are Living in Ignorance or Dread of Perilous Conditions.

Governor Smith's Commission for Revision of the Tenement House Act spent three hours yesterday afternoon examining typical "converted" dwellings built thirty or forty years ago as one-family houses, but altered within recent years for the occupancy of several families. After the trip the Commissioners declared, through Harold Riegelman, their counsel, that they were "thoroughly shocked" at the conditions of deadly fire menace they had seen.

A dozen or more families lived in each of the nine dwellings visited, and the commissioners saw wooden stairways with wooden trim work and non-fireproof walls, through which fire might easily sweep to the roof and cut off escape. In almost every one of these houses they noticed an absence of fire-escapes. They tried to reach skylights by perpendicular iron ladders, and tried to pry open roof scuttles, but found them either locked, nailed down or too heavy to open, and useless in case of an emergency.

Aroused by what the commissioners had seen, Mr. Riegelman declared that "most New Yorkers who live in converted dwellings live in complete and inescapable fire hazard." Thousands of families are living either in ignorance or dread of such conditions, he said, and announced that the commission's task would be only half completed unless it took steps to protect every tenant in the city against such fire peril.

What the Commissioners Found.

Those who made the inspection trip were headed by Tenement House Commissioner Walter C. Martin, whose department had cited several of the scheduled houses for violations of the law, and Commissioners Darwin R. James, Chairman of the State Housing Board; Lawson Purdy of the Charity Organization Society; Senator Seabury C. Mastick of Westchester and Assemblyman Peter J. Hammill.

A typical building visited was in West Fifty-first Street, less than half a block from Fifth Avenue, which, in appearance, did not seem to differ from hundreds of similar brownstone houses on the upper west side and in parts of midtown Manhattan. In the building next door, Arnold Daly, the actor, was burned to death two months ago; in the house two doors away there had been a fire within the last month, at which many narrow escapes were reported.

The house which the Commissioners visited has neat, painted hallways and carpeted stairs. The stairways are wood, the banisters of wood and the walls inflammable. On each floor of the four-story house are two large, sunny apartments without any fire-escape.

Another house visited was a five-story structure in West Thirty-seventh Street, within sight of Fifth Avenue, where a disastrous fire had occurred only recently. The stairways and walls were blackened by flames; the floors and ceilings were water-soaked. This house never had been legally converted to multi-family occupancy, and in its lack of fire-escapes it was worse than the "old-law" tenements built before the present law was enacted in 1901.

In Fifty-seventh Street, two doors west of Calvary Baptist Church, the Commissioners visited a four-story house which had been rebuilt under the building code for non-cooking occupancy, but which kitchenette cooking had placed it in the category of a tenement house. There are eleven apartments in this house, with an art shop on the ground floor. A fire-escape in the rear leads to the yard, from which there is no access to the street except by going back into the house. Apartments in the middle of the house open on airshafts. The front apartments in Fifty-seventh Street are without fire-escapes of any kind.

Roof Scuttle Locked.

Mr. Riegelmann tried to inspect the skylight to the roof, but found that he could reach it only through another apartment occupying the entire top floor. Passing through that, he found his way blocked by a storeroom piled high with heavy furniture which had to be pushed out of the way. Then, trying to climb to the scuttle, he found a perpendicular iron ladder in a three-foot square shaft. Finally he found the scuttle locked, useless in case of a fire.

Rentals for these apartments range from $80 to $100 a month, and the top floor, a four-room apartment, rents for $150 a month.

The Commissioners did not investigate the hundreds of converted houses on the upper east side, where rooms have been darkened by partitions shutting off proper ventilation. They did examine two typical houses in the Chelsea district—one a three-story brick house in West Twenty-first Street, where eight families are living in what was once a one-family home. Five persons were living on the top floor, without a fire-escape. The other house examined was in West Twenty-fifth Street. It had no fire-escapes.

Finally, in West Sixty-fifth Street, the Commissioners saw a tenement house which had been converted into a rooming house of seventy rooms. These are rented singly at $5 to $10 a week. Cooking by gas ranges or electricity goes on in many of these rooms. There are good fire-escapes in the front and rear, but a score of rooms in the middle of the house are without escape in case of fire. The stairs are wooden and the walls inflammable.

Future inspection trips will take in apartment hotels, single-family wooden houses and "old-law" tenements, with the object of preparing a drastic new law which will regulate all types of dwellings in the city.

Federal Survey Shows Wave Allocation Functioning Well in New England.

BOARD WILL KEEP ITS PLAN

Caldwell Expects Licenses to Be Renewed Aug. 15 on 60-Day Basis —Station Tangle Looms Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The present allocation of radio wave lengths installed on June 15 is working satisfactorily in New England and other sections of the East, in the opinion of Orestes H. Caldwell of the Radio Commission, who has just completed a survey of the broadcasting situation in Boston, Providence, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and other New England cities.

Early next week he will make a survey of radio conditions in Western New York. He will recommend to the commission that the present arrangement be continued indefnitely under the system of sixty-day licenses.

Mr. Caldwell is confident that when licenses are renewed on Aug. 15 they again will be limited to sixty days and that it will be some time before radio licenses will be issued for longer periods.

Interested Parties Satisfied.

The commission's allocation of wave lengths appears to be operating to the satisfaction of nearly everybody concerned, said Commissioner Caldwell.

"Testimony to this effect was given me in New England by broadcasters, jobbers, dealers, manufacturers and others in touch with the radio situation," he added. "From my own observations in the field I feel satisfied the commission will stand by the set-up that became effective under its auspices on June 15."

Mr. Caldwell found a situation in Boston that threatened for a time to force a revamping of the whole New England spectrum. He found that Station WEEI was interfering with other broadcasters in the East, due to defective crystal control. A readjustment immediately ended interference.

Mr. Caldwell also found that several out-of-town stations were interfering with Boston and Providence stations, a trouble which was turned over to local radio inspectors for adjustment.

Secaucus Congestion Feared.

Complications are threatened in the New York zone by applications made by two stations there, WHAP and WLWL, for authority to move to Secaucus, N. J. Station WGL already has been authorized to transfer to Secaucus and the commission is reluctant to have two other broadcasters established there.

Mr. Caldwell today notified Franklin Ford of Station WHAP that the application of that station would have to be passed upon by a quorum of the commission. Only two members of the five of the commission are now in Washington.

"Suggest you discuss fully with WGL and WLWL before involving any commitment, as site selected should be full wave length distant from other stations involved," Mr. Caldwell wired to Mr. Ford.

The jubilee celebration for the Confederation of Canada was broadcast world-wide by radio, Trade Commissioner Lynn W. Meekins at Ottawa today reported to the Department of Commerce.

A network of circuits was arranged in Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific, involving twenty broadcasting stations with Ottawa as a centre. About 21,650 miles of telegraph and telephone lines were used, and also fifty-three repeaters for amplification at a distance of about 200 miles. Equipment, lines and apparatus cost $3,000,000.

The broadcast was sent overseas by high power, short-wave transmission from the Canadian Marconi Station at Drummondville, Quebec, on a wave length of 26.18 meters. The wave length from Ottawa was 454.5.

SUMMERALL AT CARLISLE.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Pa., July 11.—Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, Chief of Staff of the army, this afternoon inspected the Army Medical Field Service School here and reviewed and addressed a thousand Medical Reserve officers and students for officers commissions on Warner Field, the scene of the training of the great Carlisle Indian athletes.

General Summerall paid high compliment to Colonel Charles R. Reynolds, Commandant of the school and commanding officer of Carlisle Barracks, for the efficiency of the staff, Faculty and personnel, and made the remark that there is now no such thing as a non-combattant in any army or any war, with a glowing tribute to the heroic work of the medical men in our army.

General Summerall stressed with practical illustrations the need of army medical men for a knowledge of fundamental military technique, and expressed regret that in former American conflicts medical officers had not been supplied at the outset with field service training.

He said that the service of the medical men stood on a par with the high achievements of other branches of the American military service, and disavowed the intention of the army to build more of a military establishment than sufficient to take care of the first stages of a war in the event of the country ever having to face another.

RADIO GAME HELD ILLEGAL.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 11.—Vice Chancellor Leading decided in Chancery Court at Camden today that radio games on the Boardwalk are games of chance and consequently without the protection of the courts.

This decision followed hearing on a rule to show cause granted by Vice Chancellor Ingersol on the application of Harry Goldstein, Harry Light and Abe Sims. Pending the hearing the Vice Chancellor restrained the Atlantic City police from interfering with the two men's establishments.

City Solicitor Perskie appearing for the city today, declared that the games were clear violations of the law.

The decision of the Vice Chancellor is expected to smooth the way of the police in their drive against radio and auction houses employing questionable methods.

SEES WORLD BASIS FOR BROADCASTING

TALKS OF OCTOBER SESSION

Urges That International Meeting Consider Program Field as Well as Wireless Telegraphy.

Looking forward to broadcasting on an international scale, Dr. Lee De Forest, inventor of the three-element vacuum tube, urged yesterday that the International Radio Telegraph Conference to be held in Washington beginning Oct. 4 consider various phases of radio broadcasting as well as wireless telegraphy. Twenty-three nations have appointed delegates to the conclave.

"A perusal of the names of the delegates fails to reveal many that have been especially linked with the broadcasting field of radio," said Dr. De Forest. "I firmly believe that before the next succeeding conference will be held international broadcasting will have attained a stable development which will call for careful and harmonious regulation on the part of the various Governments, in order that the greatest possible benefit to the largest number of people may be obtained. This condition doubtless exists today in Europe, where nightly programs from various European capitals are heard all over the Continent.

"For years I have been convinced that one of the greatest possible factors making toward international peace and amity will be the interchange of radio programs between nations. To this extent, therefore, the problem of international broadcasting is really of equal import to that of exchanging commercial telegrams without interference. I will welcome the time when some 'Geneva Conference' is regularly convened, not for the mere limitation of cruiser tonnage among rival nations but to secure the greatest possible good for the greatest number of inhabitants which can be bestowed by regulating radio broadcasting channels of international acquaintanceship."

Arthur Batcheller, Federal Radio Supervisor in New York, who has just been notified of his appointment as a technical adviser to the American delegation of the international conference, said: "I do not know just what will be done in regard to radio broadcasting problems that have arisen in the United States. I have some ideas of my own that I hope to be able to present, however, during the preliminaries to the conference, which I will attend in Washington soon after the first of August. During my absence, which I expect will extend well into the Winter, Henry L. Bogardus will act as Radio Supervisor in this district."

DEAD FISH CAUSE DRY RAID.

Found Poisoned by Mash—Agents Then Seize Princeton Stills.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 11.—Two large stills operating near Princeton were raided last night and early this morning by Federal agents. The suspicions of the authorities were aroused by the numbers of dead fish which were found in Stony Brook. It is now believed that the fish were poisoned by the mash. Pipes were found leading from barns into the stream.

Everett Helton, owner of the farm where one still was found, was arrested. The owner of the other has not yet been taken.

Old Daily Joins Associated Press.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y., July 11 (AP).—The Daily Messenger, the oldest daily newspaper in New York west of the Hudson River, became a member of The Associated Press today. Tracing its ancestry back to 1797, The Messenger represents a consolidation under the name of Ontario Repository and The Genesee Messenger. The Repository, succeeding a paper founded in Geneva in 1797, first appeared here in 1802, while The Messenger made its début in 1806. The two publications were merged in 1862 under the name of Ontario Repository and Messenger, which subsequently became The Daily Messenger. The newspaper is now published by the Ontario Press, Inc., of which E. D. De Witt is President and Treasurer and Richard De Witt Vice President.

Midas—fabled king of ancient Phrygia to whom the Gods had given the power of turning anything he touched to Gold.

All the Gold of KING MIDAS

But all of his gold might not suffice to pay for a single night's entertainment broadcast by the 500 and more radio stations of the country. The value of the station facilities alone is estimated at more than $50,000 an hour. And in addition there is the value of the artists' services, many of them world famous.

Even the small percentage of these programs possible for one receiver represents a tremendous value as time goes on. If your receiver gives but 75% performance you are losing much of the value of the entertainment and educational programs.

The need of Stromberg-Carlsons increases as radio programs grow. For Stromberg-Carlsons stand alone in performance on broadcast reception.

WIDOW GETS INCOME OF VAN ALEN MILLIONS

Will Gives Her $107,000 Personal Estate and Leaves Father's Fortune in Trust.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 11.—Margaret Louise Van Alen, widow of James Lauren Van Alen of New York and Newport, who died in Paris this Spring, was named executor in his will which was filed for probate here today. Bond was fixed at $200,000.

The personal estate of $107,000 was left to his widow, who was allowed to draw upon the principal of his estate to a sum not exceeding $20,000 in any calendar year.

The only outside bequests were those of $5,000 to John Dono, an employe; $6,000 to a friend, Philip Clive Payne of London, and $10,000 to another friend, Louis James Phelps of New York. The will was drawn in New York City on April 28, 1920.

Although the personal estate of Mr. Van Alen totaled but $107,000, he had during his life the estate of his father, James J. Van Alen, under a deed of trust dated Nov. 3, 1902, which estate is said to amount well into the millions.

Under this deed the testator was authorized to dispose of certain properties in his will and make disposition of the estate. Mr. Van Alen willed this estate trust to his wife, with the United States Trust Company of New York, Louis J. Phelps and Mrs. Van Alen as trustees.

Mrs. Van Alen is to have the sole use of the income of the estate during her life, and after her death the trustees are directed to divide the principal into equal shares for the children surviving her.

If there is no issue living, Mr. Van Alen provided for the distribution and the rest and residue will go to Trinity Church of this city, the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York City.

GET NINE FOR CANTON JURY.

JURY PICKED TO TRY FIRST TICKET AGENCY

CASE REGARDED AS A TEST

It Makes First Definite Result of Tuttle's Inquiry, Which Revealed Wholesale Gouging.

A jury was chosen in less than an hour yesterday afternoon in the United States court to try the first case of the Government against a theatre agency charged with rendering false tax returns on proceeds from tickets sold at prices far in excess of their box-office listing. Adjournment was taken to 10:30 o'clock this morning, when Louis Marshall is expected to move dismissal on the ground that the theatre ticket tax law is unconstitutional.

The Alexander Theatre Ticket Office, Inc., of 200 West Forty-second Street, Oscar Alexander, President, and Edward Alexander, Secretary Treasurer, being the first in alphabetical order of eleven agencies against which United States Attorney Tuttle has gathered evidence ready for the Grand Jury, is the first to go on trial. The case is regarded as a test.

While the indictment charges that the defendants "did cause to be prepared, executed and returned a false an incorrect tax return," Mr. Marshall is expected to argue this morning that whether they did so or not they cannot be prosecuted. He will contend, it is said, that the Revenue act of 1926, under which the indictments were found, is unconstitutional in that it attempts to levy an excise tax not for revenue but to control business.

To Recall Upset of State Law.

The unconstitutionality of this, Mr. Marshall will probably argue—laying the foundation for the defense in the event that his motion is denied—was established by the United States Supreme Court when it ruled out the New York State law calling for a 50 per cent. tax on surcharges in excess of 50 cents levied by theatre ticket brokers.

As Mr. Marshall's presentation of the defense's stand will constitute the framework of the trial so far as the Alexanders are concerned, Mr. Tuttle took precaution that the jury should hear nothing of it by getting Judge William H. Atwell, who is presiding, to order them to report to the jury room instead of the court room this morning.

Little difficulty was experienced in finding twelve men who were sure that they had no bias one way or the other on how much it was fair to demand for a theatre ticket. Seven talesmen in all were rejected for cause, most of them with the agreement of both sides.

One man said he owned some theatres and was promptly adjudged unsafe. Another said he had supervised the interior decorating of a ticket brokerage office and added that he had "bought theatre tickets and paid the price for them, but I never kicked about it." Mr. Tuttle let him go. Another answered Judge Atwell's queries with emphatic nods and "Yes, sirs" often before the Court had finished speaking. He said he was "absolutely certain" he could give a fair trial—and was dismissed.

Personnel of the Jury.

The jury was made up of Edward F. Hart, salesman, 6,063 Broadway; John F. Maloy, telephone engineer, 17 West Eighty-fourth Street; David Coleman, painter, 1,382 Fifth Avenue; Jack Snydecker, salesman, 2,011 Morris Avenue; William J. Hughes, mining engineer, 520 West 232d Street; Charles Arndt, rubber dealer, 334 West Forty-seventh Street; Charles E. Sheppard, stationery manufacturer, 277 Park Avenue; Paul Rosen, Manufacturer, 515 West 110th Street; Thomas J. O'Hea, clerk, 1,349 Lexington Avenue; George Hansen, lamp dealer, 2,290 University Avenue; A. Tracy Smith, floorwalker, 1,061 Gerard Avenue, the Bronx, and Guilford S. Bucklin, electrician, 258 West 106th Street.

Aside from selection of the jury the only step yesterday was the combining of the two indictments against the Alexanders by order of the Court after an agreement between counsel. The first indictment charged violation of the revenue law during thirteen months preceding last April, and the second covered April.

PRESS CENTRAL BUREAU PLAN.

Committee of Producers Completes the Initial Draft.

A large draft of a plan whereby all leading theatrical producers, with the exception of A. L. Erlanger, Florenz Ziegfeld and Charles Dillingham, will enter upon a cooperative ticket agency to preclude exorbitant prices to the public, has been completed, it was learned yesterday from Arthur Hammerstein.

The plan was outlined by a committee of producers made up of Mr. Hammerstein, Edgar Selwyn, Gustave Blum, L. Schwab, Crosby Gaige, A. L. Jones and Fortune Gallo. In that form it was tentatively approved by Irwin Chanin, Lee Shubert, Arthur Hopkins, Lawrence Weber, Sam Harris, Winthrop Ames, William A. Brady, Gilbert Miller and Lyle D. Andrews.

Lawyers for Joe Leblang, head of the Public Service ticket office, prospective manager of the cooperative ticket office, together with lawyers representing Mr. Hammerstein and other producers, made the draft as completed yesterday. The law firm of O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll did the major part of the work.

The committee will meet at Mr. Leblang's office at 5:30 o'clock tonight, Mr. Hammerstein said, to go over the draft section by section, revising it if they see fit.

If the scheme is successful, there will be no surcharge on tickets costing less than $2 at the box office and a surcharge of 10 per cent. on tickets costing more than that.

HARRY PORTMAN APPOINTED

Harry Portman, a young American theatre manager, who has been representing Loew's, Inc., in connection with French theatre holdings, has been appointed managing director of all Loew theatre properties in England, Belgium and France. He is also supervising the construction of the new Empire Theatre in London. Prior to his foreign appointment Mr. Portman was a member of the managerial staff of Loew's Southern and Southwestern circuits.

'AFRICANA' A SWIFT NEGRO MUSICAL REVUE

Principals—Ethel Waters, Rigly and Wilkins, Paul Kaus, Ed Peck, Billy Mills, Henry Winifred, Margaret Beckett, Baby and Bobby Goins and others.

At the playhouse where "Shuffle Along" held high carnival several years back, this week's negro invasion of the New York theatre began auspiciously last night with the presentation of a black-and-tan frolic in which Ethel Waters, out of similar presentations and vaudeville, is starred. Miss Waters is a comedienne and one of considerable talents. She is expert in the effortless retailing of a lightly "blue" song; she has personality and a natural comedy sense, and in her dancing there is something reminiscent of a dusky Charlotte Greenwood.

She wanders easily in and out of the entertainment, and seems destined to stop it with at least one number—her song specialty. The show—"Africana" is the name they have given it—is a bit more pretentious than some of its recent predecessors, but for all its external gaudiness and its copying of the Broadway mise en scene it retains a purely racial quality. It is a frank and uninhibited extravaganza which moves swiftly and generally contrives to provide an evening's entertainment—a short evening's entertainment, to be sure, for its curtain last night was the earliest of any revue in recent memory.

"Africana" contains some good dancing, which detail was attended to by Louis Douglas, who staged the Josephine Baker revue in Paris, and at least two fairly amusing sketches. One of them, "Jedgement Day," goes off in the later day white tradition, but this proves to be justified by its ending; the other is a duologue between a Chinaman and a negro sailor, which is believed to have had Shubert vaudeville origins. The chief comedians are Billy Mills and Harry Winifred, who appear to be funnier than most of the material they are given.

There are the usual romantic songs about the hypothetical delights of a Dixie paradise, the customary minstrel interludes, and a number of rough places that will be smoothed out in the playing. But the first act ends in a cake-walk finale—led, according to announcement, by "Pickaninny Hill, champion cake-walker of the world—which is as well worth seeing as are the gyrations of a senegambian team attemptig to perform the Mitty and Tilio sort of dancing.

The show has pace, and whenever it halts that quality is restored by the simple expedient f permitting a pair of willing "holders," identified simply as "Eddie" and "Sonny" on the elaborate rhnestone belts they wear, to come before a curtain and go through portions of their speedy routine. The effect is instantaneous.

EASTMAN IS 73 TODAY.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 11 (AP).—George Eastman will return from a motor trip tomorrow to spend his seventy-third birthday at his East Avenue home, where messages of congratulation from President Coolidge, Vice President Dawes and Thomas Edison await him.

Mr. Eastman, head of the Kodak Company, financier and philanthropist, is in excellent health. His anniversary will be observed quietly at his home, with no public reception.

President Coolidge wrote:

"I am glad to join with the many friends of Mr. Eastman extending congratulations on his seventy-third birthday. His has been a life of self-effacing service, the record of which will be a lasting memorial."

Thomas A. Edison wired the following:

"I want to felicitate my friend, George Eastman, on his birthday by extending to him my perennial tribute to the great work he did in helping me to complete the motion picture by his patient, persistent and untiring labors in the development of the wonderful film which has been so essential to the success of the motion picture."

STADIUM CONCERT PLEASES

Throng Drawn by Philharmonic's All-Tchaikovsky Program.

An all-Tchaikovsky program drew an unusually large audience last night at the Stadium concert. Mr. van Hoogstraten led the Philharmonic Orchestra through the great Sixth Symphony with his usual mastery, emotional power and sympathetic understanding, to the great delight of the throng of listeners. He received an ovation after the third movement, which in some respects was the high point of the evening, wherein the conductor succeeded in infusing the work with a grandeur, breadth and power which never degenerated into noise and clamor.

The remainder of the program was given over to the "Nutcracker Suite," including the "miniature overture," March, and Dance of the Sugar Plum Fairy. The delightful whimsicality of the music was interpreted with the fine appreciation which has characterized previous performances of the work at these concerts.

SOUSA SUMMONS HIS BAND.

Begins Rehearsing Today for the Thirty-fifth Season.

Lieut. Commander John Philip Sousa will assemble his band of eighty men at the Fulton Theatre today for two days of rehearsal before opening his thirty-fifth annual tour, which will cover 20,000 miles. The first concert will be given at Great Neck on Thursday night. After engagements at Mineola on Friday night and White Plains on Saturday the band will go to Atlantic City for four weeks on the Steel Pier. Sousa's travels this season will take him to the Pacific Coast and will occupy him until the end of the year.

On April 5, 1927, Sousa celebrated his fiftieth anniversary as a conductor. He became director of the United States Marine Band in 1880 and held the position for twelve years, relinquishing it to form his own band in September, 1892.

Rehearsing for Newport Festival.

The Newport Casino Theatre Festival at Newport, R. I., will open on July 26 with a production of "Hamlet in Modern Dress," rehearsals for which have been begun under the direction of Basil Sydney, assisted by Phillip Loeb. Mr. Sydney will be Hamlet and Mary Ellis, Ophelia. Others in the company are Walter Kingsford, Helen Ware, Kenneth Hunter, Frederic Burt, Guido Nadzo, John McGovern and Marian Morehouse.

THE SCREEN

Miss Sweet Holds On.

SINGED, with Blanche Sweet, Warner Baxter, Mary McAllister, Ida Darling, James Wang and Edgar Norton; adapted by Gertrude Orr from a story by Adela Rogers St. Johns; edited and titled by Katherine Hilliker and H. H. Caldwell, directed by John Griffith Wray; "Espana," a potpourri; Divertissements, with Maria Gambarelli and others. At the Roxy.

Dolly Wall, dance hall girl, makes a man out of Royce Wingate, bum, in New York, later, he is the interesting and successful Mr. Wingate, and she is "the notorious Mrs. Wall." She has raised him above herself and while she stays down, in a social sense, he goes up. He problem then is to hold on. She does, but only by desperate measures that have nearly tragic results, and after melodramatic turns and twists of plot that keep the outcome in doubt till the end.

Such is the summed up substance of "Singed" at the Roxy this week. Incidentally, Miss Sweet herself holds on. Before most of the stars in movies today even had stellar ambitions, Miss Sweet's was a box office name, and here she is still heading a cast at the newest theatre in town. And if the remarks and observed attention of those present yesterday mean anything at all, she is still a popular star. Certainly, she makes the story of "Singed" her own. Those who share it with her, in the main, are Warner Baxter as Royce Wingate, Mary McAllister as Amy Cardigan, a New York society girl; Ida Darling, a social leader, and James Wang, as Wong, Chinese.

As usual, Roxy's embellishing program is rich and varied, including a brilliant potpourri called "España," and bright divertissements featuring Maria Gambarelli, the Russian Cathedral Choir and others.

A Roughhouse Comedy.

THE CALLAHANS AND THE MURPHYS, with Marie Dressler, Polly Moran, Sally O'Neil, Lawrence Gray, Frank Currier, Gertrude Olmstead and Eddie Gribbon. Based on a novel by Kathleen Norris, titled by Ralph Spence, directed by George Hill; "Legend of Killarney," ballet corps and Chester Hale Girls. At the Capitol.

Whatever Mrs. Norris wrote in her novel, "The Callahans and the Murphys," at the Capitol this week, is a rough and tumble comedy that plays for loud laughs and occasional sentiment. Veering from the recent vogue of Irish-Jew burlesque, it is all-Irish and, as might be expected, full of fights and broad slapstick. If frankly makes no effort at the surprise style of screen entertainment. It is a smash-bang sort of thing all through, putting such properties as a flower-pot, a keg of beer, and a baby to proverbial uses—and, with those who have always liked such, hilarity results.

The cast speaks for itself. Those who have followed stage and screen at all know Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. To them falls most of the work—and they work industriously at their mugging for comic effect and fighting for the fun of the thing. Of course, there is an Irish picnic, which in all cross-word puzzles definitions is the key for "mêlée"—and in this respect the picture is nothing if not orthodox.

"Let George Do It," a two-reel comedy of the conventional kind is also on the program and gets its share of laughs.

WILLIAM HARRIGAN IN SENTIMENTAL ACT

William Harrigan is attempting to revive memories of the days of Harrigan and Hart at the Palace this week in an unaffectedly sentimental act, which consists largely of Irish ballads of a bygone music hall vintage. It is a turn so unpretentious and so honest in gunning for its effects, that its slightly maudlin quality is not as annoying as it otherwise might be.

The seductive Vanessi, aided by a quartet of excessively collegiate youths, is another Palace attraction in an agreeable dance number. Then Frank Fay continues as Master of Ceremonies besides presenting his own little folderol, and he is as diverting as ever. Among the features of lesser interest, Sylvia Clark goes through a routine vaudeville offering of no great distinction, as does Marguerite Padula. Gaston and Andrés stage what may best be described as a pretentious dancing act, and there are enough other turns to make a long show.

HASSELL ON STAGE 25 YEARS

George Hassell of "The Circus Princess" will celebrate his twenty-fifth year on the stage with Saturday night's performance at the Winter Garden. Mr. Hassell first acted in 1902 at the Theatre Royal in Melbourne, Australia. After coming to this country one of his important rôles was with John Craig at the Castle Square Theatre in Boston.

Of late Mr. Hassell has become known chiefly as a revue comedian, and he has also played in "The Student Prince" and "Countess Maritza." He was the Bottom of the recent Sunday night performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" given at Forest Hills in aid of the Actors' Fund.

Pierre Monteux Returns.

Pierre Mantaux, orchestra conductor, returned yesterday on the French liner Rochambeau from a vacation in Europe to go to Hollywood, Cal. He said that he was going to conduct the series of "Symphonies under the Stars" at the Hollywood Bowl and would return to New York in August to conduct the open-air concerts at the Lewisohn Stadium.

O'Neill to Aid Shakespeare Fund.

Eugene O'Neill has accepted membership on the National Committee of the American Shakespeare Foundation which is raising a fund to rebuild and endow the burned Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"A la Carte" will play in Stamford on July 22 and 23 before opening in Boston.

John Halliday, who has left the cast of "The Spider" to underno an operation and other medical treatment, will sail for Bermuda today for a few days' rest. He will return to the company at the Music Box on July 25. In the meantime, his role is being played by William Courtenay.

RICHARD BENNETT WEDS MRS. AIMEE HASTINGS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Richard Bennett, star of many a theatrical production, and at present engaged in amusing Chicago as "The Barker" at the Blackstone Theatre, was married at 5 o'clock this afternoon to Mrs. Aimee Raisch Hastings of San Francisco. Miss Edith Arnold and Owen Davis Jr., both of the cast of "The Barker," attended the bridal couple.

Members of the cast, the bride's mother, Mrs. Albert J. Raisch, her brother, A. J. Raisch, and a few Chicago friends were present at the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in flowered yellow chiffon, accordion pleated, with a shoulder cape of soft material, with which she wore a large hat to match. She carried a hand-bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Both the bride and bridegroom have been married before. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will remain in Chicago until the show closes, then will sail for England, where "The Barker" will open in the Fall.

Mrs. Adrienne Morrison Bennett obtained a divorce from the actor on April 24, 1925, in an undefended case, also winning the custody of her daughter, Constance Bennett, of movie fame. There are two other daughters, Barbara, 21, and Joan, 19. The couple had lived apart after twenty-two years of married life, for some time in a "trial separation," before Mrs. Bennett started the legal case to make it permanent.

Goldman Band Plays German Music

The thirty-sixth concert by the Goldman Band last night in Central Park was devoted largely to music of the German school, including compositions of Schubert, Beethoven, Bach and Wagner, as well as lighter pieces of Strauss and Mendelssohn. Lotta Madden sang the "Divinités du Styx" of Gluck. The program ended with a spirited performance of Johann Strauss's "Emperor" waltz. The audience filled all the seats and there were many standees.

JURY GETS TROOPERS' CASE

Court Refuses to Order Verdicts of Not Guilty of Larceny.

Special to The New York Times.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., July 11.—The case against Lieutenant Rogers, Sergeant Cunningham, Corporal Daly and Trooper Camp, accused of the larceny of money from Timothy Meaney at Jutland last December, was given to the jury at 4:43 P. M. today. The afternoon session had been taken up in the summing up of the case.

Judge Robbins, prior to the summing up, denied motions made by attorneys for the defense for a direction of verdicts of not guilty. It was testified that after Meaney had been searched articles which included a tobacco pouch were handed to Daly and that he placed them in the pocket of an automobile. In court today he produced a tobacco pouch which he found at the Somerville station, but he testified that he was unable to say whether this was the pouch handed to him after the search. Meaney testified that it was not his pouch.

GILBERT MILLER TO WED MISS BACHE

CEREMONY TO BE IN PARIS

Confirmation of Approaching Marriage Given by Bride-to-Be's Sister, Mrs. Frederick Richards.

Confirmation of the approaching marriage of Gilbert Miller, Managing Director of Charles Frohman, Inc., theatrical producers, to Miss Kathryn K. Bache, daughter of Jules Bache, financier, was given out here yesterday by Mrs. Frederick Richards, Miss Bache's sister, it was said at the Frohman offices.

That the marriage was impending was rumored as long ago as last December when the producer sailed to Paris with his wife, the former Mrs. J. W. Allen. It was said at the time that they were to obtain a divorce. They met in Paris in 1914.

Mrs. Richards could not be reached here yesterday, but a statement from the Frohman office named July 16 as the date of the marriage. It is to take place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Schefftel Bache, at 33 Avenue Marceau, Paris, it was said.

Miss Bache spent part of last Winter in New York and was with her father for an extended stay at his place on Barton Avenue, Palm Beach. Mr. Bache has recently been on a yachting trip along the Dalmatian Coast. Her mother, who has recently been making her home in Paris, was presented with the French Legion of Honor for her efforts in behalf of the wounded in the war.

Mr. Miller is 43 years old and a native of New York. His father was the late Henry Miller, famed as an actor-manager. His education was in New York, Paris and Dresden, after which, in 1906, he appeared for the first time as an actor. His career as manager began ten years later in London, and in 1921 he assumed his present position with the Frohman company.

During the World War Mr. Miller served with the Intelligence Division, being fitted for this by his linguistic accomplishments and his knowledge of Europe. Last February Mr. Miller was made a chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France for his "services to French art."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Buoyant as Money Rates Show Greater Ease—Cotton Quotations Advance.

Buoyancy in stocks, steadiness in bonds and a vigorous upturn in cotton were the outstanding features of the first market day of the week. On the Stock Exchange trading got off to a good start under the impetus of the good news of an increase in unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation at a time when a reduction of upward of 150,000 tons had been anticipated. This increase in unfilled tonnage was probably magnified because of the fact that it was mainly due to restricted operations in the industry. Nevertheless, it gave the market considerable cheer and was referred to in the financial district as marking the "turning of the corner" in this important basic industry. It was not alone the steel stocks, however, which joined vigorously in the advance. Many of the motor issues, the sugar stocks and a long list of specialty shares forged into new high ground, the entire market gaining a little more than a point on the average.

Back of the better tone in stocks, and probably the main factor in imparting cheerfulness, was the ease of money, a condition which is now getting into quotations for money. Time funds for the near-by periods eased to 4¾ per cent yesterday, within a bare fraction of the lowest point of the year. Call funds, too, were in ample supply and it was probably the realization that this ease of the market is likely to continue for at least a month or so which was the strongest influence in pulling the stocks out of the doldrums. Further proof that the mid-year strain in the money market has entirely passed was the showing of a substantial surplus in reserve in the Clearing House statement after five successive weeks in which these reserves have been under requirements.

The bond market met its test yesterday in excellent fashion and on the whole the dissolution of several bond syndicates, which have been only partially successful in their distribution of securities, has had a wholesome effect. Two offerings of foreign securities, aggregating $34,000,000, were made yesterday and the fact that both were fully subscribed and that the bonds went to a slight premium before the day was over was hailed as an indication that investment demand is once more pressing. Seasoned bonds of the better classes were steadily bought all day.

The agricultural situation, indicated first in the cotton market in response to Saturday's acreage figures, and the report on various crops issued last night by the Department of Agriculture, threw considerable light on the out-turn to be anticipated this Fall. Evidently, the reduction in acreage, as forecast by the department, had not been fully discounted. At the day's best prices, the near-by months were up 67 points or about $3.35 a bale from the low level of Saturday morning, while spot cotton advanced 35 points. All future positions are now above the 17-cent mark, those for January and March, in fact, being in the 18-cent area. The estimate of the Department of Agriculture on the position of growing crops was rather gloomy in tone, particularly in so far as corn is concerned. The present outlook, according to this estimate, is for the shortest crop of this commodity in twenty-six years, with an indicated production of some 370,000,000 bushels less than last year. The July 1 estimates sometimes go far astray from the figures of the final out-turn. Nevertheless, they are an indication that "bumper" crops are not to be anticipated this year. Possibly some compensation will be found in a stiffening in price levels of these commodities after their long decline.

DODGE BROS. REPORT QUARTER'S EARNINGS

$4,939,074 Against $2,765,103 in First Three Months and $9,810,875 Year Ago.

Net income of Dodge Brothers, Inc., in the second quarter of this year after depreciation, was $4,939,074, as compared with $2,765,103 in the first quarter, and $9,810,875 in the second quarter of 1926. The company earned $7,704,178 net in the first six months of this year.

Net income carried to surplus from second-quarter operations this year was $3,475,622, against $1,545,348 in the first quarter. The amount carried to surplus from the six months' operations was $5,020,971.

After all charges and provision for preferred dividends, the balance available for both classes of common stock out of the second quarter's earnings was equivalent to 82 cents a share, as compared with 2 cents a share in the first quarter of this year, and $2.63 a share in the second quarter of 1926.

The company sold 107,115 cars and trucks in the first half-year, the net dollar sales amounting to $87,516,173. The Graham Brothers division, which now produces and sells all trucks, buses and commercial vehicles of the Dodge organization, sold 29,677 vehicles in the first six months.

As of June 30, 1927, cash in banks and readily marketable securities amounted to $25,285,264, accounts receivable were $9,684,463, inventories were $16,493,489 and total quick assets $51,463,216. Total current liabilities, consisting of accounts payable, dealer deposits, accruals of Federal income taxes, accrued interest on debentures and accrued dividends on preference stock, amounted to $21,699,596.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

With trading interest on the Stock Exchange suddenly revived in the so-called pivotal stocks to the neglect of some of those which held the spotlight in last week's operations, yesterday's market took on considerable animation and encouraged a series of speculative manoeuvres that entirely overcame the lethargic spirit under which Wall Street has been held for some days. There was a spectacular run-up in Atlantic Coast Line and one of quite impressive proportions in Union Carbide, the former closing with a net gain of 7¼ points and the latter with 4¾. Baldwin Locomotive resumed its advance in lively fashion, closing 2½ points above Saturday's close. Bethlehem Steel emerged as one of the new focal points, disclosing a gain of 2⅝ points after an active trading day. Norfolk & Western, United States Steel, Kansas City Southern, Commercial Solvents B, International Harvester, South Porto Rico Sugar and a few other issues advanced briskly on the appearance of fresh buying interest. The Wall Street community appeared to be heartened by the statement of unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, showing a slight increase when a decline of large size had been expected. It was this development, more than anything else, according to stock market comment, which brought about yesterday's operations for the rise.

Steel Earnings Awaited.

Reports of the earnings of steel companies in the second quarter of the year will begin to appear within ten days, and Wall Street will watch for them with more curiosity than has been shown in two or three years. The belief was expressed in brokerage circles yesterday that the statements will be more favorable than has been indicated by estimates. Perhaps the wish fathered the thought, but the rather sharp advance in Bethlehem Steel reflected the view, following the unexpected upset in United States Steel tonnage calculations last week, that business with the steel producers has not been so bad after all.

Railroad Traffic Predictions.

Recent reports by shippers' organizations that their freight car requirements for the remainder of 1927 will be greater than in the like period of last year by from 5 to 30 per cent. is taken as an indication of the results of railroad operation for the coming months. Coupling these estimates of freight car needs with the stated opinions of many railroad men that earnings for the rest of the year will show a definite upswing from the conditions of the first six months, it may be judged that the railroad fraternity is expecting a vigorous come-back which will bring earnings in 1927 to at least a level comparable with those of last year. With the publication almost daily of extremely optimistic reports on the crop situation in the western territory, plus the knowledge of big business that will result from the rehabilitation of the flooded areas, the chances for railroad prosperity seem bright.

Bargain-Hunting in Bonds.

Investors' interest in new bond issues is now more active than at any time in weeks, according to executives of underwriting houses. This is the result of the recent dissolution of many syndicates and the readjustment in the prices of issues which had been pegged, producing a more normal range of prices. From now on, there is expected to be a series of issues attractively priced, as it is this class which investors are singling out for purchase at present. There are likely to be few high-priced 5s offered in the near future, but a ready market apparently awaits bonds with higher coupon rates, priced at advantageous levels. The market continues largely selective, with the bargain-hunting instinct in evidence, but there are plenty of funds available for bonds which strike the investors' fancy.

Gold Transactions Abroad.

For the first time in months, New York is not directly concerned in the more important international transactions that are taking place in gold. The latest movement to be recorded is the purchase of the metal in London by both the Bank of Austria and the Bank of Hungary. The Bank of England is complacent toward these open market purchases, since the metal probably would come to New York if it were not for the Central European purchases. Both the French purchases in London and the operations which several months ago sent large quantities of gold from Europe to the United States have ceased. New York's principal transactions in gold, both imports and exports, now are with Latin America.

Ford of Canada Looks Up.

A rather excited market in Ford Motor of Canada on the New York Curb Exchange yesterday brought a variety of explanatory comments in stock market circles. Touching 535, a new high price for the year, the stock showed more life than it has in many weeks. Illustrative of the buying interest, one broker reported that an offer to sell ten shares at 510 was immediately snapped up at 511. "The specialist must have had a sudden flash of generosity," he commented, immediately adding that perhaps there was no philanthropy in the transaction after all. The total turnover in the stock was 450 shares, which is big trading for that issue. Wall Street assumed that the new production plans of the Ford Motor Company were responsible for the accelerated demand for the shares of Ford of Canada.

Merger Rails Lead Market.

Reports in the financial district that the extreme activity of the southwestern merger rails, which resulted in a sharp advance for Kansas City Southern, was due to the nearness of publication of the revamped plan were spiked when it was stated on behalf of the company that there had been no committee reports made and no meetings of the boards of the roads involved called. Soon after the market became aware of the buying in these issues, the activity spread to other rails, and Atlantic Coast Line shot up 7¼ points in a comparatively short time. Due to the poor earnings showing made by the road for the first six months of this year, observers were content to ascribe this stock's move to professional operations for the rise, rather than to any railroad development. Other rail shares benefiting by the day's activity were Santa Fe, Rock Island, Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie, Delaware & Hudson, Reading and Peoria & Eastern.

Time Money at 4½ Per Cent.

While call money ruled easy at 4 per cent. yesterday, the real feature of the money market was the establishment of a rate of 4½ per cent. for sixty-day loans, the lowest charge in several months for this type of accommodation. Over-the-year money still commanded a rate of 4½ per cent. The easier range of the nearer maturities in the time money market indicated a belief that the agricultural requirements in the next month or two will not be so heavy as had been expected. In the call money market yesterday there was an abundant supply of funds and only a nominal demand, as a result of which outside loans were made at 3½ per cent.

MONEY.

MONDAY, JULY 11, 1927.

The feature of the money market was the slightly easier tone for maturity funds, 60-day loans being made in fair volume at 4¾ per cent., with some trades at 4⅝. Ninety days was done at 4½, with over-the-year accommodation at 4¾ per cent. Business was in moderate volume. Stock Exchange call money held all day at 4 per cent., and the street trades at 3½ per cent. Upward of $15,000,000 was withdrawn. Bankers' acceptances and commercial paper were unchanged in discount.

Outstanding 109,000 shares represented by capital and surplus		$1,786,728

Mr. Alfred Fox, President of the Corporation, has summarized his letter as follows:

Business and History: National Manufacture and Stores Corporation is being formed to acquire Fox Manufacturing Company and eighteen retail furniture stores. The business of Fox Manufacturing Company was started by the present owners in 1907 and has never failed to make a profit in any year. It manufactures medium priced living room, bed room and wicker furniture, has three factories in Atlanta and is now the largest and oldest manufacturer of upholstered furniture in the South.

The eighteen retail stores are located in the large cities of the South from North Carolina to Texas. With one exception they have all been established from ten to forty-nine years and are among the leading furniture stores in their respective cities.

Acquisition: The owners of Fox Manufacturing Company are accepting part of the Common Stock of the National Manufacture and Stores Corporation in full payment for 100% of the stock of their Company.

Assets: First Preferred Stock will have net tangible assets of over $250 per share of which net current assets will amount to $236 per share. Current assets show a ratio of over 13 to 1.

Earnings: Messrs. Haskins & Sells certify that the summary of the Consolidated Sales and Earnings by years for the three years ended December 31, 1926, adjusted to give effect to the new capital structure and to the operation of the new corporation, are as follows:

Year	Net Sales	Earnings Available for Dividend 1st Preferred Stock	Times 1st Pfd. Dividend Earned	Earnings for Common Stock	Earned per Share 199,000 Shares Common Stock

Convertibility: First Preferred Stock will be convertible into Common Stock at any time at the option of the holder on the basis of three shares of Common for one share of First Preferred.

Consolidation: The ownership of the retail stores should assure to the manufacturing end a substantial increase in business. This can be accomplished without adding to manufacturing facilities and should substantially increase profits.

Earnings from the retail stores should be materially increased through centralized buying, smaller inventories, increased turn over and greater efficiency due to expert executive supervision.

Purpose of Issue: Proceeds of this issue and the proceeds of the sale of 46,000 shares of Common Stock, together with the Class "A" Cumulative Stock, will be used in the acquisition of the eighteen retail stores.

Restrictions: The First Preferred Stock is protected by restrictions against the issuance of prior securities and as to maintaining net quick and tangible assets as set forth in the Certificate of Incorporation.

If by reason of some unforeseen contingency it should prove impossible to acquire not exceeding three of the 18 stores, the corporation agrees to substitute three other stores satisfactory to the Bankers within six months, or to retire a corresponding amount of Convertible Preferred Stock.

We offer this stock when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the approval of Messrs. Herrick, Smith, Donald and Farley of Boston, counsel for the Bankers and Messrs. Candler, Thomson and Hirsch of Atlanta, and Jerome Michael of New York City, counsel for the Corporation.

Examine Your Own Investment Needs

Such a plan should be based on an analysis of your own requirements. It should take into consideration the amount of your investment fund and the question of re-investment of income. The possibility of sudden demands upon your resources should be provided for. Attention should then be directed to such questions as to the degrees of safety, marketability, yield and taxability that are suited to your financial status and prospects.

For many years we have been assisting investors in preparing a systematic plan. On this or any other investment question, we shall be glad to consult with you.

GOODYEAR TO VOTE ON NEW STOCK ISSUE

FIRST UNDER NEW OHIO LAW

Kentuckian Threatens to Test Constitutionality in Federal Court—New Officers Elected for 3 Years.

AKRON, Ohio, July 11 (AP).—Stockholders of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company will vote tomorrow on a plan to establish a new preferred stock of no-par value, to be offered for exchange to holders of existing preferred stock on a basis of one and a quarter of the new shares for one of the old.

Stockholders' sessions of the adjourned annual meeting today moved smoothly along, with all proposed resolutions being adopted, and it is believed the resolution creating the new preferred stock also will carry. There will be at least one dissenting voice, however.

Colonel A. J. Apperson of Kentucky, a preferred stockholder, is threatening suit in Federal court. He demanded at today's session to know in what position the preferred stockholder refusing to make the exchange would be.

The new preferred stock is to have priority over the existing preferred, and stockholders making the exchange relinquish their claim to accumulated dividends to the extent of $28 per share.

Colonel Apperson was told that if he refused to make the exchange he might receive his back dividends sometime, but that it would depend on company earnings. Current dividends of the new preferred would always take precedence over the present preferred, he was told.

"You can't take my dividends away from me," Colonel Apperson declared. "It's unlawful." He was told that the State Legislature had passed legislation making it possible to issue new stock having priority over existing stock.

"It's unconstitutional," he replied, "and the Federal Court will never uphold it. If you ever pay dividends on this new stock without paying dividends on the old you will have a lawsuit on your hands, I'll bring suit in Federal Court."

The stock, if issued, would be the first no-par preferred stock to be issued in the State. Goodyear is the first company to take advantage of the recent change in Ohio laws which permits of such an issue. The law became effective June 8. Directors will determine acceptance by what percentage of stockholders is necessary before the issue is made.

The stockholders during the morning session voted affirmatively on the resolution to increase the Board of Directors from fifteen to seventeen members and setting their term of office at three years instead of one. The President's term of office also was increased to three years.

Eight of the seventeen of the new directors supposedly represent the banking interests, five the stockholders and four are supposedly neutral.

The issuance of $80,000,000 principal amount of first mortgage and collateral trust 5 per cent. new bonds was authorized by the new Board of Directors.

Akron—P. W. Litchfield, Henry B. Manton, Russell L. Robinson and Francis Seiberling.

Cleveland—Dr. Robert H. Bishop Jr., Fayette Brown, George B. Durrell, E. B. Greene, J. Arthur House, John Sherwin, Samuel L. Smith and Gam A. Tomlinson.

Chicago—Robert C. Schaffner.

P. W. Litchfield was re-elected President. The following Executive Committee of seven was named: E. B. Green, G. A. Tomlinson, S. L. Smith, John Sherwin, P. W. Litchfield, Francis Seiberling and W. B. Mahoney.

More than 70 per cent. of all classes of stockholders were represented either in person or by proxy at the meeting of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company stockholders here today.

Stockholders will be asked to ratify changes in the capital structure agreed on in the settlement of recent litigation, including the refunding of 8 per cent. first mortgage bonds, debenture bonus and prior preference stock and the sale to Dillon, Read & Co. of $60,000,000 principal amount of first mortgage collateral trust bonds at 5 per cent.

Outstanding senior securities are to be retired out of the proceeds of the new bonds and cash from the company's treasury. Replacing of the 8 per cent. bonds with 5 per cent. securities will save the company upward of $1,100,000 a year in interest charges alone.

Retirement of the senior securities will result in the retirement of management stock and with the issuance of the new bonds and the reconstruction of the Board of Directors all existing voting trusts will be terminated.

COLUMBIA GAS REFUNDING.

Application of the proceeds of a recent issue of $40,000,000 of twenty-five year 5 per cent. gold debentures to the retirement of underlying issues was largely completed by the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation on July 1 by redemption of four more of these issues, it was announced yesterday by Philip G. Gossler, President. Three minor subsidiaries are in dissolution and similar steps to simplify operating conditions are contemplated.

Gross earnings of the corporation in the year to May 31 were $95,554,750. Net earnings and other income were $33,171,998 after expenses, taxes and reserves, and net income was $23,978,068 after interest and prior dividends, annual dividend requirements on 922,581 shares of 6 per cent. preferred stock issued May 31 being $5,535,486. INDIANA UTILITIES' MERGER APPROVED

STATE'S CONSENT AWAITED

New Corporation to Be Known as Indiana Electric—Will Have $30,967,000 Capital Stock.

All committees of security holders have approved the plan for consolidating the Central Indiana Power Company and subsidiaries and the Terre Haute, Indianapolis & Eastern Traction Company and certain of its subsidiaries, according to advises from Chicago yesterday. The new company will be called the Indiana Electric Corporation, which is the name of an operating subsidiary of the Central Indiana Power Company, which latter is the chief subsidiary of the American Public Utilities Company, an Insull organization.

As a preliminary to consolidation, Central Indiana Power will acquire all assets of five of its subsidiaries, canceling all their obligations not publicly held and assuming those publicly held to the amount of $2,015,350 as underlying divisional bonds.

The plan is subject to approval by the Indiana Public Service Commission.

The consolidated company will have $28,068,000 of funded debt and $30,967,000 par value of capital stock outstanding. These figures include $7,165,000 of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, to be exchangeable for common stock at a rate to be determined later, which will be sold to provide cash for the retirement of securities and for other purposes. The figures, however, do not include $6,000,000 of first mortgage and refunding 5 per cent. bonds to be sold later.

Gross earnings of the consolidated company in the first full year of operation are estimated at $11,169,439, against $10,497,762 earned by the constituent companies in 1926. There will be an estimated balance of $999,262 available for retirement, reserve, Federal taxes and surplus.

Practicaly all funds from the sale of the Merchants Light and Heat Company to the Indianapolis Power and Light Corporation were applied to debt reduction by Central Indiana Power. Figures used in the plan are as of Oct. 31, 1926, adjusted to give effect to the sale of Merchants Light.

On completion of the consolidation, Indiana Electric will have outstanding $27,634,600 of secured funded debt, $433,615 of unsecured notes, $8,792,000 of cumulative prior preferred 7 per cent. stock, $7,165,000 of cumulative preferred stock and $15,000,000 of common stock.

It is estimated that the budgets for operating companies controlled in 1927 total around $34,000,000, of which $21,000,000 is for additions and improvements, $10,248,446 for current liabilities to be retired soon and $2,307,755 for other capital expenditures. 6% JULY INVESTMENTS

However, one may obtain a good interest rate with safety by selecting from our current July offerings of sound investment bonds.

They will give you as high as 5½–6%, with ample underlying security and earning power, and every opportunity for wide diversification. An investigation will amply repay the careful July investor.

Convertible Bond Opportunity

Trading in bonds on the New York Stock Exchange totaled less than $10,000,000 yesterday, but the bulk of the transactions was at prices fractionally higher than the levels of last week. Easy money rates and the good reception given to new offerings announced over the week-end created favorable sentiment, but the market continued largely a bargain-hunting affair, with investors concentrating their buying largely on issues that appeared to be selling out of line with the general market.

The new $30,000,000 issue of 6s of the Central Bank of Agriculture of Germany, which was offered at 95, not only was promptly oversubscribed but immediately sold at 95¼ in the listed market, indicating a healthy investment demand for new issues yielding a favorable return. The general market for foreign bonds, however, merely held steady. French 7s were active, with little change in prices, while small advances were scored in Belgian 7s and 6s. Italian bonds also were steady. Slight declines were recorded in some of the South American issues.

Fractionally higher prices were paid for bonds in many parts of the domestic list, including International Telephone and Telegraph 5½s, Inspiration Copper 6½s, United States Rubber 5s, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit 6s, Chesapeake Corporation 5s, Canadian Pacific 4s and many other railroad and industrial issues. Goodyear 5s of 1957, which fluctuated widely last week as a result of the operations of shorts, sold at a new low point of 92, but closed at 92½, a net decline of ⅜ of a point for the day. Sales of these bonds were made again for cash in settling short contracts, commanding a premium of as much as a point over the regular market quotation.

United States Government securities were dull and slightly lower.

WESTERN UNION MAY NET UP

Figures for First Five Months Are Also Higher Than in 1926.

The Western Union Telegraph Company reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission gross earnings of $11,106,071 in May, against $11,037,473 in May, 1926, and net operating income of $1,303,234, against $1,167,158. Gross in the five months to May 31 was $534,438,030 and net operating income was $6,034,663, against $5,877,683 in the same period last year.

The Southern Cities Utilities Company and subsidiaries report gross earnings of $2,867,983 in the year to April 30, against $2,769,538 in the preceding like period. Profit after interest but before depreciation and taxes was $394,871 in the 1927 period.

ALPINE MONTAN REPORTS.

First Half-Year Figures Show Orders and Shipments Higher.

Orders received during the period were 202,100 tons of coal, against 180,500 in the first half of 1926; 58,800 tons of pig iron, against 31,500 tons, and 179,600 tons of steel ingots, against 154,400 tons. Shipments of coal to customers other than subsidiaries were 217,900 tons, against 200,700 tons; of pig iron, 64,000 tons, against 38,300 tons, and of rolled iron, 130,800 tons against 128,600 tons.

Total outgoing invoices were $6,395,000, against $6,529,000 in six months of 1926. At the close of June, 1927, there were 6,117 miners and 5,682 mill hands at work in the company's various plants, or 11,799 men.

REVIEWS ENGLISH FINANCES

British Writer Says England Pays for Restoring Gold Standard.

England now is suffering from her heroic effort of restoring the sterling pound to its gold standard value, says George Lambert, a privy councilor of Great Britain. While a stable value is essential, he adds, economists and financiers question whether deflation should have been so rapid.

In an article on business conditions in Great Britain appearing in the July issue of the Bank of America Review, Mr. Lambert writes that the worst repercussion of the deflation was in the coal industry. Prices being lower, costs of production had to come down; the export trade was completely dislocated, unemployment grew and budgetary estimates went astray.

"It is clear that to maintain London as a stable centre for international commerce and banking," Mr. Lambert says, "England is making great sacrifices. The direct effort today is harsh, but although bearing a load of taxation unparalleled in the history of the civilized world, the English people face the future confident that British grit will win in the end."

Safeway's Sales Increased.

Sales of the Safeway Stores, Inc., of Maryland, for June amounted to $6,649,186, against $4,788,286 in June, 1926, an increase of $1,860,900, or 38.8 per cent., and against $6,109,775 in May, 1927. For the first half of 1927 sales were $34,949,281, against $25,836,831 in the first half of 1926, an increase of $9,105,450, or 35.2 per cent.

The business of The LeMur Company was established January 1, 1925, to engage in the distribution of the LeMur Machine for the permanent waving of hair. Sales to May 1st of this year have been 5,610 machines for a volume of business of $705,984. The business of furnishing these machines with the necessary supplies for operation has amounted to an additional $420,271. It has been found that the average requirement of supplies per machine is approximately $100 per annum, suggesting a volume of over $500,000 from this source alone during the next twelve months.

The paid-in capital of the business January 1, 1925, was $5,175. During 1925 there was paid in an additional $20,605. The results for 1925 were a volume of business of $207,115 and an operating profit of $1,856, after charging off organization and development expenses. During 1926 the volume of business increased to $722,000, which was done at a net operating profit of $132,060, as audited by Certified Public Accountants. The volume for the first four months of 1927 was $292,055, against $227,339 in the same period of 1926. It is believed that this percentage of gain will be held throughout the year inasmuch as the company now has over 5,610 machines installed and using supplies, as against 2,841 at this date last year.

The net earnings after taxes for 1926 were $114,310, equal to seven times the dividend requirements of the Preferred Stock The Company's audited balance sheet of December 31, 1926, adjusted to show the effect of the present financing, shows Net Worth of $296,354 of which Net Current Assets amounted to $285,701.

OWNED BY GAS COMPANY

Either the Baltimore & Ohio or the Pennsylvania Railroad may make an important addition to the capacity of its lines between Baltimore and Washington by the purchase of a high-speed electric system operating between those cities and known as the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railroad, according to opinion expressed in railroad circles yesterday. Although officials of each trunk line say no formal offer of the electric line has been made to them, it is the opinion of railroad men that either of them would be glad to acquire the right-of-way belonging to the electric line. A branch to Annapolis would go with the electric property, and neither the B. & O. nor the Pennsylvania has a line to that city at present.

Control of the W., B. & A. recently was acquired by the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore through the acquisition of 32,429 shares of common and 19,148 shares of preferred stock of the electric line. These holdings are to be vested with an organization known as the Baltimore Corporation of Maryland, according to a petition now before the Maryland Public Service Commission. Utility men believe, however, that Consolidated Gas of Baltimore is not desirous of entering the rapid transit business and that it bought the W., B. & A. to acquire the Annapolis and Chesapeake Bay Power Company, a subsidiary of the electric railroad. If a suitable offer were made by one of the steam trunk lines, they think, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore would dispose of the electric line.

The W., B. & A.'s line from Baltimore to Washington, and the branch to Annapolis are entirely on private right of way except in cities, where franchises extend to 1956. The company also owns a railroad line, formerly known as the Annapolis Short Line. Its total trackage is 133 miles, all but about three miles on private right of way. It also owns large freight and passenger terminals in central districts of Baltimore and passenger, freight and express terminals in Washington and Annapolis.

As the line of the W., B. & A. parallels the B. & O. from Washington to Baltimore, it is thought in some quarters that the electric line will finally come into the hands of the B. & O. However, in view of the rivalry between the Pennsylvania and the B. & O., it is not thought probable that the Pennsylvania would permit this development to go unopposed. For that reason it is thought the two trunk lines might bid against each other for the road.

The W., B. & A. took its present title in 1911, when the properties and franchises of a road of a similar name were sold under foreclosure. Its operations resulted in a profit last year after two years of deficits.

FREIGHT INCREASE REFUSED

Commerce Commission Rejects Plea of New England Roads.

WASHINGTON, July 11 (AP).—The Interstate Commerce Commission refused today to increase substantially the proportionate amount of joint rates going to New England railroads on traffic handled in conjunction with railroads in other parts of the country.

New England lines sought an increase which would have given them about $5,000,000 a year in additional earnings. No increase in rates to shippers was sought.

The commission authorized some changes, but declared that "the trend in New England railroad earnings since 1922 has been more favorable than in the remainder of the Eastern groups. The record affords no basis for giving greater weight to the financial needs of the New England lines."

At the same time some slight changes in the joint rate division on merchandise traffic were allowed, and the New England roads were given an additional proportion of the rates on anthracite coal.

In the joint rates on bituminous coal, the decision said that the Boston & Maine, Maine Central and Central Vermont should not receive any additional portion of the joint rates. The New Haven road, however, was given a slight increase in its divisions of joint bituminous coal rates except for such coal business as it handled in conjunction with the New York Central, upon which no increase was authorized.

The railroads were instructed to make the detailed changes effective Sept. 1.

Resolution Approves Plan for Erie and Pere Marquette.

A resolution has been adopted and sent to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Virginia Port Authority in which the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway's plan to acquire stock control of the Erie and the Pere Marquette railroads is approved. This information came to the financial district yesterday in dispatches from Richmond, Va., in which the announcement of the resolution is credited to J. G. Bohannon of Petersburg, Va., Chairman of the Virginia Port Authority.

Mr. Bohannon declared, according to the dispatches, that the sole reason the Virginia Port Authority favored the merger was that the superior advantage of Hampton Roads would attract to that port a considerable portion of the traffic which is now moving to other ports over the Erie and Pere Marquette roads.

I. C. C. Authorizes Erie Issue.

The Erie Railroad has been authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to issue $6,432,900 of equipment trust certificates and to sell them at not less than 96.68 per cent. of par. Proceeds of this issue will be employed in the acquisition of certain equipment as specified in the budget of the Erie for 1927.

ATTACK ST. PAUL PLAN AT I. C. C. HEARING

Counsel for Opposition Draw From Witness Statement That Dividends May Be Remote.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The plan under which the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway was reorganized, together with the formation of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Company to take over the properties of the first named road, thus terminating its receivership, was attacked at today's hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the questions of counsel representing opponents of the plan.

All classes of security holders have been treated equitably under the reorganization plan, and stocks of the new company which may be issued to effect the conversion of $182,873,693 in adjustment mortgage bonds are virtually certain to show substantial earnings after a period of years, according to W. W. Colpitts, consulting engineer, of New York, the only witness today.

Mr. Colpitts, who was subjected to a searching cross-examination by Colonel Henry W. Anderson, counsel for the Jameson Bond-Holding Defense Committee, gave it as his opinion that the Puget Sound extension, as well as the Terre Haute and Gary road, subsidiaries of the St. Paul, were valuable additions to the system. He said, however, that the St. Paul, which formerly paid 7 per cent. on its common stock, had ceased paying dividends after the road built the Puget Sound extension to give it access over its own rails to the coast.

The witness testified that it would probably be six or seven years before the reorganized system would be able to pay dividends on its preferred stock, and possibly a dozen years would elapse before the road would be in a position to pay dividends on its common stock.

WHEELING & LAKE ERIE STOCKHOLDERS LISTED

Other Railroads Are Principal Owners—Floating Supply of Stock 50,000 Shares.

The New York Central, the Baltimore & Ohio and the New York, Chicago & St. Louis railroads own or control 167,910 shares of the 336,413 shares of common stock of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad. F. E. Taplin owns or controls through the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railway 69,300 shares, and it is supposed that he controls an additional 15,000 shares. It is believed that Clarence K. Reynolds and Richard S. Reynolds of Louisville, Ky., have between 30,000 and 40,000 shares of common and preferred between them.

Considering other private holdings, it is estimated that the floating supply of common stock is less than 50,000 shares. The stock has been inactive since the advance in its price in January and February of this year, due to the small floating supply.

At the close of 1926, before the trunk lines and Mr. Taplin began buying stock, 1,558 stockholders held an average of 358 shares each of the prior lien preferred and common. The twenty largest holders at that time had 255,888 shares of all classes of stock, or 45.8 per cent. of the total, and 105,218, or 31.2 per cent., of the outstanding common stock. They and their holdings were:

UNION CONVICTS OFFICERS.

Locomotive Engineers Find Three Guilty of "Carelessness."

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 11 (AP).—Harry P. Daugherty, Second Vice President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, was found guilty today of "carelessness, laxity and indifference" in the conduct of his office by the Triennial Convention of the Brotherhood. Mr. Daugherty is the third official of the Brotherhood to be found guilty of similar charges, C. E. Lindquist, Secretary-Treasurer and L. G. Griffing, First Vice President, being the others.

No penalties for the men have been determined by the convention. Similar charges are to be heard against W. B. Prenter, President of the Brotherhood, but owing to his serious illness the date for his hearing has not been determined.

The Board of Trustees who are to administer the organization's financial affairs organized today by electing S. H. Huff, Roanoke, Va., Chairman, and W. G. Van Pelt, Pittsburg, Kans., Secretary, J. C. McDermand of Great Falls, Mont. is the other Trustee.

Secretary Van Pelt announced today the Brotherhood will continue the development of its Venice (Fla.), project. A retrenchment policy will be pursued for the present, but, he said, this Fall the Brotherhood expected to put "several million dollars" into further development of the project.

T. J. Nisetts, Chicago, elected First Assistant Grand Chief Engineer today, will be placed in charge of the insurance department of the Brotherhod, it was announced.

CHICAGO & ALTON'S LOSSES.

Deficit in 1927 May Be Greater Than in 1926, Receivers Say.

CHICAGO, July 11 (AP).—The Chicago & Alton Railroad Company suffered a deficit of $540,041.21 in its net income for 1926, as compared with a surplus of $41,283.37 in the previous year, and 1927 promises to produce a still greater loss, says the annual report of the receivers as of Dec. 31, 1926, made public today.

"It is now recognized that there is a general decline in all branches of business, while not severe, nevertheless is quite pronounced, said the report, which, however, attributed the chief loss of business to the stoppage of coal mining. The report referred to a steady decrease in both local and short haul tonnage and passengers carried. The normal annual increase in agricultural business was expected, said the report, although farming was remarked upon as "seriously disturbed at this time."

Time deposits declined $11,000,000; declines of $16,000,000 and $6,000,000 in San Francisco and New York districts, respectively, being partly offset by increases of $9,000,000 and $5,000,000 in the Boston and Chicago districts, respectively.

Borrowings from the Federal Banks increased $36,000,000, reductions of $17,000,000 and $9,000,000 in the Boston and Philadelphia districts partly offsetting an increase of $45,000,000 in the New York district and smaller increases in other districts.

Percy Jay Fuller, head of the United States Power Syndicate, at 522 Fifth Avenue, was temporarily enjoined yesterday by Supreme Court Justice John McCrate, in Brooklyn, from further sales of "participation certificates" of the power syndicate, and from sales of stocks or bonds of any character.

Deputy Attorney General Ralph P. Koenig charged in an affidavit that Fuller had obtained about $750,000 through "fraudulent practices" which included "investments" for numbers of elderly women.

Justice McCrate ordered Fuller to show cause on July 18 why the injunction should not continue pending further action by the State Attorney General and why a receiver should not be appointed for the property derived by him through the alleged frauds, "together with any and all books of account and papers relating to the same."

Fuller's name has appeared in the public prints on numerous occasions as heading some new enterprise. In 1923 he was said to have promised Germans in America 100 per cent. if the French franc fell from 5½ to 3 cents. In 1924, heads of the Lutheran Church denounced Fuller's alleged attempt to enlist the aid of the Luthern clergy in effort to lower the value of the franc by selling short to "bring France to her knees."

On June 7, last, Fuller was temporarily enjoined by Supreme Court Justice Scudder, in Brooklyn, from further sales of "participation certificates" in the same power syndicate that figured in Justice McCrate's injunction yesterday. At that time it was charged that he had claimed to be able to manufacture gasoline, which would sell at 4 cents a gallon, out of garbage. Fuller has referred to himself as a humanitarian, a financier and a technical adviser in financial matters.

Held for Trial in Bond Theft.

Isidore Cohen, alias Davies, of 3,695 Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, who was arrested last week in connection with the theft of $35,000 in Argentine municipal bonds from White, Weld & Co., brokers, at 14 Wall Street, pleaded not guilty yesterday before Judge Koenig in General Sessions to a charge of illegally receiving the bonds. He was remanded to the Tombs without bail, pending trial. Cohen was alleged to have posed as a messenger for the Chase National Bank last March when he signed a receipt for the bonds and got away.

Reis & Co.'s Sales Decrease.

Robert Reis & Co. report sales for the second quarter of 1927 amounting to $2,104,061, against $2,383,371 in the second quarter of 1926, a decrease of 15.0 per cent., and sales for the first half of 1927 of $4,114,189, against $4,473,309, a decrease of 8.0 per cent.

COMMUTING QUOTA FROM CANADA RAISED

Kellogg Increases Allotment for British Born in Windsor to 2,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—In an effort to relieve the situation confronting the United States and Canada as a result of the immigration order of Secretary Davis, issued in April and designed to close the American frontier to Canadian citizens who make a practice of commuting to work in Detroit and other American cities, the State Department has increased the allotment of the Windsor (Canada) consular district for British-born immigrants from 800 to 2,000 persons.

Canadian officials say this will go far toward removing the obstacles still existing to the solution of the controversy and might assure postponement of further action by the Canadian Government until Dec. 1, when the time limit prescribed in the order expires, and when, according to indications here, the Canadian Government will make a determined effort to have it extended still further.

The increased allotment is expected, in a period of eighteen months, to solve the difficulties due to commuting by this class of workers. Of the two other classes, Canadian-born citizens of Canada and non-British foreign-born citizens of Canada, the former will have no difficulty in continuing their employment on the American side if the time limit set for the application of the Davis order is extended at least another six months beyond December, according to Canadian estimates.

The non-British foreign-born naturalized citizens will have to be accounted for on the regular quota assignments of their respective countries of origin. They number not more than 700 persons.

WILL NOT FINANCE RAILWAY.

Standard Oil Not Interested in South American Project.

Reports from abroad that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey probably would supply part of the capital for the construction of a 600-mile railroad in South America, connecting the Amazon River with the Pacific Coast, were denied at the offices of the company yesterday. The reports of this projected railway construction appeared in The London Evening Standard, which said that the proposed railroad would tap a region of about 20,000 square miles, including valuable oil and mineral lands.

It was reported in the financial district that Bertram Lee, an American, possessed a concession to build such a system in Peru and that he had interested Wall Street financiers in the project. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey owns land on the Amazon in Peru.

OFFICE BOY TO DIRECTOR.

James W. Bancker, who was hired by Charles G. DuBois as his office boy thirty-five years ago, was notified yesterday by Mr. DuBois, Chairman of the Board, of his election as a director and Vice President of the Western Electric Company in charge of purchasing and traffic, to succeed the late Jay B. Odell.

In the intervening years Mr. Bancker has filled many positions, for the most part in the manufacturing department. In 1909 he was superintendent of the New York shop, and from 1911 to 1923 he was assistant general superintendent of the Hawthorne works in Chicago. Before his election yesterday he was controller of manufacture and President of the Manufacturers' Junction Railway Company.

NEW RATES FOR ROCKAWAYS

Fire Insurance Organization Notifies Beha of Changes.

The New York fire insurance rating organization has notified James A. Beha, Superintendent of Insurance, that it contemplates adopting a new system in rerating properties in the Rockaway section. This equalization will not be general, rates on some individual risks will be increased while on others they will be reduced.

Prior to 1913, soon after the enactment of the anti-discrimination laws, the rating organization adopted a so-called block rating system for the Rockaway Peninsula. Practically no changes have been made to meet the changing conditions, it is said; no increase having been made to meet increasingly congested conditions and, on the other hand, no reductions allowed for the improved fire and water department conditions and the substitution of buildings of better construction for flimsy frame buildings.

TO TREAT MANGANESE ORE.

New Corporation Leases Plant at Butte From Anaconda Company.

The Domestic Manganese and Development Company, a new corporation, has leased the plant of the old Butte Reduction Works at Butte, Montana, from the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, John H. Cole of the latter company said yesterday. The plant has been idle eighteen years. It will be put into commission as soon as possible, probably about Sept. 2, to treat manganese ore of the Emma Mine of the Butte Copper and Zinc Company and other properties which the company has under lease in the vicinity of Butte, Philipsburg and Grace, Idaho. A contract for the machinery has been let to the Allis-Chalmers Company.

Domestic Manganese and Development is a closed corporation capitalized for $250,000. It was formed by Mr. Cole and is composed of capitalists of Montana and Eastern steel men. The Board of Directors includes John H. Cole, President; H. A. Papally, Vice President; Richard G. Jones, Treasurer; Cathryn L. Cole, Secretary, and Frank T. Boyd. Mr. Cole predicts that within a year the company will supply about one-half of the manganese used in the United States.

BANKERS REFLECT OPTIMISM AT DETROIT

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., July 11.—Enthusiasm was apparent today among the nearly 2,000 delegates to the twenty-fifth annual convention of the American Institute of Banking who had arrived here for the business sessions beginning tomorrow.

There was a demonstration in the morning at the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company's dock when a crowd of delegates from the East disembarked.

Several of the visiting bankers were optimistically outspoken regarding financial conditions over the country, and the national education value of the conferences about to begin. Among them were Byron W. Moser, President of the Security National Bank of St. Louis; V. A. Lersner, President of the Bowery Savings Bank of New York, and Rudolf S. Hecht, President of the Hibernia Bank and Trust Company of New Orleans.

After a brief routine meeting of the Executive Council of the Institute, its members took airplanes instead of automobiles as their Detroit sightseeing mediums.

Stocks of Zinc Increased.

Zinc stocks at June 30 totaled 43,858 short tons, as compared with 42,046 tons at the end of May, an increase of 1,812 tons, the American Zinc Institute reports. Production in June amounted to 49,718 tons, and deliveries were 47,906 tons, of which 43,122 tons were domestic and 4,784 tons export. Metal sold but not delivered at the end of June was placed at 14,953 tons, based on 32.4 per cent. of the total June retort production.

Deputy Attorney General Ralph P. Koenig charged in an affidavit that Fuller had obtained about $750,000 through "fraudulent practices" which included "investments" for numbers of elderly women.

Justice McCrate ordered Fuller to show cause on July 18 why the injunction should not continue pending further action by the State Attorney General and why a receiver should not be appointed for the property derived by him through the alleged frauds, "together with any and all books of account and papers relating to the same."

Fuller's name has appeared in the public prints on numerous occasions as heading some new enterprise. In 1923 he was said to have promised Germans in America 100 per cent. if the French franc fell from 5½ to 3 cents. In 1924, heads of the Lutheran Church denounced Fuller's alleged attempt to enlist the aid of the Luthern clergy in effort to lower the value of the franc by selling short to "bring France to her knees."

In 1925 Fuller announced that he was about prepared to restore the Russian monarchy and enthrone Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, pretender.

On June 7, last, Fuller was temporarily enjoined by Supreme Court Justice Scudder, in Brooklyn, from further sales of "participation certificates" in the same power syndicate that figured in Justice McCrate's injunction yesterday. At that time it was charged that he had claimed to be able to manufacture gasoline, which would sell at 4 cents a gallon, out of garbage. Fuller has referred to himself as a humanitarian, a financier and a technical adviser in financial matters.

Held for Trial in Bond Theft.

Isidore Cohen, alias Davies, of 3,695 Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, who was arrested last week in connection with the theft of $35,000 in Argentine municipal bonds from White, Weld & Co., brokers, at 14 Wall Street, pleaded not guilty yesterday before Judge Koenig in General Sessions to a charge of illegally receiving the bonds. He was remanded to the Tombs without bail, pending trial. Cohen was alleged to have posed as a messenger for the Chase National Bank last March when he signed a receipt for the bonds and got away.

Reis & Co.'s Sales Decrease.

Robert Reis & Co. report sales for the second quarter of 1927 amounting to $2,104,061, against $2,383,371 in the second quarter of 1926, a decrease of 15.0 per cent., and sales for the first half of 1927 of $4,114,189, against $4,473,309, a decrease of 8.0 per cent.

MARKETS IN LONDON, PARIS AND BERLIN

British Trading Is Firm but Quiet—Paris Has Decline —Berlin Gains.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 11.—The Stock Exchange today began the week and trading on the new account with a firm tone. Business was quiet, as the market is now under the influence of the holiday season, but sentiment was cheerful.

Gilt-edged securities were slightly firmer, and, although still inactive, the market for domestic railway stocks closed with a further rally. Dunlop Rubber, Mond Nickel and motor shares all met with some inquiry.

The London rubber stocks showed another rise of 246 tons, for which the market was fully prepared, but in the absence of support, most shares in the market were heavy in tone. The commodity was quoted at 1 shilling 4⅝ pence, after being 1 shilling 4½.

Diamond Syndicate shares were dull, De Beers losing 1-16 of a point. Rand Mines was unchanged.

In Lombard Street, discount rates were firmly maintained. Money was in fair demand, and the bulk of the day's business was done at 3½ per cent., both for renewals and fresh advances.

Paris Market Is Unsettled.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 11.—The combined influences of the turbulent closing sessions of Parliament, of the rumors regarding the contemplated stabilization of the franc published abroad and of the approaching fetes of the French national holiday caused the market at the beginning of this week to become heavy and unsettled.

French rentes and the majority of domestic obligations showed a tendency to slump, while the only gains were on the part of well-known international quotations.

Rentes dropped sharply at the opening, recovering somewhat toward the close. Final figures were: Threes, 56.20; 1917 4s, 60.30; 1918 4s, 59.35; 5s, 74.75 and 86.60; 6s, 85.65.

French bank stocks remained unchanged, as did railroads and industrials for the most part.

Berlin Is Firm and Active.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 11.—The Stock Exchange opened the week firmer and fairly active. The principal stimulants were the conviction that smooth mid-yearly settlements were assured by the sufficient supply of foreign money and the good-sized buying orders from Southern Germany. A favorable influence also was exerted by the Reichsbank report.

The feature of the day's trading was again a bull movement in certain specialties, especially Glazed Textiles and Breweries and Distilleries. The former gained 20 to 27 points and the latter 13.

Bank stocks closed at an average of 1 to 3 points higher; mining, 3 to 5; heavy industries, 5 to 6; electro values, 4 to 6; chemicals, 3 to 5; paper pulp, 7 to 8. Foreign securities were quiet.

The money market was unchanged, day-to-day funds being still at 7 to 8½ per cent. The tendency in the closing hour was firm.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Spanish Pesetas Advance on London Buying—Sterling Firm, Francs and Lire Lower.

A sharp advance in Spanish pesetas stood out as the only development of any interest in the foreign exchange market yesterday. The best part of the gain was first made in London, but was improved upon by local operation to 17.17 cents, up 9 points from Saturday. Dealers said it was a purely speculative movement and that there was nothing in the day's news to account for it.

Sterling was quiet and firm at $4.85 5-32, a fractional advance, but the French franc lost as much to 3.91 5-16 cents. Italian lire dropped slightly less than 2 points to 5.43¼ cents. Scandinavians were irregular. Holland, German and Belgian were firm.

Chinese currencies were in demand, moving forward ⅛ to ¼ cent. Japanese yen lost ⅛ cent to 47.08 cents. South Americans remained steady.

The addition to the bank's gold reserve since the low point of April, 1924, when it stood at 441,815,000 gold marks, amounts now to 1,360,308,000 gold marks, or $322,392,996. The highest gold reserve since the war was 1,852,194,000 marks on March 23, 1927. When the war began the bank's gold holdings were 1,252,190,000 marks. They were increased to 2,587,780,000 gold marks on Dec. 30, 1916, the highest point in its history.

The note circulation on Dec. 31, 1926, which was 3,735,526,000 marks, was the highest reached since the war. Before the return to the gold standard the bank's circulation was stated, on Oct. 31, 1924, at 1,780,930,000,000,000 of the old marks, but the great depreciation of the paper mark at that time made the gold value of the circulation then outstanding less than the present maximum.

Two New Fields for Bond Investors offering liberal yield and strong security

THE steady progress and change that are going on in the business and industrial world must be considered by the bond investor. Observation will make clear that new fields for investment thus develop, some attaining positions of outstanding strength and stability. The automobile is a notable example in the industrial world; real estate bonds, farm loan bonds, foreign bonds, have come into wide popular favor only since the war.

Consider the motion picture industry. It is only about thirty years old, but it has grown to such giant proportions that gross receipts now approximate a billion a year. And what was at first a mere novelty has become almost a necessity in the lives of millions of patrons. The demand is active in all seasons and under widely varying conditions. It meets universally the need for recreation at a price within the reach of all.

Another instance is the publishing business. Until recently great newspapers and magazines seldom went to the public for capital. But growth in this field has been so rapid that the publishing business is now a source of a considerable volume of attractive securities. The earning power of strongly entrenched publications with great circulations and advertising revenues provides a sound basis for long-term credit.

Investors may add safety and often increase their yield by including in their holdings, bonds—whether debenture or first mortgage—of large, established concerns in the newer industries or the newer forms of financing of old industries.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. is on the alert for such investment opportunities, applying the same high standards of conservatism in their appraisal as in older fields of bond financing.

Representative issues in the motion picture and publishing fields, originated by this house, alone or with associates, are briefly described herewith. We shall be glad to send circulars fully descriptive of any of these bonds upon request.

Industrials Recede, but Resume Position on Buying Wave—Sugars Higher.

Opening strong throughout the list, over-the-counter trading developed largely into a bank and trust company market again yesterday, with Manufacturers Trust leading, followed closely by common Financial and Industrial Securities, which holds a large block of the former's capital stock. Industrials showed a tendency to recede in the morning, but at the middle of the period a wave of buying left the list in strong position at the close, with gains outnumbering recessions. Sugar stocks showed an inclination to rise and chain store issues were firm.

Among the industrials gains were made by Lehigh Portland Cement common, Woodward Iron, Bucyrus preferred, Knox Hat common and a number of prominent leaders. The chief recessions came in Celluloid common, Eastern Dairies common, Southern Baking common and preferred and Syracuse Washing Machine. Following an aggregate drop of 30,400 barrels daily, the average daily production in California amounted to 624,300 barrels for the week ended July 9, against 654,700 daily in the week ended June 11.

Seminole production declined 5,000 barrels in the twenty-four hours ended at 7 A. M. on July 9, although Earlsboro produced 1,000 barrels more and set a new high peak. Seminole proper fell 2,000 barrels, Searight 1,000 barrels and Bowlegs declined 3,000 barrels from its peak, while Little River produced slightly more than 1,000 barrels less than on its peak day, July 3. This pool consists so far of a single well.

Earnings equivalent to about $4.60 a share for the Tidal Osage Oil Company's stock are predicted for the first half of 1927 on the basis of earnings of $2,109,365 in the first quarter, and estimated earnings of $800,000 in the second quarter, as compared with $3.56 a share earned in the entire year 1926.

Most of the earnings in 1926 were made in the final quarter of the year, when the company developed large, low-cost production in the Seminole field. These earnings enabled the company to retire $1,400,000 7 per cent. bonds and $520,900 7 per cent. preferred stock, leaving no obligations ahead of the common stock.

Tide Water Rumor Discredited.

Reports that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, which recently increased its stock holdings in the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company, was preparing to absorb the Tide Water Associated Oil Company, were said yesterday by banking interests to be unfounded. There is no deal for such a merger under way at this time, it was said.

ALLERTON NET HIGHER.

CURB OPENS STRONG, CLOSES UNSETTLED

Rails and Sugar Issues Make Gains, Utilities Are Mixed, Oils Quiet and Steady.

SOME UNUSUAL MOVEMENTS

Ford of Canada on Large Turnover Advances to New High for Year, Up 35 Points.

After opening strong, lack of interest caused heaviness in the New York Curb market around noon, and although some unusual individual movements occurred in the afternoon the list closed unsettled and with a fairly weak undertone, despite good progress by a number of shares.

Ford of Canada, in an unusually large turnover for that stock, advanced to a new high for the year, gaining 35 points. American Road Machinery was active, both issues making very broad gains and closing at new highs. The rails were strong, Alabama Great Southern closing at a new high, New York Central when issued ending at its high mark, and New Orleans-Great Northern gaining 3 points.

Oils were generally very quiet and steady, Humble Oil and Prairie Pipe advancing about a point each. Utilities were mixed, American Light and Traction new and Puget Sound Power and Light preferred falling, while National Power and Light preferred advanced and Mohawk Hudson second preferred closed at a 1927 high. North Texas Electric fell 7 points to a new low for the year.

Strength was shown by Safeway Stores, Singer Manufacturing, Best & Co. and Dixon Crucible. Weakness appeared in Firestone Tire, while Goodyear advanced. Mengel closed at a new low, while Cuneo Press set a new high. Sugar issues were strong, and National Lead also gained.

COLOMBIA IN STEEL MARKET

The undertaking of the Colombian Government to spend $25,000,000 in building railroads, construction of which will be begun immediately, has brought large orders for steel rails and railroad equipment into the American markets. The project is expected to have a strengthening effect in the American steel market and also to stimulate similar projects in other Latin-American countries, creating new outlets for both American capital and manufactures.

It is expected that the new railroads will open almost unlimited sources of coal, oil and timber to the United States. Because of the lack of transportation these products now are being brought to the coast only under the greatest difficulties.

The program on which Colombia is embarking was made possible by a reorganization of her finances under the plan of the Kemmerer Commission and by the economic stability created by the present Government. It includes the construction of a $4,000,000 tunnel through the Central Cordillera range of the Andes, as a preliminary to the program for the next decade.

ACQUIRE ICE CREAM FIRMS.

Western Dairy Products Interests Get California Concerns.

Interests associated with the Western Dairy Products Company are acquiring control of several companies engaged in the manufacture and distribution of ice cream and dairy products in Southern California, including the Crescent Creamery Company of Los Angeles. A new company will be formed to take over the business and assets of the concerns being acquired, and the financing will be handled by investment houses in New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle.

The Western Dairy Products Company operates in Washington and Oregon. It is not planned to merge its properties with the California companies being acquired.

PREDICT NEW ALLOYS AS RESULT OF RESEARCH

Speakers at Chemistry Institute Sessions Tell of Progress in Knowledge of Metals.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., July 11.—Research workers seeking to develop new alloys that will increase the durability of steel and the strength of copper have been impeded in the past by their own superstitions, the Chemistry Institute of the American Chemical Society was told here today by R. J. McKay of the International Nickel Company, Chairman of the Corrosion Committee of the society.

He declared that such "superstitions" had now been left behind, however, and predicted that the next decade would see the development of more alloys useful in more different ways than have ever been produced before. Revolutionary changes in light aluminum alloys for aircraft purposes could be expected, he said, adding:

"The belief that a very small amount of something could be added to steel which would impart to it the durability of copper without affecting its strength or cost seriously, and that something could be added to copper to give it the strength and hardness of steel without reducing its durability, have seriously impeded research workers. Now, however, we can proceed with the production of alloys for specific purposes without engaging in wild chasing after impossibilities, since our knowledge of alloys has given us a basis to start."

Dr. Walter M. Mitchell of the Central Alloy Steel Corporation, in discussing further the subject of corrosion, doubted that any single alloy would ever be found "that is universally resistant to corrosives."

"But the best that can be expected is a series of different alloys, each of which has its own specific field of application," he said. "Types of alloys to meet many kinds of corrosion are already known and the reasons why they are resistant is becoming better understood."

That corrosion costs the petroleum industry $100,000,000 annually and adds nearly 1 cent a gallon to the cost of gasoline was the estimate of Dr. E. F. Speller of the National Tube Company, who told of plans for waging war on this waste. He suggested cooperative research in various industries similar to that carried on by the refrigeration industry, which reduced its losses from corrosion 80 per cent. in two years.

PARAMOUNT STOCK HIGHER.

Heavy Trading on Stock Exchange Follows Federal Ruling.

Stock of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation advanced yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange following the announcement on Saturday that the Federal Trade Commission had issued an order, the effect of which, if carried out, is expected to curtail quite seriously the activities of the enterprise.

The Trade Commission's report was not unexpected and, judging from yesterday's stock market response, had been pretty well discounted. The stock was heavily traded in and the closing quotation of 95, which also was the day's high, showed a net gain of ¾ point.

CRUDE RUBBER TRADE DULL

Crude rubber futures on the Rubber Exchange were dull yesterday, a small turnover leaving an irregular list of changes and slight gains from Saturday's final prices. Sales involved 177 contracts, with thirty-seven transferrable notices issued. Opening prices were generally the best for the day, early sales lifting the list from 10 to 30 points, but these gains were canceled before noon on easier London cables and some pressure of offerings.

London opened steady, made slight gains in all positions, but weakened near the close. Spot and July closed unchanged, and the distant positions ½d. lower. Stocks of rubber in warehouses increased 246 tons, to 64,163 tons.

MARKET TREND IS BEARISH

Much Activity Develops In Corn, With Close Higher—Oats and Rye Unchanged.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Wheat was firm early, but eased later and with heavy closing of spreads between wheat and corn, the former being sold, the finish was at about the bottom, with net losses of 1¼ to 1⅝ cents. Black-rust reports were received from the Northwest, but as no damage was claimed they attracted little attention.

Winnipeg was 1⅝ cents lower, while Buenos Aires was off ⅛ cent as compared with Friday's close. Liverpool gained ⅛ to 1¼d for the day.

Grain traders generally construed the Government report on wheat as bearish, the estimated yield of both Winter and Spring being in excess of the private returns, and since the first of the month the condition of Spring wheat has not deteriorated, according to the comment of a majority of the trade. The Canadian report, showing a total of 325,000,000 bushels for all provinces, against 410,000,000 bushels harvested last year, was regarded as bullish, but messages from Winnipeg said the estimate should not receive much consideration. The Spring wheat acreage both in this country and Canada was in excess of trade estimates and failed to show the liberal reduction generally anticipated.

Based on the Government estimate of 27,300,000 bushels old wheat on farms, plus the commercial visible and Bryant's estimate on stocks in country mills and elevators, there is a total varry-over of around 90,000,000 bushels, against 60,000,000 bushels last year, indicating a total supply for the season, including the new crop, of around 943,000,000 bushels, against 892,000,000 bushels. The suggests an exportable surplus of around 250,000,000 bushels, against actual net exports of 202,000,000 bushels in 1926-27. An increase of 4,252,000 bushels in the visible supply made the total 26,459,000 bushels, against 22,107,000 bushels the previous week and 14,163,000 bushels last year.

Primary arrivals were 2,496,000 bushels, against 3,190,000 bushels last year, while shipments were 711,000 bushels, against 1,248,000 bushels last year.

Buying of corn against sales of wheat resulted in a higher range, with the close at net gains of ⅞ to 1¼ cents. Trade in the aggregate was not large and the market was easily influenced. Government report, showing 2,274,000,000 bushels, was 12,000,000 bushels in excess of the average of the private returns, and was construed as comparatively bearish.

The visible supply decreased 34,000 bushels for the week and is 34,393,000 bushels, against 34,427,000 bushels the previous week and 28,520,000 bushels last year.

Oats finished unchanged to ¼ cent lower and rye unchanged to ⅝ cent lower, both grains being affected by the action of wheat. Export sales of rye were estimated at 100,000 to 150,000 bushels in all positions. Government report on oats and rye was construed as slightly bearish.

Wheat Futures Recede Before Offerings—Oats Barely Steady.

Wheat futures opened at about the day's high on the New York Produce Exchange yesterday in a steady market, due to light offerings and scattered buying, but offerings increased on the small rallies due to increasing visible stocks, and evening up for the Government report brought about a break of ⅞ to 1⅜ cents a bushel. The July delivery closed at 1¼ cents over September, against 2⅝ cents more on Saturday.

Oats were barely steady owing to good weather, a moderate demand but a sharp reduction in the light stocks checked the decline.

English Market Responds Fully to Gains Made Here Late Last Week.

A continuation of Saturday's buying movement was reflected by further advances of 35 to 40 points in the cotton market here yesterday. Prices for all months made new high ground for the movement, and for the season in the case of new crop deliveries, with December selling up to 17.99, while March advanced to 18.25. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the best, with the market at net advances of 31 to 41 points.

There seemed to be a feeling in some quarters at the opening that the sentimental effect of Saturday's acreage figures had been pretty well discounted. This was reflected by realizing and scattered selling on an early advance of 15 to 18 points, and after overnight buying orders had been absorbed prices reacted slightly. It looked as if trade interests were taking advantage of setbacks to fix prices, however, and the appearance of this demand seemed to increase confidence in values. Reports of showers in the Eastern belt contributed to the advance which followed, while there was Wall Street buying which was supposed to be based partly on the optimistic view of general conditions as indicated by the firmer stock market. The highest prices of the day were reached in the late trading, when the active months showed advances of about 67 points, or $3.35 per bale, from the low level of Saturday morning.

Private cables said that after advancing at the start sentiment in Liverpool seemed rather unresponsive to the bullish view of Saturday's acreage figures, but that the market had been sustained by trade buying and the English market fully responded to the local advance of late last week.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were 25 to 50 points higher, with quotations ranging from 16.50 up to 17.55. Sales for the day were 4,388 bales, against 4,627 for the same day last year.

New York, July 12, 1927.

FIVE PER CENT. CUMULATIVE PREFERRED STOCK.

You are hereby notified that a Plan and Agreement for the Readjustment of securities, consolidating the Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern Traction Company and Central Indiana Power Company with other companies into Indiana Electric Corporation, dated July 1, 1927, has been completed and presented to the undersigned Committee; that the Committee has adopted and approved the same; and that it has filed copies thereof with the Fletcher American National Bank, the Depositary, which are available for inspection by Depositors at the Depositary's office, corner Pennsylvania and Market Sts., Indianapolis, Ind.

The Plan and Agreement of Readjustment provides, subject to the approval of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, for the exchange of the preferred stock of Indianapolis and Northwestern Traction Company, share for share for the 5% Cumulative Preferred Stock of the new Indiana Central Railways Company, substantially as outlined in this Committee's previous communications to you.

Arrangements have been made to furnish a substantial amount of new money to the merged corporation and, as a result of the sale of certain property formerly belonging to the Merchants Heat and Light Company of the City of Indianapolis, it has been possible to reduce the proposed bonded indebtedness of the merged company to a lower figure than was anticipated, which should increase the amount available for the guaranteed charges.

In accordance with the terms of the Deposit Agreement, all holders of Certificates of Deposit who do not within the period of two weeks from and after the 12th day of July, 1927, exercise their right of withdrawal upon surrender of their Certificates of Deposit to the Depositary in transferable form will be conclusively deemed to have assented to said Plan and Agreement and to have become parties thereto.

In order to enable those who have not as yet deposited their Stock to become parties to said Plan and Agreement and to participate therein, the Committee has authorized the Depositary to accept such securities without penalty until the close of business on August 12th, 1927.

The Committee considers that the terms and provisions of the Plan and Agreement are favorable to your interests.

TO THE HOLDERS OF TERRE HAUTE TRACTION AND LIGHT COMPANY

SIX PER CENT. CUMULATIVE PREFERRED STOCK.

You are hereby notified that a Plan and Agreement for the Readjustment of securities, consolidating the Terre Haute Traction and Light Company, the Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern Traction Company and Central Indiana Power Company with other companies into Indiana Electric Corporation dated July 1, 1927, has been completed and presented to the undersigned Committee; that the Committee has adopted and approved the same; and that it has filed copies thereof with The J. F. Wild & Co. State Bank, the Depositary, which are available for inspection by Depositors at the Depositary's office, 123 E. Market St., Indianapolis, Ind.

The Plan and Agreement of Readjustment provides, subject to the approval of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, for the exchanges of the preferred stock of Terre Haute Traction and Light Company, share for share for the 6% Cumulative Prior Preferred Stock of the new merged company substantially as outlined in this Committee's previous communications to you.

Arrangements have been made to furnish a substantial amount of new money to the merged corporation and, as a result of the sale of certain property formerly belonging to the Merchants Heat and Light Company of the City of Indianapolis, it has been possible to reduce the proposed bonded indebtedness of the merged company to a lower figure than was anticipated.

In accordance with the terms of the Deposit Agreement, all holders of Certificates of Deposit who do not within the period of two weeks from and after the 12th day of July, 1927, exercise their right of withdrawal upon surrender of their Certificates of Deposit to the Depositary in transferable form will be conclusively deemed to have assented to said Plan and Agreement and to have become parties thereto.

In order to enable those who have not as yet deposited their stock to become parties to said Plan and Agreement and to participate therein, the Committee has authorized the Depositary to accept such securities without penalty until the close of business on August 12th, 1927.

The Committee considers that the terms and provisions of the Plan and Agreement are favorable to your interests.

YEAR'S SUCCESSFUL OPERATIONS
PROSPECTS OF GREATER PROFITS

The 15th ordinary general meeting of shareholders of the Leeuwfoort Tin Mines, Ltd., was held in the board room, Clower House, Johannesburg, June 7th, 1927. In the absence of the chairman (Mr. Bailey Southwell), Sir Julius Jeppe, Kt., C.B.E., presided.

In all 448,972 shares were represented out of a total issue of 500,000 shares.

In moving the adoption of the report and accounts, the chairman said:

As regards working revenue and expenditure account, we carried £26,129, the year's mining profit to profit and loss account. In profit and loss account income from interest, rents and sundries was approximately £1,500, while we expended on Imperial Income Tax alone £344, leaving a balance of £21,287 carried to appropriation account. In the latter we have allowed for the £20,000 distributed in dividends as well as the £750 and £300 to which I have just referred. We carry forward £3,140 to the balance sheet, this being some £187 greater than the previous year's balance.

MINING OPERATIONS

Ore reserves at 95,350 tons only reflect a small increase, whilst the grade at 1.24 per cent. shows a slight decrease. The figures show that in the last twelve years out of approximately 650,000 tons mined, 270,000 tons—or about 42%—came from sources outside of the ore reserves. The 95,350 tons referred to is considered quite satisfactory in view of our having milled 76,000 tons, an increase of 10,400 tons on the previous year's figure. The resultant concentrates were 658 tons as compared with 772 tons for

Women's Cotton Underwear

In the output of cotton underwear lines of women's and misses' garments, attention has been given to the use of materials that will not cling, according to a recent announcement of the United Underwear League of America. Slips of fancy sateens in both striped and other patterns in a wide range of colors are now being shown, with special emphasis given to "flesh" and peach shades. Rayon mohair is another fabric which has proved successful in these popular-priced garments. Buyers have accepted both the lace-trimmed and tailored garments styles.

To Sell Silks Direct.

An innovation in the merchandising of silk in this market has just been announced by Samuel Eiseman & Co., for many years a leading concern in the silk jobbing business. In the future this firm will serve as factor and selling agent for mills and will discontinue the jobbing of silks. The styling and merchandising of the silks will be taken care of by the Eiseman concern, leaving the mills to concentrate on production. The retail customers of the concern throughout the country will receive the benefit of style advisers who will keep in touch with foreign markets, as well as the merchandising counselors who will advise on selling problems. A feature of the Eiseman plan seldom used by textile concerns is that the individual name of the mills will be used in selling so that the identity of fabrics sold under a mill brand or trade name will not be lost. Sales offices in the leading cities will be continued and it is expected that others will be opened shortly.

Voile Dresses for Children.

An increased number of reorders in voile dresses for children has followed the arrival of more seasonable weather conditions, which had previously held back any marked activity in these lines, according to manufacturers of children's and juniors' apparel. This material, which is used in imported goods from both the Philippine and Porto Rican markets, has been equally successful in domestic machine-made garments at popular prices. Some in the sleeveless lace-trimmed styles with touches of hand embroidery that can be retailed at a fairly low price are in demand, and it is expected that the call for them will continue throughout the month.

Fall Broad Silk Orders Growing.

The situation in Fall broad silks continues to develop favorably. The volume of orders for the new season is increasing and the mills are slowly adding to output. Present prices of raw silk are considered attractive, and contract orders covering the next two or three months have been placed. Satin crepes are particularly well regarded and the trade is expecting the volume demand to be centred on these weaves. Black is popular in colors, with new blues and browns also important.

No Action on High Fur Prices.

The special committee of the garment industry appointed to consider the matter of high prices for fur trimmings met yesterday, but definite action on any aspect of the question was not taken, according to Henry Finder, Chairman of the committee. The situation was thoroughly discussed and the committee will meet again within the next few days. Mr. Finder said the present levels for furs were undoubtedly retarding the success of the Fall garment offerings. In other quarters it was held difficult to see what the committee could accomplish with reference to securing lower prices. Representatives of the fur trade maintain that the present peltry quotations reflect the law of supply and demand.

Broadcloth Shirts Still Lead.

White shirts continue to lead in volume turnover of retailers, with broadcloths retaining their strong popularity. White Oxford styles are likewise in good demand and are being well bought by consumers for sports wear. Collar-attached and to-match models are said to be selling well in both plain and fancy colored effects. In the colored merchandise, blues and tans are favored shades. Orders for Fall are coming in more actively, with collar attached garments doing well. Manufacturers have booked fair advance orders for silk merchandise for the holiday season.

Await Today's Tropical Opening.

Few if any openings of men's wear tropicals occurred in the market here yesterday. Most factors desired to await the showing of these goods by the American Woolen Company which occurs today. It was figured that this company will announce firm to slightly higher prices on the weaves. Interest in the Summer fabrics has been slowly gaining and is expected to reach a maximum during the next week when most of the lines will be opened.

Lines of Children's Socks.

The increase in the number of lines of children's socks has been so marked that one of the distributers who has specialized in this field has arranged sample cards showing twenty-two sets on each card. Whereas formerly one could show single samples in a staple line, he said, it is now much more practicable to place the lines in these groups in order to cover the entire stock of approximately four dozen different lines. The array of colors includes all solid pastel shades in the legs and striped borders in matching colors in the tops. Most are made of a mercerized cotton fabric.

Some Gray Goods Active.

The rise in cotton following the Government's acreage report led to some more activity in the gray goods market here yesterday. Most of this was in the printcloths. Spot 39-inch 68-72s sold at 6¾ cents and the same construction for August-September delivery went at 8¼ cents. Buyers paid 7 15-16 cents for 38½-inch 64-60s and 10¼ cents for 80-square four-yard goods. Southern 38½-inch 40-squares went at 5 cents for August delivery. In sheetings spot 40-inch 2.85s sold at 10¼ cents and 36-inch 4.70s at 7¼ cents. Fall River sateens of 37½-inch 64-88 construction were disposed of at 9¾ cents.

Buyers Here in Numbers.

An increased number of buyers visited the coat trade here yesterday, indicating that activity for Fall is now beginning. The store representatives, however, are giving much attention to sizing up the general situation and to shopping around as well as to comparisons of lines and prices. This is said to be particularly true of the buyers for the smaller stores and specialty shops. Some of the larger stores are credited with having placed a good share of advance business. To date, sports and travel coats have stood out, but the time is rapidly approaching for increased interest in the dressy types of merchandise.

AGREEMENT SOUGHT ON OCEAN AIR MAIL

AMERICA WILL PARTICIPATE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Recent transatlantic flight exploits and the probability of air mail communication between Europe and the United States within a few years promise to present new international postal problems, and these may be discussed in a preliminary way at the meeting of the International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union at The Hague on Sept. 1.

The Postoffice Department today designated W. Irving Glover, Second Assistant Postmaster General, and Eugene R. White, Superintendent of Foreign Mails, to represent the United States at the conference.

Twenty-five or more countries are signatory to the Universal Postal Union and will send delegates. Representatives of airplane companies throughout the world have agreed to attend as experts.

Crossing of Boundaries.

Of immediate concern are the problems arising from flying across national boundaries in Europe and particularly the matter of fitting the various air mail services of the world into the Universal Postal Union. Efforts will be made to bring about uniformity in the subjects of acceptance and treatment of air mail matter in the various countries and in accounting systems.

The Postoffice Department said today that recommendations will be made to the next Postal Union Congress, which meets in London in 1929 for elaborating Article 74 of the Stockholm Convention covering the airmail service.

It is believed that temporary agreements will be reached at The Hague. Transoceanic air mail transportation was not contemplated when the agenda was arranged for The Hague meeting, but it was said today that the subject undoubtedly would receive much attention.

Distribution of Charges.

One of the questions that will have to be considered is the charge for mail sent across the Atlantic by the new method of transportation, and the proper distribution of that charge.

A letter mailed in Rome to a party in San Francisco would have the cost of transportation duly divided internationally according to the boundaries crossed. Whether the charge would be assessed by weight or by distance, or by a combination of the two methods, is a subject for the international delegations to thresh over.

In the United States domestic mail is carried through a combination of these factors, and it has been suggested that a zoning system would probably have to govern in the matter of international mail delivery by air.

Mail carried by Commander Byrd bore the regular air postage across the Atlantic. France courteously permitted this mail to be delivered, but it is said that such a standard could not become fixed in transatlantic mails were carried by air.

The United States would probably let contracts for such service just as it does now for the domestic mail service, but there would have to be an international agreement.

Delegates from 25 Countries.

The International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union, at Berne, Switzerland, has been notified that the following countries will send delegates to its next conference at The Hague:

Algeria, Austria, Denmark, Egypt, Esthonia, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Hungary, Japan, Chosen (Korea) and other Japanese dependencies, Latvia, Morocco (except the Spanish zone), the Netherlands, Norway, Persia, Poland, Portugal, the Sarre Territory, the Soviet Union, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunis and the United States.

Other countries signatory to the union expressed their interest in the independence of the conference but because of the lack of airmail services in their jurisdiction declined to send delegates.

Mexico announced that it was about to set up air mail service among several important cities but has not decided whether to participate in the conference.

The subsidy agreement between the Dutch Government and the Royal Aviation Company, which has approved recently by the Second Chamber of Parliament, will probably be accepted in its present form by the First Chamber within the near future, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Assistant Commercial Attaché Philip E. McKenney at The Hague. The object of the bill is to promote the air services between the Netherlands and other countries.

LATEST DEALINGS IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

TO BUILD 20-STORY OFFICES

Old St. Bartholomew's Church Property and Outlet on Third Avenue Are Involved in the Project.

The purchase of a site in the Grand Central zone for improvement with a tall office building representing an investment of approximately $6,000,000 was announced yesterday. The site is the former property of St. Bartholomew's Church on East Forty-second Street, running through the block to East Forty-third Street. It has been sold by the Schulte Real Estate Company to a syndicate of builders who will erect twenty-story offices.

The property comprises a total area of approximately 30,000 square feet and is 80 feet east of Third Avenue, with a frontage of 175 feet on Forty-second Street and 125 feet on Forty-third Street. It is known as 205 to 217 East Forty-second Street and 204 to 210 East Forty-third Street, between Second and Third Avenues.

The property is improved with four, five and seven-story buildings, which will be demolished, starting Oct. 1. It is planned to have the proposed structure completed in the Fall of 1928.

Additional Plots Acquired.

The Schulte Real Estate Company also transferred to the building syndicate the property at 677 Third Avenue and a lease on the property at 202 East Forty-third Street, both of which will be used to protect the light of the proposed building, and as an outlet to Third Avenue in anticipation of the removal of the elevated structure.

The property is just a block from the Lexington Avenue subway and the Grand Central Station. One block to the east is the Tudor City development of the Fred F. French Company.

The syndicate planning improvement of the property was organized by Leonard S. Gans Company, Inc., who was the broker in the sale of the plottage. Mr. Gans said that the syndicate is one of the strongest ever brought together for a building operation in Manhattan. The syndicate consists of the Schulte Company, which has taken back a large participation, and two other companies whose names are not announced.

Contract for Project Awarded.

The Rheinstein Construction Company has received the contract for the construction of the office project. Starrett & Van Vleck, architects, are to prepare the plans. Commenting on the transaction and its importance to the Grand Central zone, Mr. Gans said:

"Consideration has been given to many innovations in connection with the design of this building. Among these is the use of the basement of the building as a terminal bus station to serve the Grand Central section. This seems to be an ideal location for a terminal from the standpoint of accessibility. Several large organizations at present located downtown who knew of the proposed building operation are already negotiating for upstairs space."

The present buildings on the site were formerly used as a parish house, chapel and clinic by St. Bartholomew's.

REPUBLICANS MAP CAMPAIGN TODAY

Executive Committee Member Favors Hands-Off Policy on 4-Year Term for Governor.

ATTACKS SMITH'S ATTITUDE

Meeting Likely to Order a Call for State Committee Late This Month.

On the eve of the meeting today, and the third in as many months, of the Executive Committee of the State Committee at the National Republican Club, it was said yesterday that Chairman George K. Morris of the State Committee probably would be directed to call a meeting of that body for the last week of this month.

The State Committee meeting will be held to decide definitely on a time and place for holding a Republican State convention this Autumn to nominate a candidate for Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals and to issue the formal call for such a gathering.

Other matters to be discussed by the Executive Committee are the Assembly campaigns this Fall and a program for the campaign relating to the Constitutional amendment lengthening to four years the Governor's term.

It was said yesterday by one member of the Executive Committee that he would suggest at today's conference that the Republicans maintain a hands-off policy on the ground that if the proposed amendment should be defeated and the status quo maintained the Republicans would not be any worse off than they are now, with Governors elected every two years, once in every four, when a President is elected and their party has a decided advantage.

"The Governor has been contending for four-year terms as a substantial reform," the member said. "If he is willing to sacrifice the substance because of Republican opposition to hold the Gubernatorial elections in a year when the Republican vote up-State cannot be coaxed to the polls, it should be very evident that he is actuated by no loftier purpose than to give a political advantage to his own party.

"There is nothing to the contention that with national issues intervening in a Presidential year the voters do not know how to draw a distinction between the candidates on the national ticket and the State ticket. They are voted for on separate ballots and our experience in the last Presidential election when Coolidge won by a majority of almost a million while Governor Smith was re-elected to his present office on the Democratic ticket proves the fallacy of that contention."

Bureau Chides Democrats.

The man presiding over the Republican Bureau of Statistical Research took as his text yesterday a recent court order reinstating as special investigators for the State Tax Commission two Republicans, removed to make place for two Democrats who had turned their backs on the occupation of bartender and that of piano tuner. On the strength of it he issued a statement which said in part:

"Surely these gentlemen would bring rare gifts of melody and dexterity to any employment in the State's service. Yet the courts apparently differ from these popular suppositions in the case of William F. Haits and Simon May, ex-Republican investigators for the State Tax Commission, removed by Tammany to make room for sterling Democrats following the callings under discussion.

"Furthermore, an unappreciative Kings County jury, perhaps thirstless and probably stone deaf, has decided that civil service rules have been thus infracted and has ordered reinstatement of the Republicans, while an adamant Judge recently has issued a contempt of court order against the Tammany head of the Tax Commission for failure to comply with past legal rulings.

"Undoubtedly it will be found, upon review, that Tammany's piano tuner and bartender possess some other and transcendent merit, which will advance and render of a higher order the business of the Tax Commission. Hence their non-partisan appointment."

ATTACKS REPUBLICANS ON PROHIBITION

Democratic Chairman Says Jersey Leaders Back of Referendum Plank Seek to Dodge Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., July 11.—Republican leaders sponsoring the plank in the party's platform for a referendum on the prohibition question were charged today by Democratic State Chairman Harry Heher of Trenton with seeking to evade the issue. Submission of the proposed question to the voters will only be a waste of time, he said.

The "so-called Prohibition referendum plank in the Republican platform lacks the qualities claimed for it," he said. "Namely, that it will afford the voters of the State an opportunity to express their views on this important public question. The amendment adopted by the convention concerning State action within the limit fixed by Congress nullified the purpose of the plank as originally drafted and makes impossible an effectual expression of public opinion.

"The question to be propounded is whether the Volstead act, which fixes the alcoholic content at less than one-half of one per cent., and thereby makes traffic in non-intoxicating as well as intoxicating beverages unlawful, shall be amended to remove the prohibition against traffic in beverages not in fact intoxicating as determined by the laws of the respective States, within the limit fixed by Congress.

"The amendment of this resolution on the floor of the convention affords convincing evidence that the proposal also lacks the virtue of sincerity. Obviously the declaration was intended to bring within the fold the large liberal vote that has contributed to the election of successive Democratic Governors. Time has demonstrated the futility of this strategy.

"The submission of the question in this form will result in a waste of time. The proposal is offered in the hope that it will enable the Republican Party managers to evade the issue. The people will now be told that the referendum will take the question out of politics. To say that it will have this effect is absurd."

TAMMANY WARNED OF REVOLT IN HARLEM

Leader Asserts 'Persecution' of Negro Democrats May Cause Widespread Desertions.

A revolt against Tammany Hall and the Walker Administration is brewing among negro Democrats in Harlem. William Banks, President and organizer of the Golden Democratic Club at 107 West 137th Street, in the Nineteenth Assembly District, said yesterday that his organization had been persecuted by the police and that most of the club members were on the verge of returning to the Republican fold.

The members of the club, for the most part, are former Republicans who turned while John F. Hylan was Mayor. Mr. Hylan during his two campaigns made a special appeal to the negro voters, and after his victories in 1917 and 1921 gave them recognition in the form of patronage. According to Mr. Banks, the club members swear by Hylan and Charles F. Murphy, the late leader of Tammany Hall, but at present are very cool toward Mayor Walker and George W. Olvany, who succeeded Mr. Murphy as Tammany leader.

The trouble began some three weeks ago, when the police descended on the club, arrested one employe and locked him up on a charge of maintaining a gambling house. When they departed a uniformed policeman was placed on guard in the clubhouse. He has remained there ever since, much to the annoyance of the members.

The case will come up for trial before City Magistrate McQuade on July 22. Mr. Banks said yesterday that the raid was without justification and that unless the policeman now on guard was withdrawn and the club given a clean bill of health, every Democratic picture in the clubhouse "will come down and stay down for good."
